. . . And Then He Danced All Night . . .

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, who spent a busy day answering Opposition questions in the House of Commons and speaking to university students in Kingston, Ont., still had enough energy left Friday night to make an appearance at a ball in Montreal in white tie and tails.

Mr. Trudeau arrived at the downtown Chateau Champlain Hotel twirling a white carnation in his right hand and chatted briefly in the hotel foyer with a group of admiring young girls who had been awaiting his arrival while debutantes were being presented upstairs to Governor-General and Mrs. Michener.

The prime minister then joined those attending the Bal des Petits Souliers and was seen in the company of a young woman whose identity is not yet known.

Earlier in the evening, he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Queen's University in Kingston and later engaged in an hour-long question-and-answer period with some 1,500 students in a "bear pit" confrontation at Grant Hall.

Mr. Trudeau is to address a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel Sunday night. The dinner is being planned by the Quebec chapter of the Canadian Liberal Federation.

Midwestern U.S. Rocked by Quake

Slight Damage Reported

By The Associated Press

An earthquake struck a broad area of the United States today, rolling across the Midwest and South, rocking millions of persons and countless buildings. There were no immediate reports of casualties or major damage.

The National Earthquake Centre in Washington placed the centre of the quake near New Madrid, Mo.—the heart of a disastrous tremor in 1811. The fault follows the path of the Mississippi River valley.

First reports put the earthquake at 5.5 on the Richter scale, just under the usual damage point of 6. The 1811 quake was measured at about 8 on the scale.

A mild tremor was felt in several parts of Toronto and Hamilton at the same time the shocks were noted in the U.S. No damage was reported.

The tremor was felt in Arkansas, Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, Georgia, Kentucky, West Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, Alabama, and Wisconsin, early reports said.

Paris Talk Opening Predicted

PARIS (AP) — Hanoi's rejection of a new peace talks formula proposed by South Vietnam posed more problems for the United States, but one neutral Western diplomat today predicted a breakthrough in "a matter of days."

The tangle centres around how President Nguyen Van Thieu's Saigon government and its guerrilla enemy, the Viet Cong, will be represented.

Thieu insists he will not join talks where the National Liberation Front, the Viet Cong's political arm, has an independent staus.

He proposed Friday that there be just two sides to the talks, the anti-Communist allied side, led by Saigon, and a Communist delegation headed by Hanoi with the Viet Cong playing a subsidiary role.

In Saigon, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met with Thieu today for the first time since Oct. 31 when President Johnson announced the bombing halt, the U.S. embassy announced.

Informed sources said the meeting was a continuation of Washington's efforts to get Thieu to join the talks with the NLF.

Earlier, in Paris, as members of the U.S. delegation consulted with Washington and the American embassy in South Vietnam, Xuan Thuy, Hanoi's chief negotiator, rejected Thieu's plan.

U.K.-RHODESIAN GAP NARROWED BY TALKS

SALISBURY (Reuters) — British envoy George Thomson said today Britain and Rhodesia have narrowed the gap dividing them over the breakaway colony's seizure of independence.

But the gap was still a deep one, he told a news conference before leaving the Rhodesian capital to confer with African Commonwealth leaders on his talks here with Premier Ian Smith.

Earlier, a surprise joint announcement said the Thomson-Smith talks would be resumed in Salisbury next week after Thomson visited the African leaders.

Document Check Tightly Guarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tight security is in effect today at an army hut where a team of investigators next week will start sifting through the records of the troubled Commonwealth group of companies.

Five companies for which Commonwealth Trust Co. acts as fiscal agent had assets frozen by court order Wednesday and records of another 30 related firms have been seized by police.

The documents are piled in the hut awaiting the start of checks by a 10-man team of RCMP commercial fraud investigators and a specially-recruited team of chartered accountants.

Team members will not be allowed to enter the Jericho military compound until they have been checked by RCMP. The investigation was ordered by the British Columbia attorney-general's department.

It's not known how long the document check will take and A. D. Peter Stanley, court-appointed receiver for the companies, said he does not know what the investigation will uncover. See story Page 7.

Time-Bomb Problems Tick in Canada: PM

(Special to the Times)

KINGSTON, Ont. — The chance of a new American civil war overflowing into Canada is a bigger menace than happenings over the Berlin Wall.

He said Canada has the same time-bomb problems ticking in its society — the underprivileged and the discriminated against — as in the U.S.

"I personally happen to believe these sources of disturbance are areas which we should fear and seek to correct with as great urgency as perhaps anything that is happening in Europe," he stated.

And the prime minister told a jam-packed audience in a question-and-answer session — "in my scale of values, I am perhaps less worried now about what might happen over the Berlin Wall and what might happen in Chicago, New York and perhaps in our own big cities in Canada."

Trudeau passed up making a speech in favor of the question confrontation with the students while here to receive an honorary degree.

It was his first such session at a university since the election-part of his campaign for direct communication and feedback from the people.

Standing Ovation

He and his party were ready for anything, but he encountered no demonstrators and got a standing ovation from the young audience.

Surprisingly, there were no questions about Biafra or Vietnam — all in the hour-long exchange were directly Canadian oriented.

They ranged from bilingualism to taxation — and the prime minister gave a hint that there could be a form of capital gains tax in next spring's tax-reform measures.

Yarrows Response 'Pleasant Surprise'

A Community Chest official said Friday Yarrows Ltd. employees have donated more than $3,900 to the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal drive, and more donations are expected from the company.

"This has to be one of the most pleasant surprises of the campaign," said Bill Patton of the Chest office. "Considering the shortage of work at Yarrows this year, the employee response to the appeal is great."

He added that heavy returns from the residential division canvass gave the campaign a big boost this week.

The residential division, which is expected to account for $128,000 of the United Appeal's $655,000 objective, has collected $88,082 of its goal.

A total of $453,166, or 69.2 per cent of the goal, has now been raised and appeal officials hope the target will be reached "within two or three weeks."

Nixon Plots Bigger Role For Running Mate Agnew

Times News Service

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — President-elect Richard M. Nixon, with a fresh promise of help from Hubert H. Humphrey, started meetings with his running mate today to plot the course of the United States for the next four years.

Following a morning meeting with vice-president-elect Spiro T. Agnew, Nixon announced a materially expanded role in government for his running mate.

Nixon announced the beefing up of the vice-presidential role at a news conference here after he and Agnew had spent about 90 minutes in a breakfast meeting.

The Maryland governor will represent the president-elect at the Dec. 3 Republican governor's conference in Palm Springs, Calif. Nixon said he then planned to appear before the governors on the last day of the meeting, expected to be Dec. 5.

Nixon did not go into detail about how he intends to expand the vice-presidency, but he said it would involve "new duties beyond what any vice-president has ever assumed."

Nixon greeted Humphrey in what, to many of those present, represented an emotional reunion between two campaign opponents now determined to hide their respective hurts and joys in the interests of proclaiming national unity.

Referring to Nixon, Humphrey said: "He's going to be our president, and I'm going to be one of his fellow citizens. And I'm going to want his presidency to be an effective presidency because as he succeeds, we all succeed."

The president-elect said that in the next four years he will want to call upon Humphrey "for his counsel and his assistance, particularly in matters of foreign policy."

. . . TIME BOMB

His views on the continental problem came out when he was asked about Richard Nixon's win in the presidential election, and the president-elect's stated intention to increase America's military capacity.

Trudeau was asked if he thought this would have any relationship to Canada's defence policy and NATO.

Under Review

The prime minister said defence and external policies currently are under review, and he could not predict the outcome.

But he stated — "I happen to believe that in a very real sense the civilization and culture of North America are more menaced, more strongly menaced, more strongly threatened by internal disorder than by external pressure."

Trudeau said he felt that the disorders in the great cities of the U.S., created by urbanization, racial strife and other problems, might lead to large rebellions.

"I believe that if in the next half-dozen years or so there were to be great riots, beginnings of a civil war in the U.S., I am quite certain they would overflow the borders," Trudeau stated.

He said they might link up with the underprivileged Mexican and underprivileged Canadian.

"It might be the peons south of America's borders, but in Canada it might be Indians, might be Metis, it might be a lot of underprivileged in Canada," he stated.

Urgency Needed

Trudeau referred to the urgency of dealing with the ills of society.

The prime minister said he was concerned that the Canadian government through its policies, and through any influence it might have on its friends and allies in and out of NATO, get people to understand this view.

He said that we are not so much threatened by the ideologies of communism or fascism, or by A-bombs or inter-continental missiles, as by the large part of the world that goes to bed hungry every night, and by the large part of Canadian society that feels unfulfilled in life.

The prime minister said this was the background ot the defence and external review now underway.

Overflow Crowd

Trudeau drew an overflow crowd to Grant Hall on the campus — shouts of "We want in" could be heard during his session—where earlier in the day he received his honorary degree along with eight others.

The convocation was for the installation of Dr. John Deutsch as principal of Queen's.

Trudeau also told the students that the current ministerial mission to Latin-America is to correct an over emphasis by Canada in relations to Europe and Europe alone.

He said it should be remembered that Canada is also a Pacific nation with links with South America and Asia.

The prime minister added that following the Second that following the Second World War, there had been a Canadian attempt to be all things to all men.

This led to helping with peace-keeping operations in the four corners of the earth and to assisting with poverty and starvation everywhere.

There had been a "realization that perhaps our resources are not as big as our hearts," Trudeau added.

He told the audience that there was an attempt being made to orient our foreign policies over areas where we can have some effect.

Poverty Apalling

Trudeau said poverty in South America is appalling, and that the continent had a time-bomb in its hands that Canadians must become aware of.

The prime minister recently has been stressing more attention to continentalism, and while Canada is willing to play a part in world peace-keeping, it must be on a multilateral basis involving more of the UN members.

Trudeau, replying to a question about why Canada has not entered the Organization of American States, said nothing would be done until the policy review has been studied.

He questioned joining "if it means we are just going to be a replica of Washington."

Will Be More

When Trudeau was questioned about why his government had not brought in a capital gains tax, he pointed to new moves in last month's budget affecting insurance companies and banks bringing them under taxation in some fields.

The audience laughed when he told the questioner — "Don't give up," and Trudeau also told him later — "Don't despair, there will be more."

Trudeau also told the audience that he thought the Company of Young Canadians — much criticized, and praticularly in recent days for some of its spending — was a valid idea.

They laughed when he said the government hopes to instil new vigor and control in the CYC, and he referred to control "in at least a financial sense."

In St. Louis, the tremor was recorded at 12:05 p.m. EST.

Police in St. Louis said at first they had unconfirmed reports that two buildings had collapsed in that city, but found only minor damage on investigation.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the tremor lasted about 30 seconds. It said some utility lines were down in St. Louis County.

Large buildings in St. Louis swayed for about 10 seconds, residents said.

Floors and plate-glass windows shook and swayed in Tennessee. In Union City, where residents rushed into the streets from shops, the tremor lasted three minutes.

Union City is near Reelfoot Lake—formed by an earthquake during the winter of 1811-1812. The 1811 quake at New Madrid, Mo., one of the heaviest felt on the North American continent, changed the course of the Mississippi River.

The Weston Observatory at Weston, Mass., described the tremor as relatively strong, but said no immediate estimate could be made of its force on the 10-point Richter scale.

There were reports that residents of some Indiana cities and towns rushed into the streets when their homes began shaking. Sidewalks were reported cracked in Terre Haute and bricks were said to have been jarred from chimneys in Princeton.

INSIDE CITY HALL

'Spray' of Dollars From Park Roof

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

For those who worry about such things, Royal Athletic Park will re-open for sports activities next March. At least that's what everybody hopes.

No need to recount here the epic struggle to save the original turf laid to form the playing field, a struggle ending in bulldozers and turf removers and the eventual sowing of new grass.

Hume

Suffice it to say that apart from a few yellowing patches — nitrogen deficiency they say and not serious — the new green stuff is growing well and looking lovely.

Yes, March does seem a long way off, but better to wait until the turf can be belted without harm rather than do a repeat on the too-early start 18 months ago.

Not that all the problems at the park have yet been solved.

A perceptible shudder went through Committee Room No. 1 on Thursday as members of the recreation and community services committee scanned the agenda.

Item Three read: "A report from Mr. (Jack) Morgan, through the municipal manager, re: modifications to the baseball grandstand at Royal Athletic Park."

Ald. Cecil Parrott paled, swallowed hard and got set to repeat his plaintive "when will all this end" cry. Possibly he should have complained, anyway, although the damage wasn't too bad this time.

Seems the electrical heating system in the board room and various other enclosed areas isn't working as well as it should. The bills are high, too high for comfort.

Mr. Morgan outlined the need for more insulation in certain spots, tighter sealing on a couple of doors and the installation of a clock control to cut the heat down when the building isn't in use.

Total cost $350. A small enough item it's true, but still another cost item on a brand new, hardly ever used park.

It will not be the last.

Those of you who visited Royal Athletic during its brief new life in 1967 will remember the fantastic drainage system at the back of the grandstand.

Beautifully designed chains hang from the roof like Spanish moss. Ostensibly they carry rainwater from the roof to enclosed rock piles and from there to storm drains.

But that's only when it isn't windy. Get the slighest breeze, the chains wobble in tune with velocity and the rainwater sprays off hitting just about everything but the piles of rock.

Eventually the chains will have to come down to be replaced by something less aesthetic but far more practical. Like how about the simple but effective down-pipe?

Quite a flutter among the pigeons this week regarding demolition of the Crystal.

Funny that it took the opposition so long to flush a couple of protesters out of the weeds because, as readers will recall, it's close to two years ago that the dear old glass-domed lady was condemned.

So be it, however, for even at this late date protest can be good for the soul.

All that can be asked before the community goes on an emotional binge is that all the facts be considered.

Available for easy indexed reading at city hall is the full report of the engineering team hired to examine the Crystal and tell the city two things: Could it be renovated and if so how much would the renovations cost?

The structural engineers and architects who worked on that survey answered the double-barrelled terms of reference and added a rider clause: the Crystal is in extremely dangerous condition and the practical answer, in fact the only permanent answer is to tear it down.

And they added that even if the city decided to go the renovation route to make the roof safe (the Crystal with a shingle roof!) and to replace dressing rooms, pipes and electical wiring, the community would still own a very old building with just a new face.

Basically the engineers said "spend half to three-quarters of a million dollars and you can keep the Crystal in shape for a few more years. But you have a crumbling building and, however much you spend on it, you will have a crumbling building when you're finished."

★ ★ ★

They refuse to acknowledge, for example, that the pool itself is sinking and that whatever you do with the roof and wall there is no way of jacking the pool back up on an even keel.

You don't believe that? Next time you're at the Crystal swim the length of the pool keeping your eye on the drainage gutters. At one end you will notice that there's a permanent gurgle of water down the trough, a gurgle that should not be there.

It's sad, but the Crystal has to go.

Just as the Queen Mary, the Queen Elizabeth and good old London Bridge also had to go. Mortality, unfortunately, applies to buildings as well as people.

SEOUL (Reuters) — North Korean patrol boats seized 10 South Korean fishing vessels with 72 crew members Friday south of the sea extension of the North-South border off the east coast of Korea, police said today.

FUND GIVEN $88,000 BOOST

The residential division of the United Red Feather-Red Cross appeal took a $40,000 jump in the last week, bringing its total collections to $88,082 by Friday.

The total campaign collections now stand at $453,166, or 69.2 per cent of the $655,000 objective.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A disturbance tracking eastward through the northern U.S. dropped rain and snow in the interior Friday night and this morning. The precipitation will move east of the Rockies by noon today. Behind it a ridge of high pressure is building into western British Columbia and will provide sunny skies in most regions today. However, another disturbance far to the southwest gives evidence of developing into a fairly vigorous storm. Rain and gales from this system are expected to hit the coast tonight and Sunday morning. Occasional rain or snow will drop on the interior as it continues eastward on Sunday. Cloudy skies and a few showers will follow the distrubance on the coast Sunday afternoon.

DOMINION PUBLIC WEATHER OFFICE 9 A.M. FORECASTS

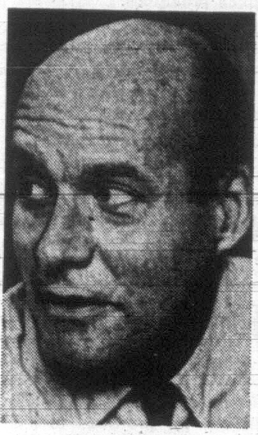
Wheat Outlook Termed Grave

SASKATOON (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday the threat to Canada's international wheat market is also a serious threat to the country's entire economy.

FOWLER



KATZENBACH

Resignations of U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and State undersecretary Nicholas Katzenbach were announced by the White House Friday. They were the first of an expected series of resignations of the outgoing Johnson administration. Both men expect to return to private life.

In an address to the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative party, Mr. Stanfield said Canada's economy already afces serious problems and that the loss of wheat markets in this context would be grave.

"Now we are in a position where the wheat agreement with China is about to expire."

Mr. Stanfield said representatives of the Canadian wheat board are in China, but it is impossible to obtain from the government any indication of a new agreement.

"Russia has an option to buy 120 million bushels of wheat, but again there is no evidence that the government thinks any extraordinary effort is necessary."

'EFFORTS ARE LATE'

Mr. Stanfield said that although Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin is visiting Latin America, efforts should have been made long ago to have him visit China and Russia to try and stimulate more wheat sales.

He said he had recently raised questions in Parliament regarding the effort to move and market Canadian wheat.

"There is an effort to hide behind an alleged shortage of boxcars. There is an attempt to maintain a measured pace by working the dryers a five-day week.

"But the real problem is with the markets and while no one will pretend the world situation is easy for Canada, or that solutions are simple, I am not at all convinced that the government has felt under any real compulsion to make any extra effort, or to make the effort early enough and at cabinet level, to try to improve the present market situation for Canada."

CAUSED HEAVY DRAIN

He said four years of inflation had caused a heavy drain on the country's economy and pockets of the people. Runaway inflation was one of the factors contributing to the uncertainty and pessimism in western agriculture, he said.

The government had passed legislation in the current session to make more money available to farmers, but the inflationary factor had brought about an increase in the interest rate on farm improvement loans of nearly three per cent.

Making more money available would be much more helpful if the farmer could be given reason for confidence that his produce would be sold, Mr. Stanfield said.

"The reduction in Canada's share of international wheat markets, the fact that Canadian wheat producers were left unprotected by an international agreement for a year, and the stiff penalties exacted by inflation have all worked against the Prairie economy and the national economy."

TELESCOPE A MISTAKE SAYS PIERRE

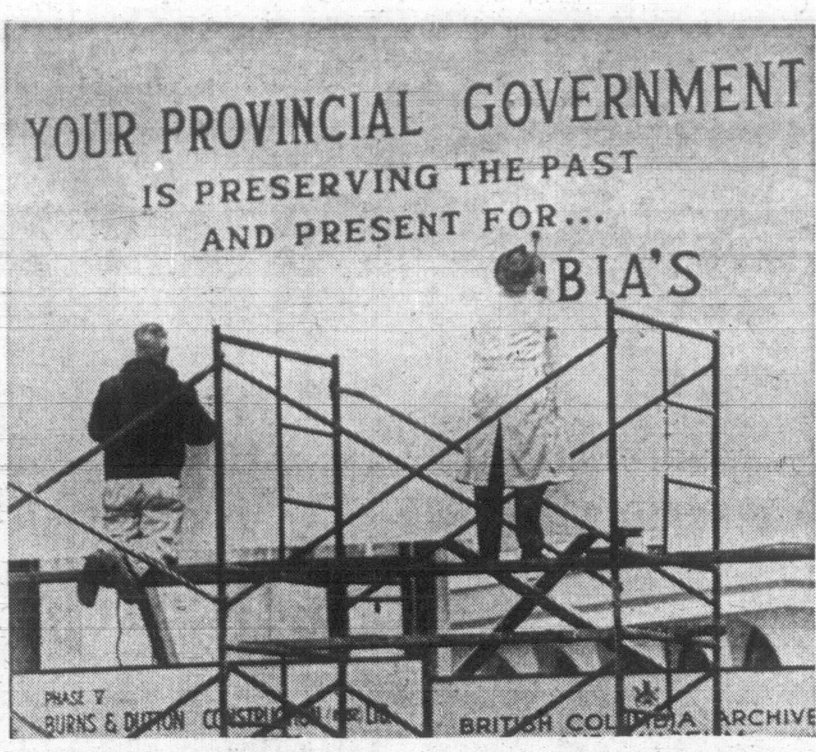
(Special to the Times)

KINGSTON, Ont. — The decision to build the Queen Elizabeth telescope was a mistake, Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday night.

He said it was a mistake because of Canada's financial resources and its other spending priorities.

Trudeau was asked about the telescope when he attended a question-and-answer session before some 1,500 students at Queen's University.

The government this fall cancelled plans for the giant telescope that was to be mounted on a mountain peak near Penticton. Some astronomers and scientists have been highly critical of the decision.



YOUR provincial government's bias is showing. And it takes an honest government to admit it is preserving the past and present for bias. Actually, when the sign in front of the provincial museum was completed Friday, it modestly proclaimed that the past and present were being preserved for "British Columbia's Great Future." The bias didn't disappear, did it?

Government Derided For Wasteful Studies

OTTAWA (CP) — Complaints about economic policies are piling up from representatives of East, West and Central Canada —and from both sides of the House of Commons—as debate on the Oct. 22 budget nears completion.

A Newfoundland MP complained about human neglect and public debt in Friday's round of the debate, scheduled to wind up Tuesday after adjournment for Remembrance Day Monday.

An Albertan fumed about oil-trade policy, a Quebecer sought protection for textiles, a British Columbian complained about inefficiency and an Ontario MP knocked welfare programs.

Newfoundlander Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe) threw a catalogue of alleged failures at the government, most of them accusations that the government is toying with long-range inquiries instead of tackling obvious human problems.

Government members "are not going to overcome neglect, regional disparity, unemployment or the lack of housing by attacking these problems with task forces or by over-staffing their offices with research experts, psychologists or sociologists, by computers or by looking at maps or reading statistics."

Firing a double-barrelled blast simultaneously at both the federal and Newfoundland Liberal governments, the Conservative freshman said housing and educational problems in his province cannot be solved by talking to "the very people who caused the problems — the provincial government."

The government is wasting time and money on research and royal commissions which "only tell them in the end what they knew when they started—that there is a problem — and nine times out of 10 they disregard the report anyway."

Mr. Marshall, in his maiden Commons speech, said the economic council concluded after five annual reviews, 32 staff studies, seven papers and nine other reports that "poverty is real—what a stroke of genius."

He derided the royal commission on the status of women as a waste of thousands of dollars "when everyone in the country knows that any woman can become anything a man can aspire to become."

"They are making a mess of their own country and here they go looking for trouble in other countries. . . .

"I say to them in all sincerity, let us clean out our own backyard before we go trying to solve someone else's problems."

WOULD SHAME CABINET

Mr. Marshall said he would take the cabinet on a trip to Newfoundland which "will make them hang their heads in shame," with families of up to a dozen living in two pest-infested rooms.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) said years of inefficiency led to what he called the government's present financial mess.

He cited a new Vancouver airport terminal built without improved highway access so that now a new road would have to be built at twice the cost it would have been originally.

LEADERSHIP of the New Democratic Party next year will be contested by Teddy Culp, 27, of Toronto, according to an announcement Friday. He is a former Cochrane, Ont. high school teacher. (CP Wirephoto.)

Tories Capture U.K. Byelection

Patrick McNair Wilson, 39-year-old business executive, polled 28,025 votes for the Conservatives against 8,430 for Liberal Nicholas Locock and 5,836 for Labor's Alan Reynard.

The Tories increased their share of the vote to 66.3 per cent compared with 51.2 per cent in the 1966 general election. The Liberals took 19.9 per cent against 22.1 per cent in 1966. Labor's share was down to 13.8 per cent compared with 26.7 per cent.

Veterans to Climax Emotional Pilgrimage

By CAROL KENNEDY

LILLE, France (CP) — Canadian veterans of the First World War set off today on the last leg of their two-week pilgrimage into the past which will reach an emotional climax Monday with ceremonies commemorating the armistice Nov. 11, 1918.

These will take place in the Belgian city of Mons, captured by the Canadian Corps in the last action of the war.

About 30 of the 97 veterans—who include Victoria Cross winners Brig. Milton Gregg and Pte. Thomas Dinesen—leave this northern French city today for Mons.

The remainder head for Paris where President de Gaulle is to attend a special mass in Notre Dame Cathedral Nov. 11 and a parade.

The bells of all Paris will ring out at 11 a.m. to mark the hour of the armistice.

On Sunday, a French military group will carry a flame, lit from the eternal flame under the Arc de Triomphe, through the hallowed French battle grounds of Verdun, the Marne and the Somme to Vimy Ridge, scene of a great Canadian victory in 1917.

A small Canadian party will kindle a flame from it in front of the massive Canadian memorial straddling the ridge.

"They're doing this in homage to the Canadians," said E. A. Cote, deputy minister of veterans affairs, recalling that in 1918 the king of the Belgians said Canada was unsurpassed in all the armies of the world.

The Canadian group will then participate in a similar flame ceremony at the French national memorial at Notre Dame de Lorette, placing five wreaths.

During the last week, the old warriors—average age 75, with the oldest 90—have visited two battle memorials a day in northern France and Flanders, remembering old comrades and re-fighting old battles.

"It's been a week charged with emotion," said Cote in an interview.

In chilly rain, which has turned the Flanders earth to mud as it did 50 years ago, they have plodded through the preserved trenches and tunnels of Vimy, paid silent homage to Canadians who withstood the world's first gas attack at St. Julien, and filed past the grave of Col. John McCrae, the Canadian army doctor who wrote In Flanders Fields.

Five Canadian school girls from the nearby SHAPE headquarters recited the famous lines and the veterans dropped poppies on the grave.

ACCUSATIONS ERUPT AT HOUSING HEARING

By PETER KIERNAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Accusations and insults flew Friday as the final British Columbia session of the federal task force on housing drew to a close.

Its chairman, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, had departed for Ottawa earlier in the day and acting chairman Dr. Pierre Dansereau, a soft-spoken ecologist from University of Montreal, piloted the session through the furor.

The trouble erupted when Bruce Yorke, secretary of the Vancouver Tenants Organization Committee, described as "scandalous" the earlier presentation of a United Appeal Housing Committee brief by Arthur Block, president of Block Bros. realty firm.

The brief presented by Mr. Block, chairman of the housing committee, stated that since 1954 an average of only 3.4 per cent of federal funds for mortgages has gone to low income groups.

Mr. Yorke termed the presentation "scandalous" because Mr. Block, as a large real estate developer, was representing low income families.

'BLOCK STOCK CLIMBS'

No wonder the stock of Block Bros. had climbed from $3.50 to about $20 on the Vancouver Stock Exchange, Mr. Yorke said. "We are paying for the situation."

Mr. Yorke urged protection of tenants rights under the law, and pointed out that studies have indicated 41 per cent of the total population of Canada will be living in apartments by 1980.

Commission member Roger Campeau, who controls 3,500 apartment buildings through his Ottawa-based Campeau Developments, asked Mr. Yorke if he would consider fixed rents on a long-term lease. Mr. Yorke said that would be "a matter for negotiation."

The commission sits in Fredericton Tuesday.

Later in the hearing Friday night, Bob Reed, presented a brief for the Vancouver Consumers' Association, demanded to know where Mr. Hellyer was.

USES 'PRIVATE' PLANE

Mr. Hellyer had "taken off in his $2 million private plane" and was ignoring British Columbia, he said.

Dr. Dansereau rebuked Mr. Reed, saying that the commission and its chairman were not to be insulted.

The task force heard eight briefs at the evening session, including one from a firm of architects which suggested formation of some federal urban development body.

Ian J. Davidson said what was envisioned was a "think tank," a sort of urban renewal college that would represent a cross-section of experts and have the power to implement its recommendations.

Another brief, presented by Three Coins Development, won compliments from both Mr. Campeau and W. Peter Carter of Montreal.

The scheme, now under way in Comox, on Vancouver Island, allows homes to be purchased for $15,750 on lots which the purchaser leases from Three Coins.

"This is better than land banks," said Mr. Campeau, comparing the project to Ontario's Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan.

Extradition Refused

The Testing Time

CANADA IS ENTERING UPON a period of guts-deep change—a period which was invited, as well as prepared for, by the country's unequivocal election of Mr. Trudeau to lead it. In the renewed struggle of central government versus provincial authorities we should remember a few basic concepts, and first among these is that we are a nation—Canadians joined together under one sovereignty determined to work out a system and a future which will prove of advantage to us all.

On this basis, the federal government and the provincial governments are only departments of administration established on different levels to perform the fundamental function of directing our country along the most beneficial lines. This should not be a matter of competition but of co-operation, not an internecine battle but a joining together of local, provincial and federal elected authorities to achieve the best results for Canada and Canadians.

Too many provincial premiers appear not to recognize this fundamental fact; they conceive their purpose as one of fighting Ottawa for provincial aggrandizement—as though every dollar won from the national exchequer were in some way a gain for the residents of a province. What they forget, or ignore, is that every resident of a province is a Canadian, and that the tax dollar the province "wins" from Ottawa is from the pockets of the so-called provincial beneficiaries.

Clearly, Canada has reached a point of decision. The forthcoming constitutional debate between federal and provincial spokesmen should clarify the functions and responsibilities of every level of government.

In welfare, the aim of the central authority has been to ensure that the general level of wellbeing in Canada should be more or less uniform throughout the nation. Canadians agree that there should be no pockets of depression in our land, where education or health or basic living conditions can be substantially lower than in the more economically favored parts. This indicates the need of a federal voice and influence in the fields of education, welfare and health.

But under the BNA Act these fields come under the jurisdiction of the provinces. Effecting the obvious compromise on this question should not become a matter of petty parochial controversy or the egotistical opportunism of provincial leaders; it should be a matter of determining the best solution for the Canadians who inhabit both the provinces and the dominion—who are the same people existing under two mutually viable forms of elected government.

The solution will entail the employment of the tax dollar in the most economical manner possible, the allocation of responsibility and administration to that govermental level—or combination of them—which is shown to be most operable and efficient. Is this too great a decision for the men and women we have elected to handle our affairs? Is the personal ambition or the area-bound outlook of politicians, raising false loyalties and obsolete political adherences, to be permitted to hamper and perhaps destroy the implementation of the best possible system?

We must assume that our elected citizens at all levels of government are working in the best interests of Canadians, for that is what Canadians want. Now let those elected representatives show that they are not living in the past—that they are alive to the demands of the almost totally new world which their constituents have entered, even if they have not.

Changes at the Top

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE INtended resignation of Opposition Leader Robert Strachan adds further emphasis to the accent on youth that is becoming a dominant factor in the political life of the country. Although at 55 Bob Strachan can hardly be considered elderly, his long service to the New Democratic Party and his 12 years as provincial leader have placed him in the category of veteran. Political groups throughout Canada are now casting about for young blood to lead them through the unavoidable break with the past and into the new Trudeau-type environment that is now the accepted norm. There is growing intra-party criticism of such well established figures as Premier Bennett and Mr. Tommy Douglas, on the grounds of age and a too close identity with the past that is damaging to a party in our new political climate. Some parties have already made the break, and are directing their effort to youth, not only as a means of tying the party in with the new century of Confederation but also of appealing to the public with a personality image which it will readily accept.

Mr. Strachan may be considered a victim of this new trend. As a long and faithful CCF and NDP worker he perhaps deserved better, for he has been denied the fruits of his labor. It is not likely, however, despite his prediction, that his successor will become premier by next spring, nor would Mr. Strachan had he stayed on. But sixteen years in the opposition benches, a dozen of them as leader, is a gruelling experience for any man.

The career critic, deprived of the fulfilment of power and policy-making, can point only to his success in holding the party together, marshalling his forces for the great day which never comes. So much Bob Strachan certainly can claim, and he will relinquish his leadership with a wide public recognition of his many high personal qualities. As is so often said of a "good" socialist—he should have been a Liberal.

'We Will Remember Them'

ON MONDAY, 50 years after the guns fell silent on the Western Front, the thinned ranks of veterans of the First World War will march to services honoring those of their comrades who did not come back. They will be joined by a younger generation of veterans similarly paying the tribute of remembrance to those who fought beside them and fell in the Second World War and in Korea.

Once more ceremonies are being conducted in a world which has yet to attain the ideal of honorable peace for which young lives were sacrificed in tragic measure. The services on Monday will again offer reverence to the ideal, no less shining because it has yet to be attained, and to an upwelling of affection for those who shared it and "who grow not old as those who are left grow old." The sacrifice; the comradeship of joint and courageous effort, of elation and misery, of triumph and disaster, are honored once more by those who march and those who observe the brief silence of the day.

The pledge is renewed: "We will remember them."

Canadian Control Of Broadcasting

London Free Press

One of the traditional justifications for a Canadian broadcasting system — which is supposed to include both the CBC and private stations — is to protect Canadian listeners against domination by outside boadcasters, particularly those from the neighboring republic.

Specific instructions were included in the new Broadcasting Act and these have now been backed by a cabinet directive to the new Canadian Radio-Television Commission ordering that body to tighten restrictions on foreign ownership of broadcast facilities in Canada.

Speaking for the cabinet, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier noted that there has been an increase of interest in Canadian broadcast facilities as an investment by foreign interests, particularly those in the U.S.

As the U.S. has a provision that directors of broadcasting companies must be citizens of that country, as well as 80 per cent of the stock-holders, there can hardly be any complaint against similar Canadian provisions.

However debatable protection may be as a general principle it is obvious that no country can permit control of vital information and communications media to go to outsiders.

THE WORD FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

—And in Five Years Medicare Is All Yours

Western

IN one of the milder comments on a gloomy federal-provincial conference, Mr. Charles MacNaughton, the Ontario provincial treasurer, wondered ruefully "if there are any rules to this game left at the moment." Evidently a rather similar thought had occurred earlier to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, who, in his initial comments on the work of the tax structure committee, stressed as a very important point that "the name of the game has changed."

This is precisely what rankles with the provincial governments. There is no lack of logic in the federal propositions but it is a sort of disembodied logic. Mr. Benson reverts to the 1966 proposals of Mr. Sharp as if nothing much had happened in the meantime except in the field of tax committee projections where he is at pains to point out that everything has changed.

Obviously, there is a good deal to be said for the proposition that the shared-cost programs should be phased out in order, as Mr. Sharp said in September, 1966, that the provinces may enjoy "additional fiscal freedom." It has long been a complaint that Ottawa in effect dictates the priorities of the provincial governments.

When Mr. Sharp spoke, however, medicare was before the House of Commons. It was, of course, a federal program resisted by most provincial governments because the conditions imposed made it too expensive. Even now Ontario, with a medical program providing for about 97 per cent of its people, attaches higher priority to post-secondary education and to housing than it does to the implementation of the full federal plan.

Since that time, medicare has become law and the federal government has resorted to a variety of forms of pressure to compel the entry of the several provinces. The latest refinements were added by Mr. Benson in his recent budget.

After Withdrawal

The prime minister, in a startling interpretation of the law, has now made plain the intention of his government to withdraw from medicare in five years time. Instead of the federal payments, provinces will then receive in compensation 17 points in tax abatement, plus equalization and program adjustment considerations. In other words, with the program well launched the provinces will then qualify for the larger freedom and are expected to be suitably grateful.

But what does this larger freedom amount to? Nothing more than a bit of administrative elbow room. As Mr. Sharp said in 1966: "Once major programs like these (the shared cost programs) have been established, no government would discontinue them because of the needs they fill and the public support they command." Mr. Benson said much the same thing on Tuesday about medicare when he was asked what guarantee there would be that the provinces, after five years, would continue to provide uniform services.

Thus there is coercion to get the provinces into major programs on which they will ultimately have some freedom on the assumption that they will be able to exploit it only in matters of detail.

In the present state of the federal budget no provincial treasurer can seriously have expected that the minister of finance would be in any position to play Santa Claus at this fall conference. Some of his exhortations, nevertheless, have a distinct ring. It is the current fashion to blame the provinces for federal difficulties because the open-ended programs, sponsored by Ottawa in the first instance, have been vastly more expensive than Mr. Benson calculated.

Provincial-Municipal Purse

In emphasizing the irrelevance of the projections made by the tax structure committee, however, the minister said:

"Preliminary estimates ... now indicate that the actual growth of provincial-municipal revenues and expenditures for the period has been much higher. But because of provincial and municipal action to increase tax rates and other revenue changes, their total deficit has not been allowed to widen."

If this is a description of misconduct, it compares favorably with what has happened in Ottawa.

Mr. Benson also emphasizes, and quite correctly, that if the provinces need more money, they are quite free to raise their own taxes. Ottawa stands obligingly ready to collect the money for them.

The trouble with this logic is that the minister of finance has made it extremely difficult for provinces to act in accordance with his exhortations. If the open-ended programs are expensive for Ottawa, they are equally expensive for the provinces. But Mr. Benson's new two per cent surcharge is for Ottawa only. At the same time, it constricts the provinces because in the case of Ontario it is equivalent to nine points on personal income tax.

Viewed as Club

Despite all the federal disclaimers, the provincial governments see the new tax as the price to Ottawa of medicare. This makes them the more resentful because it is a financial club; Ontario, for example, will contribute about $225 million for which its people get no benefit. Some, having sustained serious illness, will pay an additional penalty because they will be unable to claim for income tax deductions amounts paid on their behalf by the provincial plan into which they have paid their premiums.

Through all these difficulties, the federal government is moving towards its revised and logical objective. Alarmed at the success of its predecessor in making Quebec a province unlike the others, it now seeks to rectify the situation by making every province like Quebec. They will all be on equal terms, all masters in their own houses although — so strange are the transformations wrought by time — they will be masters only of administrative details owing to the foresight of federal ministers who know what is best for provinces.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

3y WILLIAM R. FRYE

Non-Seating of Peking Only a Pinprick Now

Frye

ONCE again, this coming week, the UN will debate the seating of Red China. Peking almost certainly will be rebuffed, in the end, as in every year since 1950: but this is only one small aspect of the isolation and decline of a once-great nation. The tragedy of modern-day China is evident on every hand. Internally, more than two years of "cultural revolution." have shattered the social and economic, as well as the political, fabric of the country.

The "revolution" began as an effort by Mao Tse-tung to impose instant Communism on what Marxist theory defines as a socialist, that is, a pre-Communist state.

Another Failure

By this fall, it had failed almost as spectacularly as had the "great leap forward" of the previous decade, which had a similar objective.

The army, which was supposed to have been an ally of Mao, forcibly suppressed the Red Guards in most sectors of the country. Traditional local authorities are now beginning to reassert themselves in some places, and pockets of relative order are emerging from the chaos and near-anarchy of recent years.

It is interesting that it should have been the army that finally called a halt to the "revolution." Lin Piao, who as defence minister controls the army, was originally one of Mao's closest associates — or appeared to be.

Played Along

Some China hands who were in Peking at the time say they suspect that early in the "revolution," Lin and Premier Chou En-lai privately agreed that, since the old man was determined to have his fling, they would play along with him but attempt to contain the most destructive repercussions of the policy.

For a time, events got beyond the control of anyone, including Mao; but this summer and fall, with distribution of food and other consumer goods in a state of near-total disruption, central authority all but destroyed, education at a virtual standstill, and pockets of civil war in progress, they stepped in with the army, suppressing Mao's agents.

Mao had succeeded in purging many of his political adversaries, finally including (if last month's announcement is to be believed) head of state Liu Shao-chi. This may have reconciled Mao to his defeat in other, larger issues. Certainly China was, and is, further from pure, theoretical Communism than it was before the "revolution" began.

And the peripheral costs have been formidable. Red China's nuclear-weapon program has been set back, perhaps by a matter of years.

Peking's influence in Southeast Asia, most notably in North Vietnam, has eroded — quite possibly beyond recovery. The very fact that Hanoi is sitting at a negotiating table in Paris with the United States, and has agreed to sit with Saigon, is evidence of Peking's decline.

Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk, of all people, has rubbed it in.

Sihanouk told a group of visiting American newspapermen recently that he hoped the United States would maintain a military presence in Southeast Asia for some time to come, as a counterbalance to Peking.

Sihanouk would not have dared to make such a comment in the days of Red China's active hegemony. Nor, indeed, would he have needed to, since the possibility of an American disengagement has only recently emerged — a possibility which itself is, in part, a reflection of lessening fears of Chinese expansion.

Waning Influence

China has been doing badly in her struggle with Russia for dominance of the world Communist movement. Even when Russia invaded Czechoslovakia, momentarily at least adopting a Chinese-style policy, few Communist parties fled to Peking for leadership.

In Africa, Red China has furiously antagonized a great majority of Black African governments, most notably by an offer to Biafra to help prolong its resistance in that starvation-haunted civil war. Many African countries are understood to have threatened to break relations if her intervention continues.

For the UN to refuse to seat such a China will be merely one more pinprick for Peking after a series of disasters. It will not at all be the staggering rebuff that some Americans apparently believe.

Job for Future

At some point in the future, perhaps after Mao dies — his poor health, however, is said to have been exaggerated — Peking must set about to put Humpty-Dumpty back together again.

When that happens, and Red China actively wants to restore her contacts abroad, the UN seat may be a bargaining asset in the hands of the West.

In the meantime, China is not in the market to buy. She has many more important and immediate concerns. The UN can only keep the commodity on the shelf, ready for dickering when the occasion arises.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

A HIKE along the byroads, or any of the woodland trails, can be very interesting if you look for plants without flowers.

The most common at this time of the year are the mushrooms or fungi, of many varieties and colors.

Stop and examine some of them. One of the fascinating groups is that of the "hedgehog" or Hydnums. This group has teeth instead of gills and there are many varieties. Some have caps, others are bracket-like on trees and downed logs, while others are jelly-like.

Some are like miniature clubs and range in color from an almost pure white to jet black. There is one that is almost a bright red. It grows in the hemlock forest. Most of these plants belong to the clavaria species.

Look for those that have sponge-like tubes on the underside of the cap. Most of these will belong to the boletus or spore group.

The puffballs form another interesting section of the fungi family. They have a wide range from those that are white and smooth to those that belong to the earth stars with "petals" that lift the plant up from the ground.

This group will include the "bird's nest or cup fungi". Look closely and you will see the "nest with the tiny eggs" inside. Some of these use raindrops to disperse their spores.

As you walk along look for another group of plants without flowers — the lichens.

These plants are "dual organisms", being comprised of two kinds of plant, a fungus and an alga. They may be classified as crustose (crusty) foliose (leaflike) and fruticose (shrubby).

There are many kinds. Some grow on rocks and are almost imbedded, others on trees and twigs, while some will be on the ground.

You may also find some that have grown stalk-like with fruiting tips that are red or chocolate colored. Others are like little goblets. Again you may find some that have an upper cup growing out from the lower one.

Do you know that dyes are made from lichens, especially in Scotland?

Distemper of Our Times—LAST CHAPTER

'TRU-DEAU, CANA-DA!' . . . and Pearson Is Freed

By PETER C. NEWMAN

The difference between the Canada that created Lester Pearson and the Canada that overwhelmed him was nowhere more poignantly visible than in the contrast between the way he was chosen leader in 1958 and the way Pierre Elliott Trudeau gained power in 1968.

In that decade, the nation had undergone a revolution and the world that had bestowed the leadership of his party on Lester Pearson like a garland had vanished.

In January, 1958, Pearson had run his leadership campaign without ever leaving Ottawa. He had taken a room at the Chateau Laurier, met key delegates and exchanged confidences without really giving the impression that he was campaigning.

Paul Martin, his only serious rival, was criticized at the time for boldly turning up at the Ottawa railway station to shake the hands of arriving dignitaries.

The convention itself was held in the Ottawa Coliseum, still fragrant from a recent livestock show and decorated for the occasion with bunting and large protrait-studio blow-ups of Laurier, St. Laurent and King.

It was a low-key spectacle, where backrooms and senators still counted and the only touch of color was provided by a few University of Toronto students in sober business suits and pearly girls in cashmere sweaters shouting "Hurrah for Mike!"

TV Coverage Subdued

Television coverage was subdued and limited mainly to Pearson's acceptance speech delivered after his easy first-ballot win.

But the convention in 1968 was a very different occasion. The senators were still moving imperiously through the convention proceedings in Ottawa's vast new Civic Centre but they seemed somehow irrelevant to the action.

The delegates were mostly big-city contemporaries with decisive jaws and narrow lapels, their women mod-ishly chic beside them.

But what really changed the environment was the importance given to television. The candidates, bathed in the beams of hand-held klieg lights, seemed larger than life, their faces taking on that incandescent glow which can transform modern politicians into stars or snuff out their careers in one ninety-second take.

Because television screens can accommodate only one image at a time and tend to give all events equal significance, Trudeau stood to gain most from the TV coverage.

From the moment he entered the race, the managers of the electronic media made an instinctive decision that he would be the winner, and their message was not lost on the delegates.

Throughout the convention eight camera crews clustered about the Justice Minister, ignoring most of the other candidates much of the time, giving Trudeau the advantage of built-in excitement and bathing him in a constant halo of artificial light.

Trudeau in turn was able to provide the cameras with two vital elements, the magic of his television presence and some important dramatic action.

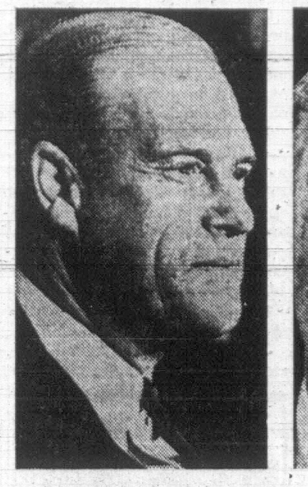
Last-Minute Pull-Out

Mitchell Sharp's last-minute withdrawal in Trudeau's favor and the Justice Minister's own impressive performances at the convention's policy and nominating sessions set the stage for the dramatic events of Saturday, April 6, when Pierre Trudeau was chosen Canada's fifteenth Prime Minister:

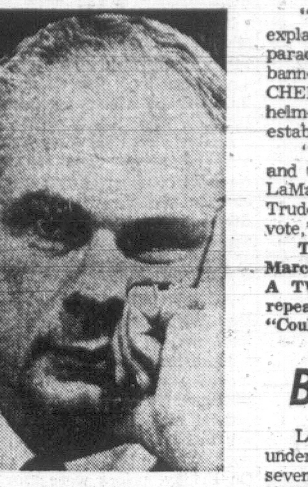
Holy Kingsmere! On Saturday morning, Edna Poole, an Ottawa grandmother who was once Mackenzie King's favorite spiritualist, announces she has "a terrific feeling" Trudeau will win the leadership.

The Justice Minister's campaign newspaper, its cover decorated with a poetic line-drawing of Trudeau by Harold Town, claims that seven ministers and thirty-three MP's now support his candidacy. Arieh Esgel, then Israel's ambassador to Canada, telephones Trudeau headquarters to ask what the new PM's policy will be on the Middle East situation.

Trudeau's delegate logistic data centre gives its final reading at 7 a.m.: 702 votes on the first ballot. Two hundred Trudeau workers converge on the Civic Centre, carrying computer-tabulated lists separated according to voter machines.



WINTERS



HELLYER

They are linked by telephones, walkie-talkies and short-wave radios. A secondary communications system, the legacy of Mitchell Sharp's defunct campaign, is standing by in case of sabotage.

The balloting begins at 1:45. Paul Hellyer, who is getting his own computer "readouts" every two hours, is told he'll have 562 votes on the first count. Fourteen hundred telephones have been installed in the building, and nearly all of them are in use as workers relay last-minute instructions.

Young girls wearing Trudeau's Buddhist-orange mini-skirts, with faces like flowers and shapes like fence pickets, are being fondled by a thousand eyes.

"They're learning about politics," somebody gravely explains. A burly Scot from Nova Scotia's Pictou County parades gravely around the corridors, kilt swirling, bearing a banner with the strange device: ALLAN MACEACHEN—CHEF DE FILE. The Turner boys turn up in construction helmets, as if expecting the heavy artillery of the establishment to rain down on them.

"Anybody who dropped turds on the party two years ago and then expects to lead it will never get my vote," Judy LaMarsh confides to a reporter. Walter Gordon, sitting in the Trudeau box, says: "I've come all this way, I might as well vote," and goes to do so.

Trudeau reaches over, grabs a grape from Jean Marchand, throws it up in the air and catches it in his mouth. A TV producer who misses the performance asks for a repeat, sticks a microphone into Trudeau's face, and says: "Could we hear the crunch, please?"

Button Under His Lapel

Lester Pearson jokes that he is wearing a Trudeau button under his lapel and calculates the Justice Minister will get seven hundred votes on the first count. Mike McCabe, the Sharp man, predicts that Trudeau will start with 750 votes.

He is almost dead on. The first ballot is announced by Senator John Nichol: Trudeau, 752; Hellyer, 330; Winters, 293; Turner, 277; Martin, 277; Greene, 169; MacEachen, 165; Kierans, 103; Henderson, 0.

Kierans quietly withdraws and Paul Martin, with a grace and courage few expected, follows. The low Martin score is the surprise of the first vote. As his abdication is announced, Maurice Sauve sprints for the Trudeau box.

Eddie Rubin, a young Trudeau assistant, nudges him and whispers, "Clap!" Trudeau moves his hands mechanically, pins a button on Sauve and later walks over to shake Martin's hand.

"We are Liberals," Martin says, "whether we run against one another for party office, we always stick together." Martin and Kierans release their delegates without naming their preferences, but MacEachen joins Trudeau.

MacEachen withdraws too late and his name stays on for one more ballot. The Scot from Pictou County, kilt flying, jumps up and down, yelling "Go, Pierre, Go!"

Hellyer struggles through the pandemonium of the convention floor toward Turner and advises him obscurely: "Fight the Establishment, John!" The second ballot is counted: Trudeau, 964; Winters, 473; Hellyer, 465; Turner, 347; Greene, 104; MacEachen, 11.

The Winters surge is suddenly on. It looks as though Trudeau may be stopped after all. Now Robert Winters tries to set an anti-Trudeau coalition in motion by approaching Hellyer.

But Hellyer, still unable to believe that his computers are wrong, refuses to budge. He turns to the rows of his supporters behind him and starts yelling: "Fight! Fight! Fight!"

Joe Potts, a Hellyer booster with a voice like a moose call and inextinguishable optimism, now proposes an ingenious—if naive—compromise. Winters should flip a coin and if he loses, join Hellyer against Trudeau.

But Winters is doubtful: "I'm a front-runner. People would say I was nuts. I'm ahead. You can't stop when you're ahead."

"I know, but there's psychology in this. . . ."

"There's a whole damned election for Trudeau in it."

"Now, Joe, if you were advising me, you'd advise me to stay in."

"I would like hell . . . I would like hell. . . ."

As voting on the third ballot begins, Trudeau is noticed reading notes from a piece of paper. "Is it your acceptance speech?" asks an excited reporter. "No," he whispers back. "It's a love letter."

Remote From Crowd

He seems to be paying little attention to the convention's tumult, withdrawing into himself, becoming remote from the crowd. The next ballot is announced: Trudeau, 1,051; Winters, 621; Hellyer, 377; Turner, 279; Greene, 29.

Greene joins Trudeau and Hellyer rushes over to the Winters' stands shrieking: "GO, BOB, GO! BEAT THE ESTABLISHMENT! LET'S HAVE A LIBERAL LEAD THE PARTY!" Winters and Hellyer search out Turner.

Having pledged that he would make no deals, the young minister informs them he's staying in. Most of the Hellyer supporters put on Winters buttons, but Senator Keith Davey leads about 75 Hellyer delegates to Trudeau.

Now the party is polarized between Winters and Trudeau. Suddenly scared, the Trudeau workers, led by Bryce Mackasey, swarm out, applying pressure to the delegates.

The arena erupts into a frenzy of excitement.

Bud Drury, that well-known swinger from Westmount, is standing behind Trudeau, leading the cheers: "Gimme a 'T' . . . Gimme an 'R' . . .' Mike McCabe tells a friend, "If Trudeau doesn't win, the entrails of the Liberal party will be left all over this hall." Mrs. Pearson is restrained from rushing onto the convention floor to wave a Trudeau banner.

As the fourth ballot results are being read, the chant "TRU-DEAU, CANA-DA!" deafens the hall. Trudeau has 1,203 ballots; winters, 954; Turner, 195.

It's over.

Lester Pearson rises from his seat, freed of power at last. A wedge of policemen arrive to escort the winner on stage. Pierre Elliott Trudeau's face, which might have been carved in alabaster to commemorate some distant war of the Crusades, closes in mask-like as he walks into the future, burdened with hope.

Sweden 'Father-Killers' Knock Down Then Turn Around and Rebuild Cities

By ROLAND HUNTFORD

STOCKHOLM — Swedes often show a cold devotion to change for its own sake, as if merely to be new is to be better. In town planning, this takes the form of destroying old quarters which are still useful and comfortable, and running up concrete mastodons that nobody likes.

The Swedes have been described by one of their own writers as "the greatest father-killers in the world." Today, where the centre of Stockholm used to be, there are now falling ruins and gashes in the ground. A stranger might imagine that the city had been hit by an earthquake or an atom bomb.

The demolition is to prepare the way for redevelopment, but the buildings have been torn down before new plans were ready. Car parks have been hastily improvised to make some use of the vacant sites and avoid public scandal.

Swedish authorities have almost unlimited powers of expropriation, and it is both government and municipal policy to bring urban land under public ownership. In Stockholm, the city council has obtained possession of the entire centre, and is engaged in a grandiose scheme of either building office blocks in the hope of finding tenants, or enticing private contractors to work for their own account. Either way, the ground remains municipal property.

But private builders have been reluctant to oblige. Municipal land is expensive, and rents are so high that tenants are hard to find. Many public speculations have fallen through.

Scheme Shelved

On one of the most valuable plots in the city centre, the Stockholm municipality proposed to build a giant luxury hotel, to be let to an American concern. But the prospective tenants were not interested in a building whose design they could not influence.

The scheme has been shelved, and city hall officials admit that the car park, now forlornly opened on the site, will be there "for several years."

A Stockholm newspaper published an exposure of what it described as "municipal inefficiency," but public reaction has been virtually nil. Stockholmers sometimes complain in private conversation about the destruction of their city, but of organized protest there is almost none.

It does not lie in the Swedish character to resist authority: acceptance of the fait accompli is a national trait.

Of hundreds of threatened buildings, only one evoked a petition and the panoply of protest. This was a curlicued and spired block of nineteenth century flats in which the playwright August Strindberg lived and worked.

Demolition Halted

The literary and historical associations moved older Stockholmers to do something, and at the last moment they contrived to force the municipality to stop the demolition.

But by that time the tenants had been evicted, and the building remained empty and unheated all last winter. The city council appears deliberately to be allowing it to decay, so that it can eventually justify demolition by the huge expenses of renovation. One more Swedish winter, with its heavy frost and changeable weather should seal its fate, according to local experts.

Not Politics

Until two years ago, Stockholm was ruled by the Social Democrats, since when the majority in the city council has been a coalition of Conservatives, Liberals and the Centre (Agrarian) Party. Present demolition would appear to be a Socialist policy, but party has little to do with it.

Socialist and non-Socialist factions have alternated at decent intervals in the city hall over the past few decades, and town planning seems inspired by a drive towards regimentation and a destruction of the past which appears to be independent of political label. It could be a consequence of the Welfare State: it is probably connected with devotion to the march of technology.

Thousands Ousted

The razing of the city centre has driven out thousands of small businesses and independent craftsmen. A few have moved to new premises in the suburbs, but rents are so much higher than they used to pay, that most have found that they cannot afford to carry on, and have closed down. If officialdom were animated by a policy of destroying the little man, it could not have acted more efficiently.

Coupled with the rebuilding of the centre of Stockholm, there is the construction of new suburbs. Of land there is enough. Sweden is sparsely populated and Stockholm, which has fewer than one million inhabitants, has many hundreds of square miles of untenanted land in the surrounding districts. It is the ideal situation in which to build small houses: yet huge skyscrapers or mammoth circular blocks of flats are dumped incongruously in the middle of wild pine forests as if land were scarce, and the country overcrowded.

Like Barracks

The authorities have deliberately discouraged private houses and home ownership, preferring tenants in vast public schemes. One block of flats north of Stockholm contains 6,000 inhabitants: it feels like an army barracks. Some Swedish critics say that this expresses an official fear of the man who lives in his own house, because it encourages independence and makes him less tractable to regimentation.

Whatever it is, most Stockholmers seem to dislike the concrete dormitories in which they live sufficiently to escape to a country cottage on every possible occasion. They spend their summers there, and a good proportion of their weekends.

In no other country is the country cottage and the maintenance of two establishments so common. But here it is a matter of survival. Many Stockholmers say that unless they had their cottage in the forest or by the sea, their concrete suburbs and broken-up city would become a vast lunatic asylum.

Hey, Young Fella, Read Any Good Livres Lately?

By ART STOTT

One of my younger acquaintances is a little girl called Brigitte. She was born in an Air-Canada plane circling Vancouver's International Airport a very few Christmases ago and thereby, I suppose, was given a head start into the space age. Other environmental influences place her in an unusual position. Her mother is Paris-born and spoke virtually no English when she came to this country. Her father is Newfoundland-born — I believe before Newfoundland entered Confederation — of English school-teacher parents, lived a short period of his early life in Victoria, returned to England for schooling and, following his marriage, emigrated back to British Columbia, where he now is employed on the Vancouver police force.

Stott

We kid back and forth with her parents about Brigitte's airborne birth and what nationality it provides for her. I'll settle with her father and mother on the point that she is Canadian and will grow up a Canadian — although not so clearly identified a Canadian as her infant brother, who was born in Vancouver the day Canada celebrated the 100th birthday of its creation as a nation—and has presents from Judy LaMarsh to prove it.

* * *

When I last saw Brigitte she was too young to have learned to read. She was a grave little person, well-behaved, well-spoken in English for a child of her years and as attractive a representative of the two founding nations as I have met. When Brigitte wants to talk privately to her mother, who has become bilingual, she speaks in childish French.

It is my hope that in the years ahead Brigitte will achieve fluency in both the original tongues of her mother and her father, with a little Canadian thrown in for protective coloration. That, to me, is the best kind of bilingualism in Canada.

In Vancouver, however, she may have limited opportunity to exercise French as a normal, every day language unless she spends time in a community of French-speaking people. The prospects, provided rapid strides are not made in bilingualism in British Columbia, are that English will inundate her. That outlook is unfortunate, since the experts say that only those who learn two languages before they reach the age of 14 become completely bilingual.

There is, however, an expanding opportunity for very little people to learn French in this predominantly English-speaking community. As Young Canada observes its annual book week, starting with a special event next Wednesday evening at the Greater Victoria Public Library, visitors may receive information on the facilities made available to children to absorb some French.

* * *

The library has about 75 volumes containing introductions to French in its most elementary form. Among them are picture books, similar to the ones used educationally to teach our children to read and identify words. The words appear in French and English, or in French alone. Some books advance beyond the strictly picture book stage for use in learning French — little stories calculated to appeal to very small children. English and French versions are bound between the same covers in some, in different volumes in others. In addition there are children's dictionaries in French and one, "See Again, Say Again" supplements attractive art work with simple words in English, French, Spanish and Italian. You look at the picture and then say the word in each of the different languages.

The presence of these supplies suggests to me a reversal of the theme for "Young Canada Book Week," which is "Stay on Top with Books." It might be more useful to begin at the bottom with books, in the interests of forging a chain of understanding between the very young of French-speaking parents and their peers of English-speaking fathers and mothers.

* * *

There is, of course, an old hurdle to be cleared before such books can serve the purpose for which they are intended. A small child has to be helped to understand the words and to recognize them. Not too many parents assist their youngsters to achieve mastery of vocabulary, written or oral, even in English. How many would be prepared to give the time and thought to helping a toddler learn the words of another tongue?

Still, the facilities are there at the library — limited in number, it's true, but probably adequate to meet the demand of those prepared to try to advance the understanding of tiny tots in two languages.

And for those who decide the project it too much bother, well, there are always the cereal boxes and a smattering of bilingualism with breakfast.

WEEK'S MARKET

Sluggish Mood Turns to Spurt

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stocks recovered to record levels in a strong spurt Friday after a sluggish reaction to the U.S. election during the previous two days.

In the last week, the Toronto industrial index advanced 2.18 to 181.99, just above the previous all-time high reached on Oct. 7.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up 1.59 to 176.80. These index movements show that prices went through a shallow one-month decline.

Speculative fever in the junior industrial list continues to dominate the market, despite warnings that many of the leading issues have become perilously inflated.

BIGGEST GAINS

Among the biggest gains this week, Dylex Diversified leapt 14⅞ to 80¼, Shully's Industries 6½ to 22½, Computing Devices 5¼ to 26, Peel Elder 5¼ to 54¾ and Nabors Drilling 4½ to 12.

Revenue Properties and Bramalea, two of the most consistent and popular performers, also moved up.

Revenue, which was given a target of $20 by street rumors a month ago, rose 2¼ to 20⅝. Bramalea, which has also been tipped for similar goal, was up 2 to 14¾.

Among the major groups of blue chips and seasoned issues, banks, western oils, communications and base metals posted firm gains, while food processors, chemicals and construction stocks lost ground.

Dome Pete rose 7 to 88, B.C. Phone 3½ to 66½, Southam 3 to 57, Bank of Nova Scotia 2¼ to 24¼ and Noranda 2 to 60½.

On index at Toronto, golds fell .62 to 203.76. Base metals rose 1.40 to 114.60 and western oils 3.93 to 232.75.

Volume was 21,141,000 shares compared with 22,478,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 418 to 380.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 9,334,000 shares compared with 10,666,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 184 to 165.

Stelco Claims New Steel

HAMILTON (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. says it has achieved a major breakthrough in converting iron ore directly into steel.

Alex D. Fisher, a company vice-president said Stelco and Lurgi-Chemie Co. of Frankfurt, recently converted 1,200 tons of Australian iron ore directly into steel, bypassing both the coke oven and blast furnace processes.

He said the project, which started at the company's Hamilton plant and was completed at Stelco's Premier works in Edmonton, is the result of 10 years of experiments involving companies in North America, Europe and Australia.

Mr. Fisher said the use of the electric furnace would reduce capital costs. Higher productivity and lower labor content would also reduce costs.

Stelco is considereing adopting the process for its steelmaking project planned for Nanticoke on Lake Erie, 40 miles south of here.

Mr. Fisher said the company expects an eventual capacity of between 10 million and 12 million ingot-tons annually for the Nanticoke plant.

'SAME TO YOU' DRIVERS SOUGHT BY DETECTIVES

BURLINGTON, Ont.—Teams of private detectives are being employed in Britain to track down musical car horns that play "Colonel Bogey," the military march which has become known as the "and the same to you" song."

The private eyes, according to the public service division of British Leyland Motors Canada Ltd. here, are out to banish Colonel Bogey from cars: "To stop motorists from publicly playing that short bit of music that has most importance in the public's mind."

Mr. Robert Sweetman, licensing manager of Britain's Mechanical-Copyright Protection Society, says: "The composer's heirs object to the rather unfortunate connotation that goes with 'Colonel Bogey'."

But there is a snag. Once a musical horn is fitted to a car in Britain it becomes a matter, if necessary, for the Performing Right Society, which could levy a public performance fee—"although we have never done this for a car horn," said a British Leyland official.

To be strictly legal, any British motorist with a Colonel Bogey horn ought to be licensed to play it, but only in Britain. In other countries drivers can play musical horns without reproduction permission.

Fishery Commission Headed by Canadian

SEATTLE (AP) — S. V. Ozere of Canada was elected chairman and Kenjiro Nshimura of Japan vice-chairman as the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission ended its annual five-day meeting Friday.

The commission scheduled the halibut fishing seasons, totalling 24 days for the 4-B triangle area of Alaska's Bering Sea. That compares with a single 14-day season last year.

The triangle has been a controversial area since Japan persuaded Canadian and United States commissioners to open it to Japanese fleets in 1963 on the basis that the halibut were not being fully fished.

The combined fishing that year depleted halibut stocks and it has not been heavily fished since.

The 1969 schedule calls for opening the triangle from April 3 to April 15 and from Sept. 1 to Sept. 13.

The commission made no change in salmon regulations or the 175-degree West line that marks the official eastern limit for Japanese salmon fishing.

James Cameron of Canada was elected to head the committee on biology and research, and Yoshio Ohkawara of Japan will chair the committee on finance and administration. Edward Allen, Seattle, will serve as secretary.

Executives Fined $150,000 For Fixing Plumbing Prices

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Five plumbing manufacturing executives have been fined a total of $150,000 for price fixing. Four of the five were given jail sentences.

They were accused of a four-year conspiracy to fix prices of $1 billion worth of bathroom fixtures.

Judge Louis Rosenberg Friday also fined the Plumbing Fixtures Manufacturers Association $50,000.

The association had pleaded not guilty in the fall of 1966, but later changed its plea to guilty.

Executives fined were:

Stanley Backer, 67, former vice-president of sales at Universal-Rundle Corp., New Castle, Pa., $5,000; Robert Pierson Jr., 45, vice-president of the home products division at Theem Manufacturing Co., New York, $15,000; John Balmer, 62, president of Wallace-Murray Corp., New York, $40,000; Robert Casner, 52, vice-president of Crane Co., New York, $25,000, and George W. Kelch, 52, former president Intergersoll Division at Borg Warner Corp., Chicago, $25,000.

Balmer received a one-year jail sentence to be suspended after 30 days. Casner was sentenced to one year to be suspended after 15 days.

Kelch was given a nine-month sentence to be suspended after seven days. Backner received a six-month sentence to be suspended after one day in jail. Pierson was given one-year probation.

U.S. MARKET

Election Jitters Quickly Remedied

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — The stock market weathered its election jitters, took little more than a day to get back into stride and finished the week moving up actively.

Analysts credited the renewed blue chip-led rally to the removal of uncertainty over the election—mainly whether there might be an electoral standoff that would prevent the naming of a new chief executive for two months.

As the ballot tally dragged into Wednesday morning, past the market's opening hour, volume remained low and price moves were restrained. Later that morning, the result became official and prices started edging higher. By Thursday afternoon, volume began to move up. On Friday, prices were moving more easily and the market appeared to be back in its upside groove.

Observers had generally expected a pause after the election, but some said later that it took traders less time than expected to get their feet back on the ground.

For the week, the Dow Jones industrial average chalked up a gain of 10.57 points to close at 958.98. The 30-stock average showed 22 winners, six losers and two issues unchanged.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was up .89 point to 103.95 and the New York Stock Exchange index rose .52 point to 58.47.

Trading volume trailed the week-earlier rate, despite the pickup on Friday. In all, 49.5 million shares changed hands, off from 56.22 million shares in the previous week.

Advancing stocks took the lead back from declines by a margin of 914 to 644. A week earlier, there were 1,013 issues down and 554 ahead. The number of new 1968 highs slipped to 148 from 174 and there were 34 new lows, down from 35.

Huge Trust Fund Urged

MONTREAL (CP) — C. Norman Simpson, president of Acres Ltd. of Toronto, urges major investors to form "a multi-million-dollar trust" which would generate "creative capital" of at least $500,000 in annual interest.

He told the Canadian Export Association this creative capital "could support a multi-disciplinary team of hard-nosed technologists and financial analysts dedicated to the task of seeking out good business investments."

Mr. Simpson described creative capital as money needed to survey and identify business opportunities and to assess their potential profitability within an increasingly complex economy.

"Ironically, there is an abundance of investment capital for business opportunities which are not too risky. On the other hand, there is a shortage of creative capital which, when properly applied, can reduce the risk inherent in new ideas.

"Those who have the investment capital would seem to be the very people who would want to supply the creative capital — and they might find it quite painless."

Mr. Simpson said creative capital must be provided by Canadian private enterprise if this country is to be developed to its true potential.

"The entrepreneur and innovator are the catalysts of social and economic progress and we solely need them at this stage of Canada's development.

"Too often good ideas die or their full development is inhibited because the innovator cannot get them translated into profitible reality."

Hawker Resumes Loss

Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. of Toronto reported Thursday the company lost $2.47 million in the eight-month period ending Aug. 31.

The loss compares with a profit of $4.08 million a year ago. Sales were $156.79 million, down from the $163.66 million last year.

Timely Intervention

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

The week's disturbing revelations about the Commonwealth group of companies illustrates there is nothing like a government investigation and a stock trading suspension to chip away at investor confidence, justifiably or not.

In fact, there is as yet no disclosed evidence of wrong-doing for which criminal charges might be brought.

But once an aura of suspicion has been cast, a number of depositors or certificate holders can be counted on to set out in search of their money, and the stigma remains.

The most nervous of these Thursday, although lacking specific knowledge of real jeopardy, were given satisfaction when they turned up at branch offices of the Commonwealth group: they got their money despite the pressure of numbers facing staff. (There is nothing so sensitive as money.)

"We were pretty busy yesterday," conceded R. A. Patrick, local Commonwealth Trust manager.

Perhaps because the particular reason for the government's action in seizing records of Commonwealth companies was not given—and still is not revealed—the "run" on deposits was mild.

It might have been milder had reassurance by Commonwealth acting president A. D. Peter Stanley and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson come earlier in the day.

As it was, these assurances that protection of those with a financial interest was uppermost reason for intervention, had the effect of allaying fears and by Friday business in the Victoria branch was "just about back to normal," Mr. Patrick said.

The Commonwealth case appears to be a perfect example of timely intervention where a company's affairs seem out of focus. It also illustrates the protection of the federal deposit insurance corporation, founded after Atlantic Acceptance and Prudential Finance companies collapsed.

But Mr. Peterson added to what should be paramount public concern by suggesting this sort of investigation was routine, that the government tried to keep it quiet and that he was surprised by the coverage given to it. A minister of the crown—lawyer at that—can't be that naive.

He was critical of deputy RCMP commissioner Kelly in Ottawa for having said initially that a number of B.C. trust companies were being investigated, which led to widespread concern. As it turns out, Mr. Kelly erred; no trust company in B.C. is under scrutiny, rather 35 subsidiary and affiliated companies in the Commonwealth group.

The police probe was sure to get out eventually, particularly when 40 policemen and a truck were used to raid the offices—hardly a casual occurrence—and that could have led to even greater public apprehension.

Only through the fullest publicity to affairs of this sort will the public interest really be served and investors become more knowledgeable. The sooner explanations of such action are provided, the better, in keeping with today's frequent demands for greater and earlier public disclosure of corporate information generally, especially concerning publicly-traded equities.

Fortunately in the Commonwealth case only two of the companies involved are listed on a stock exchange, and with prompt action the securities commission and Vancouver Stock Exchange, trading in their shares was suspended.

Think what might have happened if many of the 35 companies had been public, having shares listed for trading, and there had been neither a suspension nor statements of reassurance.

It is interesting to note that in his written statement, Mr. Stanley stressed the "new management" aspect of Commonwealth Trust, which acts as agent for the group. He said he had always favored the idea of a B.C.-owned and operated trust company.

"In my opinion, the former management was the problem. Now that they have gone, the idea is better than ever and there are groups of strong and respectable people who are keenly interested in acquiring shares in Commonwealth Trust Company and infusing substantial new monies into the business once the smoke had cleared.

"Indeed, this is the time, in my opinion, the people of British Columbia should come to the support of their own institution as never before."

He said he was able to "wrest share control of Commonwealth Trust Company away from those who were running the company then and the shareholders will be happy to know that, when the next meeting is called they will have the power from the floor to appoint new directors and to dictate the policies for the future."

He also stressed that the trust company is not subject to any of the orders made by the securities commission or the Supreme Court of B.C. and that he has no personal part in the investigation being conducted by chartered accountants Clarkson, Gordon and Co.

$25 Billion Sales For Merchants?

TORONTO (CP) — Retail merchants can expect to ring up more than $25 billion in sales this year, the general manager of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, Inc., predicted Friday.

D. W. Rolling said that since June, consumer spending has reached a level that assures an 8-per-cent increase in sales on the 1967 total of $23 billion.

The Retail Council of Canada also projects an eight-per-cent sales increase for 1968. About 3.5 per cent of the increase will represent higher prices. In 1967, retail sales rose by 6.1 per cent.

$2.5 MILLION FOR CANPACK

CALGARY (CP) — Canada Packers Ltd. will begin construction imeediately on a $2.5 million beef processing plant at Red Deer and will expand facilities at the Calgary Packers Ltd. plant here, general manager P. E. Gibson said Friday.

Mr. Gibson said the plant in Red Deer will be an additional one to process the increase in livestock production in the province. Expected to be completed by 1970, it will process about 1,500 cattle a week and employ more than 40 workers.

Canada Packers also has plants in Lethbridge and Edmonton.

Ex-Directors To Stand Trial

TORONTO (CP) — Four former directors of the insolvent Toronto investment firm of Ord, Wallington and Co. and the firm itself have been committed for trial on 30 charges of theft of clients' funds.

The four — John Wallington, president; Kenneth Ord, vice-president; Thomas Duggan and Paul MacNames — were released on $5,000 bail each.

Crown officials said the case probably will come to trial early next year.

To Spend $5.2 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal government survey indicates Canadian firms will increase capital expenditures by about 8 per cent in 1969 to $5.2 billion from $4.8 billion in 1968.

Mineral Sales $3.4 Billion

TORONTO (CP) — Canada exports its mineral production to almost 90 countries, the Mining Association of Canada reports.

Last year, exports of minerals and their semi-fabricated products were worth $3.42 billion, or 78 per cent of Canada's total production, second only to manufactured goods as earner of foreign exchange.

The U.S. was the biggest foreign market, buying almost $2.8 billion worth of minerals, including fuels, or nearly 60 per cent of total exports.

Britain bought almost $500 million worth and Japan $267 million.

"The breadth of these markets is illustrated by the fact that Canadian asbestos is sold in 84 countries, copper in 75, zinc in 42, nickel in 38, lead in 24, sulphur in 21, magnesium in 20 molybdenum in 17, iron ore in 15, cobalt in 14, silver and cadmium in six and uranium in three," the association said.

The industry reports concern about the recent trend in the U.S. Congress toward import quotas on such mneral imports as lead, zinc and potash.

It concludes, however, the outlook for growth is good because of an anticipated worldwide demand for mineral products.

Canadian producers would have to control their costs to remain internationally competitive in such a growing market, it says.

Amateur Pays $61,600 For Stradivarius Violin

LONDON (AP) — An amateur musician Thursday paid $61,600 for a Stradivarius violin at Sotheby's. The auctioneers said the price was a world record.

The violin was bought by British businessman Jack Morrison who will play it himself.

The previous record price for a violin was paid for another Italian instrument on July 4, 1966. That was a Guarnieri and it fetched $36,400.

AT THE MOVIES

With NORMAN CRIBBENS

THE HIGH COMMISSIONER

British Spy Drama
Odeon Theatre

Christopher Plummer, well remembered as Captain Von Trapp in The Sound of Music, gives a sincere and fairly credible performance as an Australian high commissioner to Britain who is suspected of having murdered his first wife.

Rod Taylor, a native Australian, adopted by Hollywood, is particularly well adapted to the role of an Australian detective sent to London to arrest the commissioner.

* * *

While the story lacks conviction, it is charged with suspense and intrigue and provides an intensive study of two likeable men caught in a tangled web of circumstance.

Taylor obviously hates his assignment, realizing there is political chicanery behind it, and the high commissioner, much preoccupied with peace talks in London, urbanely refuses to return to Australia until his mission is completed.

There is an attempt on the commissioner's life when he enters his car to visit the United States ambassador, and thereafter the detective is reluctantly involved as a bodyguard.

* *

The action goes into high gear when the commissioner is watching an international tennis match at Wimbledon and the detective learns he is about to be assassinated with a gun concealed in a camera.

Lilli Palmer builds up a shadowy role as the commissioner's second wife and Daliah Lavi is attractive but unconvincing in the role of a woman spy.

The story, based on a novel by Wilfred Greatorex, has been capably handled by the British production team of Betty Box and Ralph Thomas. But some of its background sequences, notably the international spy ring, are inadequately explained.

* * *

Outstanding in a minor role is Clive Revill as the high commissioner's dubious manservant. The late Franchot Tone makes a brief, token appearance as the U.S. ambassador and Leo McKern is seen in passing as a bluff, ruthless Australian premier.

The Games People Play: A Digression

By TED LINDBERG

Lindberg

An affable Ottawa artist named Hilde Schreier, currently being given a showing at the Pandora's Box Gallery, is another one of these people, alas, who may find herself locked in a limbo, half way between popular tastes on the one hand, and contemporary critical standards on the other.

Having been involved in the art gallery business in one capacity or another for a long time, I can never suppress my private curiosity about public behavior and response to a given show.

While taking notes and making my thumbnail sketches for reviews, I seldom fail to overhear chance remarks or observe facial expressions, stances, or witness the insensitive, whirlwind, in-and-out progress of the few other art gallery visitors.

I find myself generally in sympathy with the artist.

In Mrs. Schreier's case, the eavesdropped intelligence was that her work was "psychedelic," "too modern," because "it is too hard to see the picture in it" (with the possible exception of some lint drawings, which are crystal-clear, if pedestrian, illustrations of flowers, faces and hands).

●

This, mind you, while I am writing adjectives like "simplistic," "innocent," "pretty" and "light"; or making judgments like "pathetically dated and derivative" and "creative housewife with lyric pretensions."

The hapless artist, in her own apologia, states in an almost self-effacing way that she is not committed to "isms," nor is she a "symbolist or a moralist."

"I draw from reality and from the need to experience the stimulation of my senses," she concludes.

In other words, her art is a very personal thing, and was not especially made to contend with anyone else's. Fair enough.

Though she refuses to categorize her work, others will.

At The Gallery

How can one say, for instance, that this artist's work is typical good-bad art-school student level, but is nonetheless better than perhaps 90 per cent of the amateur and professional work being done in Canada?

It depends on the audience, doesn't it? Hers and mine.

If I were writing this review for a national art journal, it would be a vastly more simple matter, but this raises another improbable possibility.

I doubt seriously that Mrs. Schreier could get a show with a first-rate gallery in a large city, and therefore would never be noticed by a national publication.

●

Conversely, her skills and sensibilities are enormously superior to the imagination and perceptual powers of most of her audience—in this city or Ottawa.

What judgments one should be expected to print, in this case, is almost beyond me; and dilemmas such as this are more often the rule than the exception.

Pandora's Box, to further complicate the situation, is a gallery struggling to maintain first-rate standards as it (still desperately) fights for existence in a community which is strangely indifferent to art.

The only thing I am sure of, at this point, is that the Box will never revert to the standards of other "picture stores" around town that have the audacity to call themselves art galleries.

Mrs. Schreier's somewhat eclectic endeavors have produced: (1) black and white art nouveau-Op designs; strictly junior high stuff; (2) the same in color; (3) pen and ink, pencil drawings: competent art student work; (4) etchings, which are heavily-structured, sullen designs, except for a few fortuitous compositions based on some freely-applied blobs which she had sense enough to leave pretty much alone; (5) oil paintings, again heavily structured, with some nice tricky surfacing, but mindless in concept; (6) watercolor and ink painting: (first lesson?) and (7) print-collage: cut-up segments of prints on painted canvas, nicely arranged, like flowers.

Innocent, simplistic, pretty and lightweight.

Many of these things would fit decorously in some living rooms, if that is all art is for.

Tourism To Hit $350 Million

The value of tourism to B.C. should hit $350 million this year, Travel Industry Minister Kenneth Kiernan estimated Friday.

It was calculated as a record $317 million last year.

Mr. Kiernan said the new record is likely on the basis of an average 10.8 per cent increase in the number of U.S. border crossings from January through August this year.

Save the Argylls

LONDON (CP) — Margaret, Duchess of Argyll, today launched an appeal for Canadians to join in the final spurt of a massive petition being organized here to save the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

The famous Scottish regiment which held the "thin red line" at Balaclava is doomed to disbandment by 1972 under defence spending cuts announced by the Labor government.

Canadians wishing to participate should write to her and ask for petition forms, each of which must be filled with 25 names, the duchess said.

Organ Recital

Donald Woodworth, organist and choirmaster at St. John's Anglican Church, will give a recital in the church Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

He will play Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in B Minor and Healey Willan's Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue.

From Debonair To Dead

TORONTO (CP) — You are dull and dignified if you have a blood-alcohol level of .03 per cent, the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation decided Thursday.

The list:

.05 per cent—dashing and debonair.
.1—Dangerous and devilish.
.2—Dizzy and disturbing.
3.—Disgusting and dishevelled.
.4—Delirious and disoriented.
.5—Surely drunk.
.6—Dead drunk.
.7—Dead.

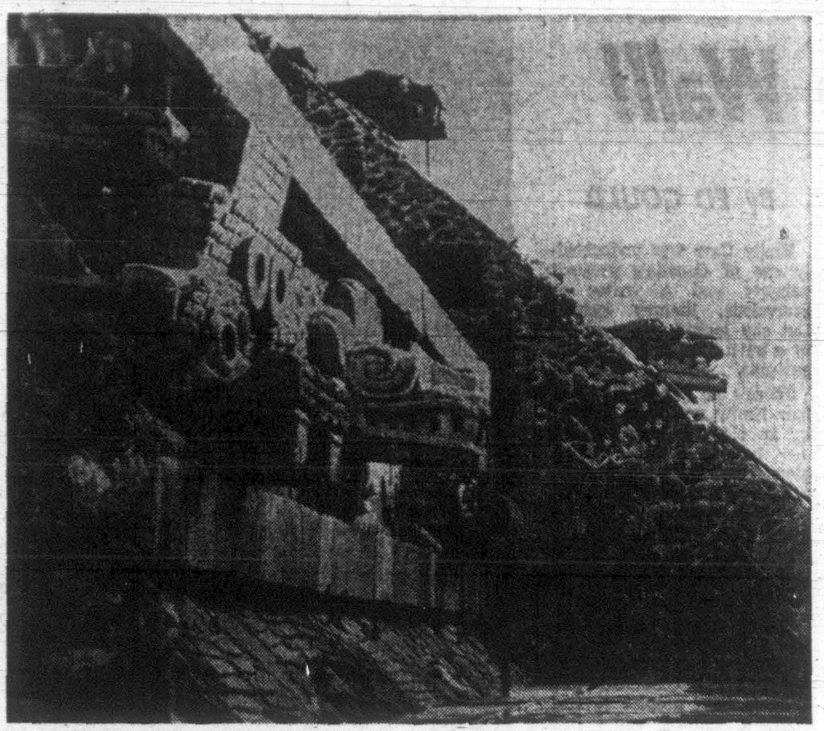
Mexico's Marvellous Markets . . . Haggling Is Part of the Fun

Even the most recalcitrant husband will be unable to resist a shopping spree in Mexico, with a choice of settings ranging from bustling native markets to sophisticated shops, which rival the best in the world.



FACES ON THE WALL are fine examples of Toltec carvings at the Temple of Quetzalcoatl near Mexico City. The ruins are 2,000 years old.

Markets give the shopper a chance to savor the color and character of a city or village, plus the fun of haggling over the price of a piece of earthenware or a basket. In Mexico's smaller towns, market day is usually a weekly event when farmers and craftsmen come in from the surrounding countryside to sell their wares.

Toluca's market, on Fridays, is one of the country's largest and most colorful. Here, 41 miles west of Mexico City, vendors stream into town to fill it with stalls displaying ceramics, produce, serapes and straw work from distant corners of Mexico as well as from neighboring villages.

●

In areas where there is a large Indian population—like Oaxaca in southeastern Mexico, or San Christobal de las Casas in the border state of Chiapas—the market is a kaleidoscope of vivid tribal costumes and a mixture of native tongues. In fact in the Las Casas market you'll hear almost no Spanish spoken.

Mexico City has several large markets, open every day. San Juan and La Merced, once outdoor market places, now house their stalls in bright, modern buildings.

La Merced, which is on the site of the major market of the ancient Aztecs, is devoted mainly to retail and wholesale food selling. There vendors skillfully arrange red chiles, green avocades, yellow mangoes and purple onions in neat symmetric mounds and pyramids adding artistry to an otherwise normal display.

For the North American visitor, La Merced is a good source for rare spices and odd foods like chocolate beans which make imaginative gifts for a gourmet cook. San Juan market is divided into several sections and while it's fun to browse among the colorful fruit and flower stalls, you'll undoubtedly buy when you come to the section where baskets of every size and shape are hung on walls and heaped on the floors of row after row of booths. There are straw handbags and beach bags, woven fruit and bread baskets, and one of the most practical items of all—large woven hampers which are perfect for transporting all the purchases home.

Mexico City has its Sunday morning "flea market," La Lagunilla, where among piles of nondescript merchandise you may come across a pair of antique brass candlesticks or perhaps an old hand-carved wooden figure of a saint.

The markets in resort towns like Acapulco cater to the tourist trade. One stall will have bolts of bright manta (homespun cotton) in the vivid pinks and oranges and blues and greens of which Mexico is noted. Next door there will be a tailor with his sewing machine.

You can buy the fabric, take it to the tailor and 12 hours later pick up the finished article. As an example of the savings available by this method of purchasing, a man's custom-made cotton suit which would run to $125 at home can be had for $25 complete at the market.

Silver is sold in practically every part of the country, but Taxco, three hours out of Mexico City, is the silver centre and in some 300 shops can be found anything in silver from the daintiest piece of jewelry to heavy bowls and trays, many reflecting the freshly contemporary designs that are uniquely Mexican.

Hand-turned pottery is another Mexican handicraft, but it varies with the region —*Oaxaca's specialty is un*glazed black earthenware; Tonala (near Guadalajara) makes fat cats and birds painted with flower designs; Puebla is famour for Talavera ware and tiles, done in white, blue and yellow.

●

Onyx, in chess sets, ashtrays and figurines, is another product of Puebla; hand-blown glass in rich ambers, blues and greens comes mainly from the state of Jalisco, around Guadalajara and Tlaquepague; colorful lacquer work in wooden trasy and bowls is done in Patzcuaro, Morelia and Uruapan, in the state of Michoacan; and straw products—from toys to furniture—are the specialty of Toluca.

If you haven't time for a nation-wide shopping expedition, you can collect all the handicrafts you want in Mexico City, whose shops sell goods from every part of the world.

Mexico City has some shops that are unusual, if not unique. The Museo de Artes Popularea (Native Crafts Museum) is a government-run centre, housed in a Spanish Colonial church, which displays and sells carefully chosen examples of the country's handicrafts, ranging from straw baskets to original designs of the finest silversmiths.

The government also operates a pawnshop, the Monte de Piedad, where citizens can borrow money on possessions paying a low rate of interest. When the interest payments stop, the article goes on sale and until it is sold the price is reduced monthly.

The real bargains are in pieces that have been on the counter for three or four months. The building, a baroque palace, was the residence of the Spanish Viceroys, built on what is supposed to be site of Montezuma's palace.

Mexico City has an outdoor art market in Sullivan Park, where every Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. painters and sculptors display their work.

You can often pick up a fine painting at a bargain price—the range is from about $5 to $100, including frames.

Out in the picturesque colonial suburb of San Angel is the Bazaar Sabado, a showcase of the best in Mexican crafts, run by the craftsmen themselves.

●

The bazaar, open only on Saturdays, is in an old house and at its stalls you can buy handsome jewelry, maybe a symmetric opal set in a piece of rough gold which forms a ring; a massive hand-carved colonial buffet, a coffee service of silver, copper and brass, emaneled copper tapestries, ceramics, pottery or fabrics.

FIVE GREAT CIVILIZATIONS

Weathered Stones Tell the Story

Legacies of ancient civilizations are scattered throughout Mexico.

From the outskirts of cosmopolitan Mexico City to the jungles of the Yucatan, weathered stones speak silently of highly developed early cultures in which astronomers produced the world's first accurate calendar.

SACRIFICES

Sacred wells recall the awesome drama of human sacrifices to gods who dwelled in the water's depths and temple carvings with Oriental qualities raise the question of trans-Pacific migrations to America.

Five of the greatest civilizations of the Americas flourished in ancient Mexico—the Olmec, Maya, Zapotec, Toltec and Aztec. Several thousand archaeological zones which are the remains of their civic and religious centres lie near the country's important modern cities or are easily reached by air, rail or road.

Thirty minutes out of Mexico City is Teotihuacan, whose origins go back to 350 B.C. An eight mile square area of towering, terraced pyramids ornately carved temples, broad avenues and quadrangles bear mute evidence of the past.

The zone's most impressive structure is the Pyramid of the Sun, as high as a 20-storey skyscraper with a base a quarter of a mile square.

The Pyramid of the Moon, similar but smaller, is at the end of the mile long Avenue of the Dead which leads to an enormous quadrangle called the citadel. Within this complex are a number of residences and temples, the most elaborate of which is the exotically carved temple of Quetzalcoatl.

1,200 FEET HIGH

Tepoztlan, a picturesque Indian village whose inhabitants still speak the ancient Nahuatl language of the Aztecs, is also in the Mexico City area, near Cuernavaca, and contains the pre-Hispanic Shrine of Tepozteco which overlooks the village from a pinnacle 1,200 feet high.

A day's trip from the capital by bus or tourist limousine is Tula, the "lost" city of the Toltecs.

Though crude excavations began here in the late 19th century, it wasn't until 1950 that archaeologists established Tula as the legendary Toltec centre (896-1168 A.D.) mentioned in ancient chronicles. Huge carved monoliths, originally supports for a temple roof, have come to be regarded as Tula's "trademark."

TERRACED

The best example of Aztec architecture yet discovered in Central Mexico lies nine miles northwest of Mexico City. This is the terraced Pyramid of Tenayuca, all that remains of a large 12th century city of the Chichimeca Empire. The pyramid, well preserved because the Aztecs covered it over when the Spanish arrived, is decorated on three sides with carved serpents heads.

Direct jet flights to Mexico City are available to Canadian Pacific Airlines passengers from Vancouver, Calgary, Windsor, Toronto and Montreal.

2,000 Years Old And Star Of the Show

The star of a "light and sound" show which opened near Mexico City recently is over 2,000 years old!

The spectacular, presented daily except Wednesday, details with commentary and floodlights the history of the impressive pyramids of Teotihuacan, about 30 miles from Mexico City.

Two shows are held daily; one in English at 7 p.m. and the other in Spanish, at 8:15 p.m. The audience is limited to 500 per show and admission is $2.

Other illuminated highlights of the show are the Temple of Quetzalcoatl, the Avenue of the Dead, which connects the two pyramids, and the remains of communal dwellings of 50 to 60 rooms each.

Spectacular lighting effects are arranged by using 2,800 spotlights in the main illumination with 335 auxiliary lights of different hues.

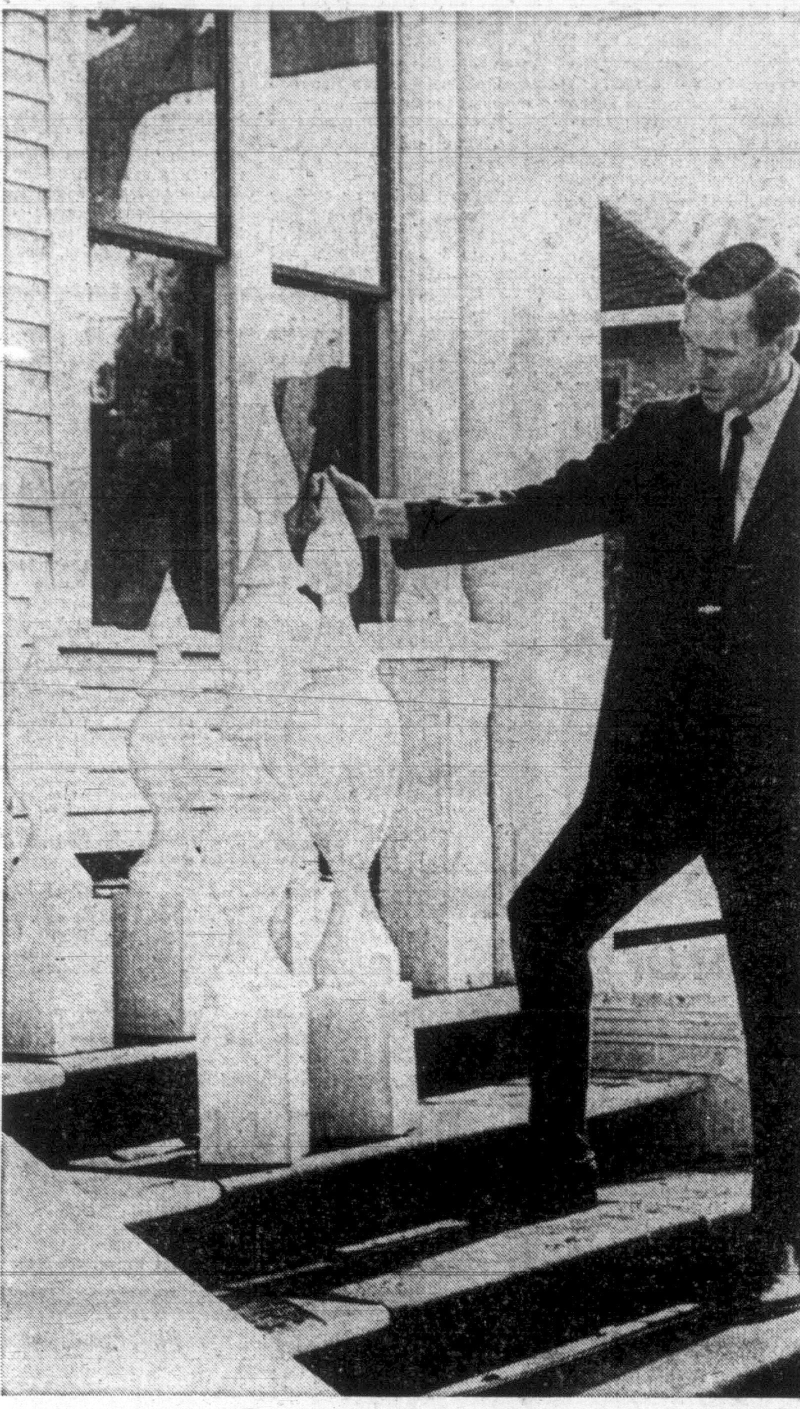
By ED GOULD



Fancy finials have fancy price in the restoration of Emily Carr House. Special knives had to be made at a cost of $2,500 to carve out the ornamental tops for the gables. Jaycee Cred Richards examines some of the finials on the front steps of Emily Carr's old family home.

Emily Carr was undoubtedly one of Canada's greatest painters and a writer of marvelous, literary insight. But she lacked two qualities in abundance; tact and patience.

There's an anecdote told of how Emily was once berated by an old lady for dragging her bulldog rump-a-bump along the sidewalk because the pooch refused to walk.

"I'll report you to the SPCA," the old lady yelled.

She wasn't, of course, although the boardinghouse she ran during that arid period in her art career contained more animals than people: several dogs, a vulture, white rats canaries, and Woo the monkey — her pet for 14 years who once ate a tube of paint and nearly died.

The little story above may be apocryphal but it illuminates a facet of this dynamic, incredibly talented eccentric who was unwilling to suffer fools gladly.

$30,000 Rejected

Some Victorians of that era refused to accept her advanced painting style and deplored her unorthodox mannerisms and this attitude supposedly still persists despite the success of her books and paintings elsewhere.

One painting sold in Toronto recently for $7,000; two years ago another sold for $18,000 and private collectors are reported to have turned down offers of up to $30,000 for major works.

There's been a good sale too of books like "Thousands And Thousands" which chronicles her life and times and few Canadians can boast of a play written in their honor.

At the present time 27 of Miss Carr's paintings and sketches are touring the province thanks to the B.C. Centennial Cultural Fund.

But this article is not so much about Emily Carr as about her birthplace at 207 Government Street, the ornate, ancient gingerbread structure currently undergoing extensive renovations.

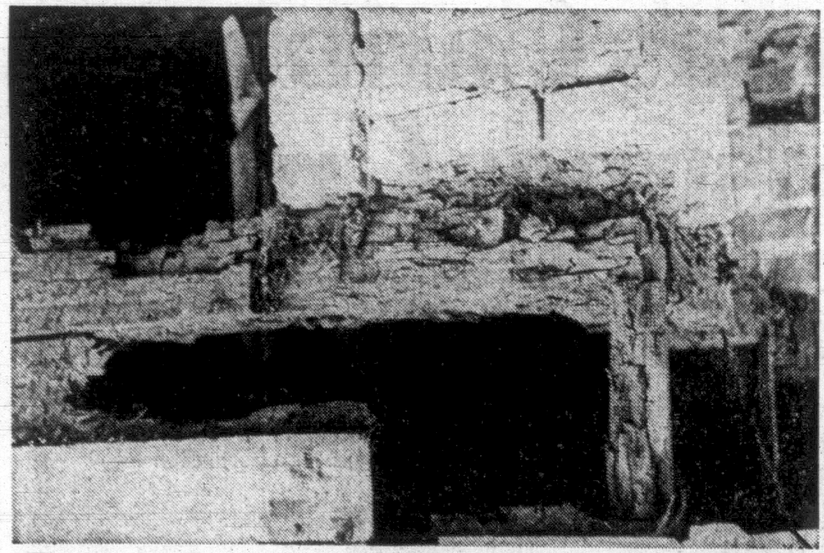
Under the Emily Carr Foundation, incorporated under the Societies Act of the province of British Columbia in March, 1967, a cost-sharing agreement was signed between the Emily Carr Foundation and the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Jaycee Project

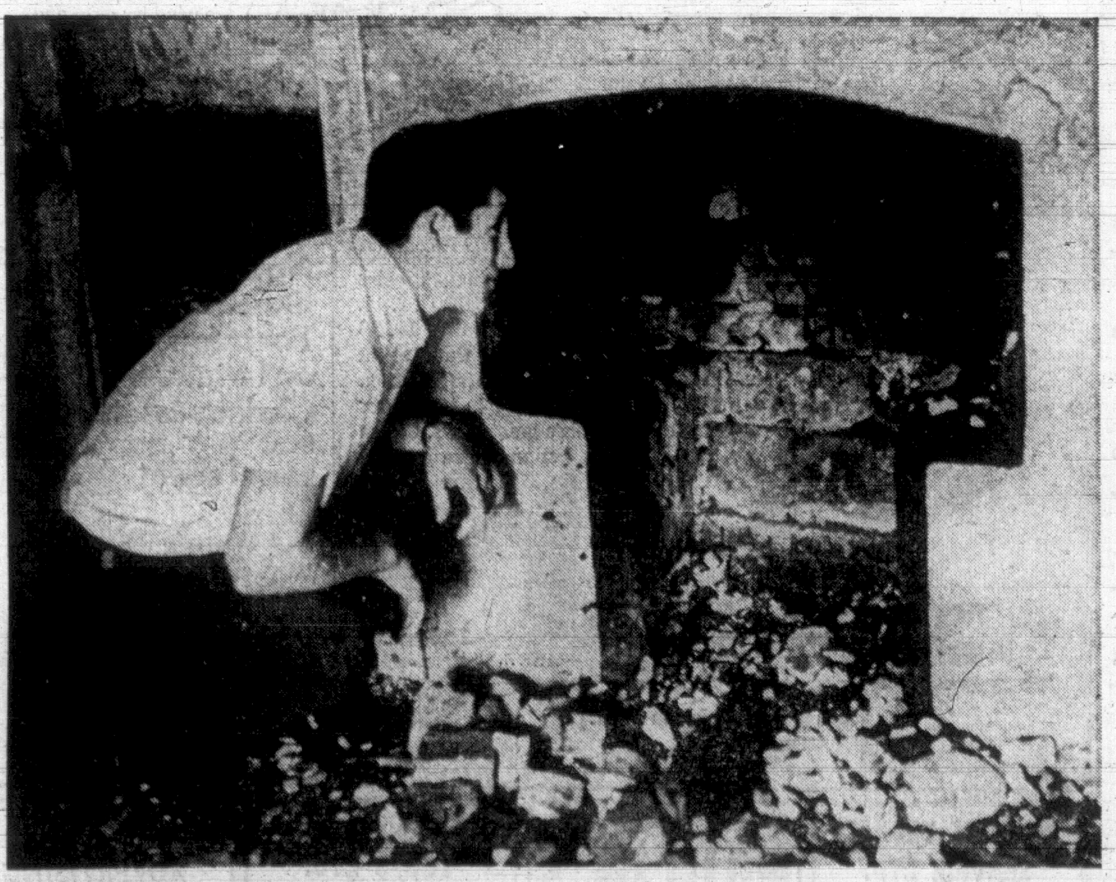
Under terms of the agreement, the house will be restored and administered under the direction of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce for a period of 20 years.

More than $36,000 already has been spent on completing the first phase of the renovations and the Foundation anticipates the total cost will be about $75,000 — which includes the purchase price of the house and site.

The Jaycees are prepared to donate one-third of the total cost which will be matched by the federal government but the balance will have to come from art lovers and interested citizens.



Extensive woodrot and crumbling brick and mortar foundation pier were revealed shortly after home was acquired as Jaycee restoration project. Every pier of the foundation is having to be replaced painstakingly.



When architect Peter Cotton had a false wall removed in the Carr home, workers found a "missing" fireplace the family once used to spit-roast joints of meat. Shelves at the left of the fireplace contained several original clay pots made by Miss Carr, which are considered a valuable bonus.

If anyone wonders why it should cost so much to fix up an old house which initially cost about $17,000 back when David Groos purchased it to save it from the wrecking crew who wanted the site for an apartment block — take a good look at the accompanying photographs.

All of the foundation has to be replaced. Two-thirds has been completed under phase one including the rebuilding of 25 brick and mortar piers and a fireplace foundation.

Caused Woodrot

Papa Carr built the house of California Redwood in 1863 and he — or one of the later owners — was under the mistaken impression that sealing out the sea air would save foundation timbers from rotting. Instead, extensive woodrot resulted.

Nearly every floor board must be replaced with as close to original material as available. The place looked so bad when it was stripped to its underwear, an Ottawa architect nearly went out of his mind at the thought of even beginning the monumental task of rebuilding from the ground up.

The job could be glossed over. There's no real need, for example, or reconstructing the original cistern under the kitchen floor.

A cheap wooden floor could cover it up and nobody would be the wiser. But foundation chairman George Robbins and architect Peter Cotton are united in their resolve that only the best and most authentic materials will go into the house.

This adherence to authenticity has led to problems such as trying to find glass like the old-fashioned, hand-poured variety used throughout the house.

Clues From Books

In order to stick to the original plans as closely as possible, Mr. Cotton did a great deal of research and picked up clues from Emily's own books.

He was mystified for a time by Emily's reference to a fireplace where the family often roasted meat over an open spit. A wall in the room turned out to be false and when torn down revealed the fireplace—a blackened ruin—behind it.

The unveiling also disclosed a bonus. A row of hidden shelves held several original clay pots signed by Emily Carr!

Another search of the Carr journals revealed that the ancient porcelain bathtub upstairs was not the original galvanized one. (Seems Miss Carr did a lot of her early writing in the biffy away from the prying, disapproving eyes of her older sisters).

However, the lead frame, smoky-glass windows in the bathroom are authentic and most of them are intact.

Cheap Paint Used

Since the Carr house changed hands a half a dozen times, serving as private residence, boarding house and finally lying vacant the past few years, the fine polished wood of the interior was covered with layers of cheap paint plastered on by countless tenants and landlords.

Fortunately, some original gold leaf molding in one front room escaped the heavy hand of the enamel slingers.

The front porch wasn't even original, nor was its predecessor. It cost $6,000 to reconstruct it with $2,500 of that going to create special knives to carve finials—ornamental tops—for the gables.

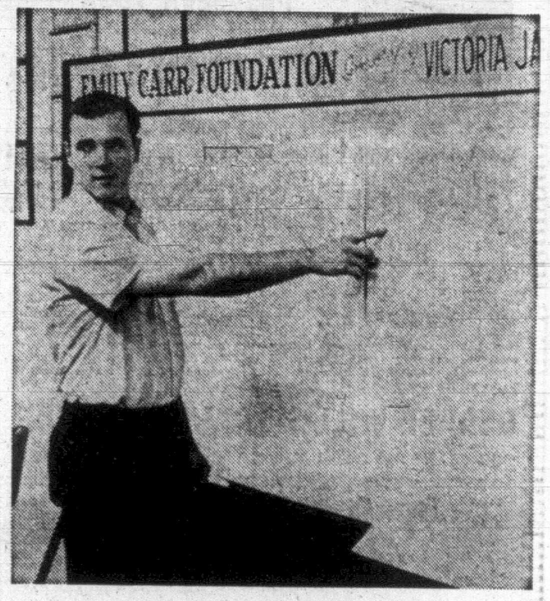
It will be impossible, at least at this time, to restore more than four of the five bays that bulged from the original structure. One was removed from the back after a kitchen fire and the city won't allow the reconstruction because it would bring the house within six feet of the property line.

Property Sought

The home was originally built on a 10-acre plot which was reduced to a city lot over the years and it is the hope of the Foundation that additional land surrounding the property can be acquired to provide a setting in keeping with the magnificence of the structure.

The city has intimated it will lend a hand in landscaping the present property.

The struggle to get the property to its present stage was greatly helped through the intervention of Jerry Gosley who was acting on his own behalf and as co-ordinator of the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee.



Chairman of the Emily Carr Foundation is Jaycees' past president, George Robbins, shown here pointing to plans of the next phase of the restoration job.

Gosley had little luck in setting any fires under the moribund Victoria Historical Society. He was, however, successful in routing an unwanted lodger in the house, saving some of the meagre furnishings (a comb, toaster and picture of Papa Carr) and interesting the Jaycees in its restoration.

But even the usually positive-thinking junior businessmen have become discouraged at times. President Lorne White says: "There are many government agencies and interested people who could donate money. Maybe they don't know about it.

"But it seems there are more real Emily Carr lovers in Eastern Canada than right in her home town.

"Businessmen, residents and the City of Victoria should consider the income possibilities even if they don't value the historical significance of the house. More than just tourist promotion and flower baskets, we need permanent attractions like this."

In an appeal for funds to finish the second phase by spring, Mr. White said: "The main thing now is to get it finished. We'll do it even if we have to go ahead on our own but it will drag on for a long time unless we get some assistance."

Happy Landing

Over the years, the furniture and personal belongings of the Carr family have found their way into private collections or have been destroyed.

In order to refurnish the interior in the style of the 1880s an appeal is being made to private collectors. One man in Seattle has offered a chandelier.

Chairman Robbins says donations are tax deductible and relates the story of a Victoria woman who phoned to say she was taking an airplane trip despite a premonition that the plane would crash.

She said she had made a will leaving all her furnishings to the Emily Carr Foundation.

Arthur Mayse

A sheep-rancher can dip his flock against mites and foot-rot, and the anxieties of lambing time are seasonal. But he has one enemy that may strike at any time, and when it does, the damage is not easily mended.

This is the sheep-running dog.

It may be a vicious and experienced killer, or it may be scarcely more than a pup in frolicsome mood. In either case, what a dog can do to a bunch of woolies is sheer murder.

This even if it doesn't grab and maul. Sheep are easily frightened. They bunch and run. By late fall, the ewes are heavy with young. In the natural course of things their lambs will be born in the winter months. Let dogs harry them into panic flight and they may miscarry. Or, even worse, their lambs may become twisted, a mischance that means loss of valuable stock in labor.

The loss to the rancher is more than financial. I never yet met a sheepman who didn't have a shepherd's feeling for his flock.

Once in a summer-dry creekbed I happened on the aftermath of a dog-raid. Close to 20 sheep had died there, close-packed under a cutbank. Some were mauled and torn; others hadn't a mark on them. They had succumbed to terror, shock and suffocation.

The rancher, a calm and friendly man, stood looking at the mess. His eyes were wet, he held a rifle in a white-knuckled grip, and it would have gone hard with any dog that poked its nose from cover.

★

The renegades, however, were hours gone, and we heard later that the unlicensed pair were shot while chasing a deer in the upriver woods.

Sheep and deer-running strays give Fish and Wild Life officers more tribulation than any other creature — man included — on this Island.

"They're our worse problem," he told me. "Name an area, and we've got dog trouble in it. Dogs cause far more grief than any cougar."

Game wardens get used to the early-morning sight of a weary dog, or a couple of dogs, mooching along the highway with tongues hanging out.

No wonder they're tired. They've made a night of it — put a deer into a lake or got in among somebody's sheep. For lack of direct evidence, they escape the fate that would be theirs had they been caught in the act.

This is to be shot out of hand.

I asked Bob Sinclair, a veteran of his service and of the old B.C. Provincial Police, if he knew any less-lethal cure for such dogs.

"Just one," he said. "For the owners to get off their buts, licence their dogs, and keep 'em under control."

In theory at least, the game-runner is doomed under the Game Protection Act, and the sheep-runner (who may be the same dog at another sport) by the Sheep Protection Act.

The latter also provides compensation for sheep mauled by dogs, from a fund financed by the dog tax in unorganized areas. Payment is only made in the case of attack by a dog or dogs that can't be identified. If the owner is known, the rancher's only course is to seek recompense from him in or out of court.

A department of agriculture spokesman says dog-trouble has multiplied in recent years, and that the Metchosin-Sooke area is the hot-spot of the province.

I asked him about dog-packs. As many as four sheep-runners have taken part in some raids reported, but the chasing of sheep-bands is much more often the work of two dogs or a single foot-loose canine.

The worst traitor of all is the rare sheep dog who is a model of virtue while working for his master, but who whips over the hill at night to beat up a neighbor's ewes.

The cougar is no friend to the sheepman, either. But the big cats will snatch one wool-bearer for food, whereas man's best friend, when once he acquires a taste for wool, can be a most unholy terror.

KNOTTED MASS of kelp is held dripping wet and worth money to members of Mount View senior secondary school band. From left, Marilyn Shaw, 17; band president Susan Stancombe, 16; Rick Carswell, 17, and Jim Harvey, 17, will collect seaweed Sunday for sale as fertilizer. Profits from sale will help finance band tour of northern British Columbia in spring and anyone wanting fertilizer should call 479-4537 or 479-3119. Trudeau Casts Eye On 'Republic' Idea

By JOHN SLINGER

Ottawa-watcher, columnist and author Peter C. Newman said today Prime Minister Trudeau may become the first president of Canada.

Because of the prime minister's concern with government efficiency, Mr. Newman says he thinks Mr. Trudeau "Sees the only hope of reform in a fundamental shift to a completely new system."

In an interview at the Empress Hotel, Mr. Newman, whose new book about the Pearson government, The Distemper of Our Times, is causing palpitations in Ottawa, was concerned that his ideas about Canada's move towards a republic be put in context.

He said he is aware that such an idea might find a prickly bed in Victoria.

However, "I feel that most Canadians regard the monarchy as irrelevant. I don't think anybody is wildly against it.

"But it is something that has very little to do with our way of life."

In town for an autograph session at Eaton's this afternoon, Mr. Newman stresses that the government change is not yet consciously thought out on Mr. Trudeau's part, "nor would it be an intended slight to the monarchy."

He said it is his "strong impression" that Mr. Trudeau will only be able to maintain his high reputation in Ottawa "by drastically changing the system."

BEST FEATURES OF BOTH

Indications of the move are the prime minister's staff of 28.

"In many ways it resembles a kind of miniature, northern version of Washington's White House staff."

And he adds that "by rationing his ministers during parliamentary question periods," Mr. Trudeau is working towards the congressional system which does not require the executive to always sit with the assembly.

"It may be that we will end up with the best features of both the parliamentary and the congressional systems, a step that would be firmly within the Canadian political tradition."

To leave the future fog a moment, how about the perils of Mr. Pearson as set out in the new book?

Without naming names, Mr. Pearson two days ago referred publicly to "those lucrative key-hole, strip-tease contributions, if not to the history, at least to the gossip of our times."

He said they relied on "second-hand pulsations from the psychiatrists couch."

Mr. Newman counters that Distemper is not a history, it is journalism.

There now is a need to record, soon after an event occurs, a close-hand account detailing the event giving some impression of its first effects.

When this account is later added to official documents, "it will be history."

The reason for this is that Distemper, in an appendix, includes what purport to be copies of official documents pertaining to the various crises of the Pearson years.

'BEYONG DISPUTE'

"The thing that pleases me," he said, is that no one is questioning the authenticity of the documents — "which is beyond dispute."

Mr. Newman said he has three primary sources: his own observations of what goes on, tape-recorded off-the-record interviews with the principals in any crisis and a "whole group of politicians."

These politicians, "who believe that the whole story should be told," keep diaries for the columist, he said. The diaries were needed, because with so much going on, "politicians have very short memories."

FORMER resident of Victoria who visited friends here last week, Thomas George Clinton, 45, was killed this week in a traffic accident in Toronto. He was branch manager of a life insurance company here and previous to that with the provincial police. He was transferred to Toronto six years ago.

Sniper's Bullet Beat the Clock And Spurred Search

By ED GOULD

It was one of life's ironies that Private J. L. Price was the last Canadian soldier to be killed in battle in the First World War.

It seems ironic too that the little white cross that marked his grave should be the subject of a search on Salt Spring Island, thousands of miles from Havre, France, 50 years later.

The cross was replaced with a permanent monument and sent to the soldier's parents who once lived on St. Mary Lake near Ganges.

They left it behind in a barn when they moved away years ago. Ken Byron, a Canadian soldier who now owns the property, recalled seeing the cross there but did not realize its significance until reading about it in the Royal Canadian Legion magazine.

Colonel Strome Galloway, now serving in Germany, explained in a letter to the magazine that a military cemetery near Mons, France, contains a permanent monument to the first and last soldiers to die in First World War conflict.

Lt. Martin Vease, VC, died Aug. 23, 1914, and Private Price was gunned down by a German sniper outside Havre, France at 10:58 a.m. Nov. 11, 1918.

Mr. Byron is away from his Salt Spring home most of the time and has reported repeated vandalism to his house and outbuildings. When he checked the barn the cross was missing. The RCMP think children are to blame.

The only real clue to the whereabouts of the cross came last week when Duncan Gurton of Sidney reported he found the cross last year on his summer property next door to Byrons'.

"Having no knowledge of its purpose, I placed it in a tree to keep it clear of the ground," he said.

However, the RCMP have since searched both properties without success.

The local Legion branch would like to recover the original cross of the young soldier who died two minutes before the armistice was signed and the First World War ended.

Five MLAs May Seek Leadership of NDP

Rookie Member First in Ring?

But, says Vancouver-Burrard MLA Tom Berger, after 12 years of Strachan leadership it would be "inappropriate" to announce a candidacy so soon after Mr. Strachan's Friday announcement that he will step down in April.

Besides Mr. Berger, the other likely candidates at the April 11 leadership convention in Vancouver are David Stupich, Nanaimo; Norman Levi, Vancouver South; David Barrett, Coquitlam, and Robert Williams, Vancouver East.

Only Mr. Levi, 41, has so far indicated he may seek the post. A social worker, he won his seat in a byelection last May.

ALL PROFESSIONAL MEN

Mr. Strachan said he was leaving to make way for a younger man and all five possible candidates are younger than the 54-year-old leader.

Also, by contrast, they are all professional men. Mr. Strachan, a carpenter, has had a strong labor-union orientation.

Mr. Berger, 35 and a lawyer, lost the leadership to Mr. Strachan by a two-to-one margin in 1967. He said he will announce his intentions next week.

Asked to comment on Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's statement that NDP expectations of victory in the next election are "pipedreams," Mr. Berger said Mr. Peterson is "whistling past the graveyard of the Social Credit regime."

He said the NDP now has 16 seats and "I'm firmly convinced we can win 16 more in this province—and that will give us the majority."

SPRING ELECTION

The party "has to go ahead on the assumption that there will be a spring election," he said. It was impossible to predict what Mr. Bennett might do.

So the April convention must not only produce a leader, it must generate enough excitement to increase and strengthen party ranks, Mr. Berger said.

Mr. Stupich, caucus chairman, said he will not make any announcement before next weekend's provincial council meeting in Vancouver.

He said he has not yet made a decision, it is too early. A 47-year-old chartered accountant, Mr. Stupich is oldest of the five.

Of Mr. Peterson's statement, Mr. Stupich said the attorney-general "knows his own party is in trouble" and is trying to build its flagging spirit.

'GOOD POSITION'

As indications of the discontent within Premier Bennett's cabinet, Mr. Stupich cited the disenchantment of former highways minister Phil Gagliardi—now minister without portfolio—and the departure of former attorney-general Robert Bonner.

"We're in a good position to form the government," he said.

Mr. Williams, a town planner, and Mr. Barrett, a social worker, could not be reached for comment, but Mr. Barrett has said he will consider his chances.

Mr. Berger said there had been no pressure from within the NDP caucus for the resignation of Mr. Strachan.

In making his announcement, Mr. Strachan said: "The New Democratic Party is very close to electoral victory and I feel that a younger man should be in the position to chart the course and carry the load of leadership through 20 years of government."

Alex Macdonald, a 50-year-old lawyer representing Vancouver East, has been mentioned as a candidate. The party's deputy leader, he said today he will have "no comment for another day or so."

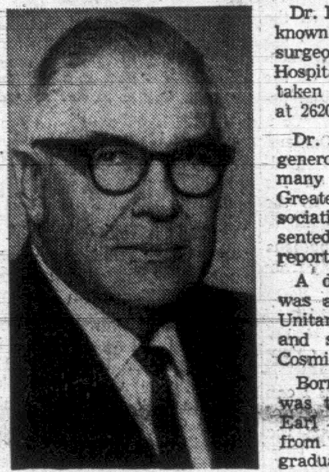
'GOOD FRIEND TO MANY'

City Psychiatrist Dies Suddenly at 62



DR. DOUGLAS ALCORN

Dr. Douglas Earl Alcorn, well-known city psychiatrist and surgeon, died in the Veterans' Hospital early today after being taken suddenly ill at his home at 2620 Lansdowne.

Dr. Alcorn, who was 62, gave generously of his services to many organizations, including Greater Victoria Alcoholic Association, and frequently presented medical and psychiatric reports in the law courts.

A deeply religious man, he was a leading member of the Unitarian Church of Victoria and spoke there recently on Cosmic Consciousness.

Born in Victoria, Dr. Alcorn was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Alcorn who came here from Fernie around 1900. He graduated in medicine at McGill University and subsequently trained at Guy's Hospital, London, England, and at hospitals in New York and Boston.

In 1942 at Christ Church Cathedral, Dr. Alcorn was married to Doreen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Lougheed of Victoria, who survives him.

"He was a good friend to many people in this city," said Rev. Harold T. Allen.

CENTRE IN SAANICH OPENS DEC. 8

Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre will be officially opened by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson on Friday, Dec. 8 at 2:30 p.m.

The $139,000 building on Hampton Road at Tillicum will be completed a few days before the opening, Mayor Hugh Stephen said Friday.

Planning and construction of the centre were guided by a joint committee of council and citizens under the chairmanship of Ald. Edith Gunning.

The centre will be available to Victoria Silver Threads and for various community events.

Police Again Seeking Mentally Sick Youth

A 14-year-old youth once described by a psychiatrist as mentally ill and capable of murder escaped from Brannan Lake school near Nanaimo Thursday night, police said Friday.

The youth, who was accompanied by a 15-year-old in the escape, had previously vanished from the institution in July but was recaptured.

$52 Million Tourist Season

Victoria's tourist season this year was as successful as it's ever been with a dollar turnover of $52 million.

"It could be a 10-per-cent increase," Michael Heppell, director of the Victoria Visitors Bureau, said today. "We don't know yet — it isn't the end of the year yet."

Despite a late start and poor weather during part of the tourist months, the number of visitors kept up to hopes.

'Madhouse' Start To Weekend

But if they were confused, a hapless dispatcher was even more so, and things went from bad to worse.

●

Due to heavy traffic, one bus didn't make it and wound up on the 7 p.m. sailing.

None of them made it.

An accident on the Oak Street Bridge tied up traffic so badly the police couldn't even get in to clear it.

The three buses which should have been on the 7 p.m. ferry — wound up on the 8 p.m. boat which subsequently made a stop at Otter Bay on Mayne Island. The buses arrived in Victoria at 10:55, along with two others that left at 7:05 from Vancouver for the 8 o'clock sailing.

Which all combined to send two buses into Victoria at 8:15, one at 9:45 and five at 10:55.

The dispatcher, who wishes to remain anonymous, said "people were getting more and more confused.

"I was trying to tell them what was going on, talk to Swartz Bay and Vancouver all at the same time.

Disturbance Draws Crowd

A crowd of 150 was attracted by the shouts and abusive language hurled at police officers by two men outside the Government Street liquor store Friday.

Donald W. Ofstie, 21, of 2537 Prior Street, and Bert Sinclair, 25, of 1579 Hillside, pleaded guilty before Magistrate Harold Alder in court today to causing a disturbance.

They were each fined $25.

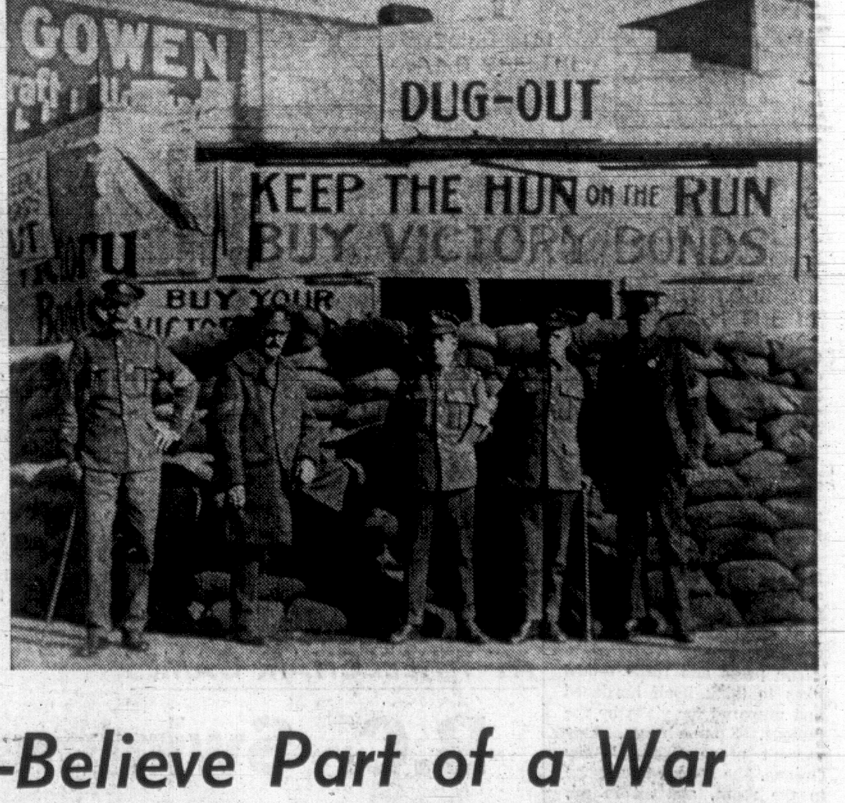
"I don't see why the public has to put up with this—put up with drunken louts," he said. "If they want to use abusive language they can do so on their own premises."



Make-Believe Part of a War

By PETE LOUDON

"A better 'ole" than the sandbagged trenches of Flanders was the make-believe fortification (above) at the corner of Fort and Government Streets on Nov. 11, 1918.

The German surrender found the city in the midst of a Victory Bond drive and the five soldiers who took turns as salesmen were all wounded vets.

They wore blue hospital arm bands and newly issued overseas service badges but no medals had yet been issued.

Curious Victorians were given a tour of the dug-out, shown a machine-gun, given a talk about how men died overseas. Then they were asked to sign on the dotted line.

Sales dropped off when word arrived of the armistice — there was no longer a need to "Keep the Hun on the run."

The war to end all wars was over, peace and prosperity stretched ahead forever and ever — or at least for 21 years, when the sad process was repeated.

Ex-servicemen of two wars and the Korean conflict will join in remembrance services here Monday at 11 a.m. at Victoria Centoaph and at the war memorials at Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Langford and Sidney.

NANCY'S COMMERCIAL CONTRACTS . . . . . . INCLUDE HELP-CANADA CLAUSES

Sharing New Gains Adds to Champ's Image

TORONTO (CP) — Nancy Greene, the pixie-faced world champion skier from Rossland, B.C., has stepped off the skis and onto her own personal bandwagon.

Since the 25-year-old Nancy deserted the amateur ski ranks after her second World Cup triumph last winter, she has become the most sought-after sports personality in Canada, after Bobby Hull and Gordie Howe.

And her public relations firm, Douglas D. Maxwell Ltd. of Toronto, estimates she could make $250,000 this year.

"But she won't, though," says Maxwell, who guides Nancy Greene Ltd. "She has turned down a lot of endorsements because she doesn't feel they fit her image.

"People want her in three different places on the same night. We've had as many as eight requests for one night. We're sort of arbitrators. We make a recommendation and she makes the final decision."

Maxwell, who works with two partners, Pete Esling and Bob Pugh, says Nancy has had only one day off in six months.

"That was on a Sunday in Vancouver. She took the day off to whip over to Rossland and pick up some clothes."

The Maxwell firm has doubled its staff since it got the Greene account.

"It's incredible," says Maxwell. "We didn't even make an approach to her. Someone suggested our company to her and she called us.

"At first we thought we'd have to do a lot of hard selling, presentations and pitches to advertisers, thinking up schemes to sell the Nancy Greene image.

"It's just the opposite. We spend most of our time on the phone saying 'Sorry. No.' There aren't enough hours in the day or days in the year to do all the things she could do."

Nancy picked Maxwell's company simply because it was Canadian. It was a Canadian issue with her from the first. American firms couldn't sell her with promises and Maxwell provided an incentive United States companies couldn't.

He said he could make money for her, but added she would be able to do things for skiing and Canadian sport. He gave her a few ideas on how she could give instead of take, and that was the clincher.

Now, six months after she went to Maxwell, almost everything she does has been wrapped around Canada's national ski team as well as herself.

She signed a three-year contract with General Motors' Pontiac division in July, and one of the first byproducts of that liaison was a 15-unit fleet of station wagons and vans for the exclusive use of the Canadian ski team.

"That's worth about $50,000 to the team right there," said Maxwell.

Then she signed with Mars, the candy company. One condition is that for each wrapper from certain bars collected on behalf of the Canadian team, the firm turns over one cent to the skiers.

The Berlitz School of Languages offered Nancy a $1,000 three-week total immersion course in French for her endorsement. She said yes—on condition that the other members of the team got it too. That meant 31 courses for a total package of $30,000.

She has a two-year contract with British Columbia Telephone for personal appearances at ski clubs, youth meetings and university gatherings. In return, the company will run in phone service at almost every hill in Western Canada for ski races this winter.

"She has asked them to help and as a result, every ski race in Western Canada this year has gone professional and will be a first-class promotion," said Maxwell.

Nancy also has equipment deals with a ski company, boot companies, a pole firm and is a member of Prime Minister Trudeau's investigating team on sports.

A picture book of Nancy's achievements is going to press. She is also writing a column for a U.S. magazine, has autographed silver spoons and will tour most of Canada and parts of the U.S. this winter, doing her bit for the ski team.

NANCY GREENE
. . . charming champ

Greene Charm Great

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Because she has decided to capitalize on her fame as a world ski champion, Nancy Greene is classed as a professional.

Her heart, however, still belongs to the amateurs.

Like a refreshing wind, the world's best female skier breezed through Victoria in whirlwind fashion Friday. She said howdy to about 1,000 high school students at Esquimalt High, broke bread with and talked to the press, met a university crowd, then dashed off to Vancouver.

Despite all the energy required, she maintained a freshness and sparkle that charmed all. Her opinions are sincere and honest. She says what she thinks, talks freely and readily. The Rossland lass still considers herself a "small-town miss" and her home-spun manners were an obvious delight to all who met her.

* * *

There were many conversations Friday. Nancy Greene chatted as long and as well as anyone ... but rarely about Nancy Greene or Nancy Greene's exploits.

Mainly, the talks leaned to skiing and amateur sports.

She opened her luncheon interview with the press and radio by asking the newsmen: "Tell me, how much space do you fellows give amateur sports?"

That set 'em all back on their defensive heels.

It became obvious later that the newest member of Prime Minister Trudeau's team investigating sports plans to "make good." Such is her desire that she doesn't hesitate to jab at politicians, sports leaders, sportswriters or anyone else who may stand in the way of improving the amateur's outlook.

* * *

She believes, for example, that amateur sports and the Canada Fitness Council should be divorced from the federal Department of Health and Welfare.

"If you try to get a sports grant, you have to go through 13 different channels — and nine of those departments are in health and welfare."

The size of the federal grants "satisfy" Nancy but, swining at sports leaders, she feels available funds "can be used more effectively" than in the past.

The press and radio crowd likes to think itself hardened and prepared for visits by the famous. Somehow, they weren't prepared for Nancy Greene. She softened everyone in the room, and all in all, proved a charming champion.

Future Uncertain For Danish Stars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Whips of the disbanded North American Soccer League have announced that its players are now free agents.

Six Danish players—Joergen Hendriksen, Kaj Hansen, John Worbye, Finn Willy Soernsen, Henning Boel and Niels Hoettel—are undecided on their future plans.

Surroundings New But Seals the Same

OAKLAND (CP)—Oakland Seals moved into a new arena for their National Hockey League game Friday night, but just about everything else remained the same.

Playing the first of five games this season at San Francisco's Cow Palace, the Seals lost 3-2 to New York Rangers in front of a crowd of only 6,082.

It was the seventh loss in 12 games this season for the Seals who also play to small crowds at Oakland.

GILBERT FIRES WINNER

There was no scoring in the first period, but the teams exchanged four goals in the second. Gilbert's fifth goal of the season at 12:48 of the final period was the winner.

He suggested the team, which has a record of 8-2-1, is not playing as Stanley Cup champions should.

"There are a few things I can tell them," he said. "And one of them is that we're losing the puck too much in our end. They expect the puck to come back to them without working for it."

Ruel threatened to hold stiffer practices.

Kickers Loom As Key Figures

CALGARY (CP)—A place-kicking contest between two former rookies-of-the-year may decide the Western Football Conference sudden-death semi-final Sunday between Edmonton Eskimos and Calgary Stampeders.

If previous games between the clubs this season are any indication, Peter Kempf of Edmonton, who won the rookie award in 1963, and Larry Robinson of Calgary, top rookie in 1961, will have a busy afternoon.

The 1 p.m. PST contest here will be televised nationally by the CTV network (Channel 8 in the Victoria area).

Kempf, in the Canadian Football League for six years, led Eskimo scorers in three games against the Stampeders with 12 points. He booted three field goals and three converts.

Edmonton topped Calgary in two of the games, winning 14-13 and 10-8 while losing 12-7. In the first victory, Kempf booted a 38-yard field goal and in the other he kicked a 46-yarder.

Meanwhile, Edmonton coach Neill Armstrong said Friday it appears unlikely that fullback Art Perkins, out since Sept. 22 with a knee injury, will be able to play Sunday.

He was scheduled to come off the injury reserve list today.

In two appearances against Calgary this season, Perkins scored a touchdown and gained 66 yards on 18 carries. Halfback Jim Thomas was Edmonton's top rusher with 169 yards on 27 carries, including his longest touchdown run of the season, 59 yards in the Oct. 20 contest.

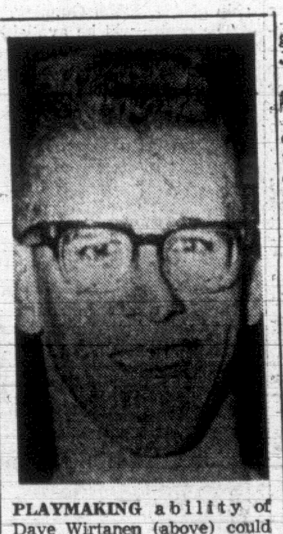
No Second Chances For Juvenile Squads



PLAYMAKING ability of Dave Wirtanen (above) could be big weapon for Victoria Chinooks as they battle for first place in Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League with Vancouver Killarney. Chinooks and Killies clash tonight at 8:45 and Sunday at 2:15 at Central Junior High School. Mini-league games will be played as preliminaries to both junior tussles.

There are no second chances in the sudden-death semi-finals.

Chew Excavating Hornets carry an impressive record into their game against defending champion Cowichan Timbermen in Glanford Avenue Park. Hornets were undefeated and untied in eight league games.

Both Pat Griffin and Ken Skinner, out with broken collarbones early in the season will be back in the Hornets' lineup. The return of Griffin brings to three the number of quarterbacks available for the test. John Smith and Dave Granlin are the other play-callers.

In the other contest, James Bay Mustangs will be backing star ball-carrier John Howe when they collide with Oak Bay Farmer Construction at Macdonald Park.

Both games start at 2 p.m., with the Island championship to be decided the following weekend.

AT WHEELCHAIR GAMES

B.C. Swimmer Third

TEL AVIV, Israel (CP) — Gunther Schuster of Vancouver won a bronze medal Friday by finishing third in the men's 50-metre freestyle Class 3 swimming event at the third Wheelchair Olympics for paraplegics.

Schuster, a 40-year-old paraplegic, was timed in 48 seconds. Gold medalist in the event was Ingel of Australia, timed in 42.1 seconds.

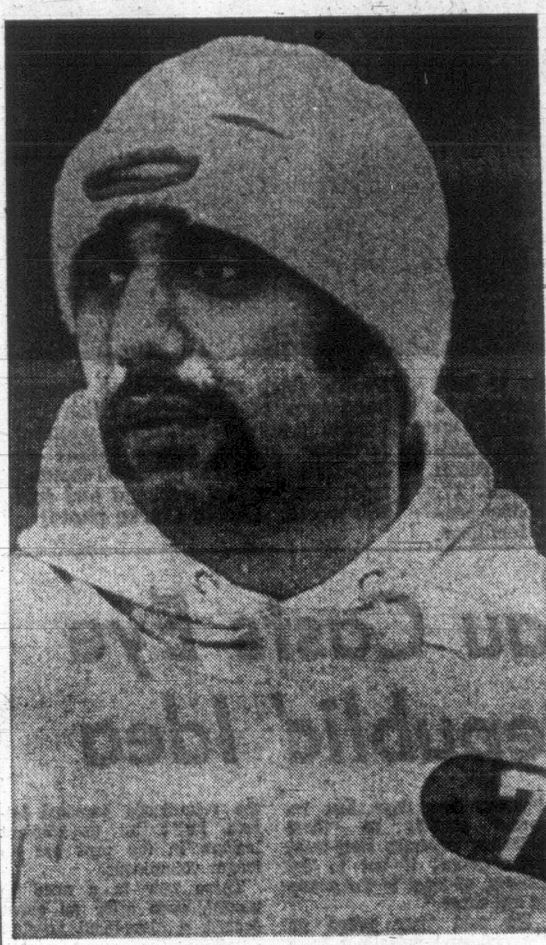
Walter Schmid, also from Vancouver, was beaten 11-4 by Britain's John Britton in the men's bowling competition. Britton's victory advanced him to the finals.

A contingent of 23 Canadians are competing in the games for paraplegic athletes from 28 countries, being held at Ramat Gan, near here.

Italy's 24-year-old paralyzed swimmer, Roberto Marson won three gold medals Friday and Britain's Bill Thornton smashed the world Paralympic record in the 50-metre breaststroke for his grade of paralysis with a time of 58.1 seconds.

Rhodesian swimmers won three gold medals with Les Manson-Bishop winning two men's swimming races, and Andrew Scott one. Leonard Chrysler of Comptche, Calif., won a gold medal in the 50-metre backstroke and freestyle, class 3 complete, and Edward Owen of Champaign, Ill., won the class 5 backstroke.

Sylvia Cochetti of Argentina dominated field events, winning gold medals in the discus and shotput, a silver in the club throw and a bronze in the javelin.



MATTER OF IDENTITY?

Quarterbacks in pro football are usually marked men and Joe Namath of New York Jets certainly has gone out of way to be different from run-of-the-mill signal-callers. He's now sporting this "Fu Manchu" special as he prepares for Sunday's big American League game against Houston Oilers. (AP Wirephoto)

Vikings Face Bears For Tourney Crown

EDMONTON — University of Victoria Vikings and University of Alberta Golden Bears will clash tonight in the championship game of the Western Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament.

Both clubs breezed to impressive victories Friday night. The Vikings whipped University of Calgary Dinosaurs 97-66 while the Bears mauled University of Lethbridge Bobcats 135-42.

Every Viking got into the scoring act as Brian Brumwell, who picked off 20 rebounds and dunked eight points, and Corky Jossual, who fired 18 points, played standout roles.

Other contributions to the Victoria attack were made by Brian Craig (13 points), John Lauvaas (12), Tom Hatcher (10), Barry Burch (10), Mike Taffe (9), Skip Cronk (7), Stan Piper (4) and Don Frampton (4).

WEST PLAYOFF ONE OF MANY GAMES ON TV

Victoria's pro football fans will again find plenty of variety on television screens Sunday.

Most interest will probably centre on the Western Football Conference semi-final, which has Edmonton at Calgary in a sudden-death battle. That one is scheduled for Channel 8 at 1 p.m.

* * *

Dial switchers can watch action in one American League game — San Diego at Boston (Channel 5 at 10:30)— and three National League battles — San Francisco at Chicago (Channels 7 and 12 at 10:30), Pittsburgh at St. Louis (Channels 2 and 6 at 11) and New York at Dallas (Channels 7 and 12 at 1).

* * *

For a change of pace, final action in the Hawaiian Open golf tournament is slated for Channel 5 at 3 and two college football games are offered (8:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.).

On Monday, the Canadian junior football final goes on Channel 2 at noon and the Washington-Stanford game is scheduled for Channel 4 at 6:30.

City Squads Enter Field Hockey Event

Two teams from Victoria will be taking part in the Pacific Northwest field hockey tournament in Trafalgar Park at Vancouver at the weekend.

One team is the University squad and the other a combination of players from Mariners, Oak Bay and Grasshoppers.

Grads Get Most Wins In Action at Oak Bay

Grads had the most fun in Friday's athletic events that climaxes the annual homecoming week at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School.

They chalked up victories in almost everything but the boys' basketball game, and in that one it took a strong second-half surge to get the school students home with a 45-41 triumph.

In earlier competitions, the Grads had scored a 40-17 win in girls' basketball and topped the current crop of students in boys' cross-country running, girls' and boys' volleyball, soccer and rugby.

Nancy Love scored the other win for the students when she took the girls' cross-country gallop and the girls' field hockey clash ended in a 2-2 tie.

Grads fashioned a 27-17 lead in the first half of the boys' basketball game but Don Burrows scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half to pace the school team to the narrow victory. Brain McKenzie, also with 15 points, was the scoring leader for the Grads.

Greg Pearson scored twice as Grads took the soccer match 5-1, Bruce Panton notched two trys to help Grads to a 12-0 rugby win, and graduate Larry Corbett finished first in the boy's cross country.

Largest crowd ever to attend homecoming festivities, more than 900, watched the basketball and most stayed for the dance that wound up the day's action.

Vic High Thumps University Team

Victoria High School found a soft touch in the opening game of the Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League season Friday, romping to an 81-13 triumph over University School.

Gord Hoshal (18 points), Barry Moen (16), Ian MacLean (14) and Dave Mulcahy (13) spearheaded the Vic High attack.

Button-Holders Repel Challenge

Surging Essos Maintain Jinx Over Broncos

If some of Vernon Essos' magic can rub off on other B.C. Junior Hockey League clubs, Penticton Broncos may very well be called back into a tight little circle.

The Broncs threatened to make a runaway of first place — until they ran into Vernon this week.

Odie Lowe's Essos gassed Penticton for the second straight time Friday, 7-6, and reduced Broncos' lead to three points. It was Vernon's third straight victory this week and helped lift the Essos from last to second place, one point ahead of Victoria, Kelowna Buckaroos and Kamloops Rockets.

GAME TONIGHT

No other team has managed to defeat Penticton although Cougars get another chance when the Broncos bust into Memorial Arena tonight. Game time is 8:30.

In another game Friday, Kamloops and the Buckaroos joined Cougars in third place by playing to a scoreless draw at Kelowna.

Penticton blew a 5-0, first-period lead and Vernon also was able to overcome a one-sided penalty toll. Three of Penticton's goals came while Vernon was short-handed.

Vernon was tagged with eight minors, two majors and a misconduct in the game. The hometown Broncos drew four minors and a major.

EVANS FALLS BEHIND

Vernon also capitalized on penalties to score three goals, including the winning and insurance goals in the third period.

Vernon's Larry Quechuk, with a goal and three assists, and Ed Hays of Penticton, with three goals, both pulled ahead of Victoria's Grant Evans in the individual scoring race.

At Kelowna, the Rockets and Bucks fired a total of 78 shots but failed to connect on any.

John Bade, Kamloops' goaltender, made 34 saves and Ron Pyle of Kelowna made 44, to record the first shutouts in the BCJHL this season before a crowd of 780, who paid them roaring tribute.

Bade made phenomenal saves on breakaways, including one in the third period by Cliff McKay. McKay pulled Bade out and fired the puck for a corner of the net but Bade just managed to get a toe to it.

Rookie Leads In First Start

HONOLULU (AP) — Ken Ellsworth, who never played in a pro tour golf tournament before, was leading the pack at the halfway mark of the Hawaiian International.

Ellsworth of Los Angeles posted a 67 Friday in the second round over the par-72 Waialae course and took a one-stroke lead with a total of 133. He had 66 Thursday.

A stroke back was another Californian, Dick Lotz, who shot 69 after an opening 65. That gave him 134, the same as opening-round leader George Archer, another Californian, who shot a 70 Friday after a course record-equalling 64 Thursday.

HOLE-IN-ONE

Gene Littler's 66 was the lowest round, and he had to make a hole-in-one for that. It came on the 190-yard seventh, where he used a five iron. He and nine others had a 141 total.

Arnold Palmer had two 71s for a 142. Pre-tourney favorite Bill Casper was a stroke back of that.

Mac McLendon, only six months on the tour himself, posted a 70 after an opening 66 for 136.

The field was cut to the low 79 scores for the final two rounds. The cutoff was at 146. Master's champion Bob Goalby was among those who didn't make it.

Track Next Aim For Boys' Club

Victoria Boys' Club is holding a meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the club's 1240 Yates Street location for all persons interested in forming a track and field club.

The club's age group ranges from eight to 20 years. Further information is available by telephoning Ken Smith at 383-1101 or 385-1114.

Britain's Equestrians Threaten U.S. Reign

NEW YORK (AP) — The four-year reign of the United States Equestrian Team as champion of the National Horse Show was threatened today by Great Britain.

The two teams were tied at 36 points each, but the British squad appeared to be getting stronger with each international event in Madison Square Garden.

Friday night, Alison Westwood, 23, captured the Good Will Challenge Trophy on The Maverick. Her teammate, David Broome, finished third aboard Mister Softee, bronze medal winner in this year's Olympics.

The one-three finish pulled the British team—soundly trounced in last year's visit to the National—into a tie with the United States.

Miss Westwood also pulled herself into contention for the individual title. She and teammate Harvey Smith each have 16 points. Kathy Kusner leads the U.S. riders with 10 points.

In the Good Will event, only The Maverick and Salem, ridden by Carol Hofmann of the U.S., managed to go clean over the eight-jump abbreviated course. But The Maverick was clocked 28.8 seconds to 32.1 for Salem.

Horse Sale Sets Record Average

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Final figures of the recent All-American Quarter Horse Congress sale here show it was the highest average sale in the country this year.

Nationals Trounce Norway

BERGEN (CP) — Superior speed and stick-handling carried Canada's touring national hockey team to a 7-2 victory over the Norwegian nationals Friday in the first of two exhibition matches.

Defenceman Jack Taggart, a university student from Penticton, and forward Chuck Lefley, the biggest member of the squad, each scored two goals for the Canadians.

SEVEN-A-SIDE TOURNAMENT SET MONDAY

Oak Bay Wanderers of the first division Victoria Rugby Union play host to a seven-a-side tournament Monday at 10 a.m. in Macdonald Park.

Each team in the Victoria Union will field two clubs and visiting sides also are expected from Vancouver, including Meralomas and North Shore All-Blacks.

Seventeen teams will play seven minute halfs under the elimination style competition.

Only Students Miss Puck Jam

Traffic jams seem to be the fashion this season in the Vancouver Island Hockey League and today only the University of Victoria Vikings have that "left out" feeling.

Accustomed to setting the pace in the four-team circuit at Esquimalt Sports Centre in recent seasons, the Vikings are the only club without a share of the top berth.

They skidded two points off the pace Friday night when they dropped a 3-2 decision to Stockers North Americans after Queen's Own Rifles had opened the twin-bill with a 4-0 conquest of Butler Brothers to create a tie for the league lead.

George Ede, Jim Murphy and Len Desjardins shot the Rifles into a 3-0 lead in the opening period and Dave Stones wrapped up the scoring with a second-period goal.

STANDOUT EFFORTT

Goalie Joe Rozon turned in another standout game for the Rifles, turning aside 19 shots as he trimmed his goals-against average to a neat 1.33.

Nick Nicoletti was the hero for Stockers, drilling the winning shot behind Uvic goalie Jack Legette with only two minutes remaining.

Vikings went ahead in the first period on a goal by Larry Ellis and held the margin until Don Lancaster evened the count at 7:30 of the third session. Les Bergman sent Stockers ahead at 2-1 with five minutes left to play but Vikings needed only a few seconds to make it 2-2 on Mike McAvoy's goal.

With a tie appearing probable, Nicoletti sent the Uvic students down to defeat and got Stockers into the jam when he conntected on a drive from the blueline.

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
QOR	4	2	1	1	13	8	5
Butler Brothers	5	2	2	1	13	14	5
Stockers	5	2	2	1	10	11	5
Vikings	4	1	2	1	10	13	3

Next games: Friday — Victoria Cougars vs. Butler Brothers (exhibition) 7:45; Stockers vs. QOR 9:15.

Six City Players Start With Wins

VANCOUVER — Six of seven players from Victoria chalked up victories in their matches Friday during early rounds of the Vancouver Racquet Club invitational squash racquets tournament.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Hitting top little later than last season, Emile Liska has earned men's fivepin award in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest in fifth week of annual competition. Rolling in Mixed Classic League at Gibson's Recreations, Emile fired first game of 279 and followed with two games of 301 for 881 total.

Spurs Withstand Late Totem Rally

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Denver Spurs withstood a four-goal spurt by Seattle Totems in the third period and won their second Western Hockey League game 7-5 Friday night before 2,800 fans.

Veteran winger Lou Jankowski scored two goals for Spurs, his second about a third of the way through the final period, to clinch the game for Denver.

Denver is in the league cellar with five points in 13 games and Totems are fourth with 13 points. San Diego has 20 points, Portland 17, Vancouver 14 and Phoenix nine.

Seattle and Denver meet here again tonight and San Diego is at Portland.

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
San Diego	13	9	2	2	49	30	20
Portland	12	7	2	3	44	32	17
Vancouver	14	6	6	2	42	41	14

Introducing the Volkswagen automatic stick shift.

Why it's automatic.

First of all, it doesn't have a clutch pedal.

Second of all, even though it still has a shift lever, you don't get to shift it very much.

When you want to go somewhere you just move the stick shift forward. Then leave it there. You can drive all over town (even in stop and go traffic) with the shift in that one position and never have to touch it again.

Out on the highway you shift into cruising gear, which is like an overdrive, to save on gas.

And that's about it.

Except there's a low for steep hills, snow or mud. And of course, a reverse for going backwards.

But all in all, you don't get to touch the shift very much when you drive the VW automatic stick shift.

It drives you.

Why it's a stick shift.

It's a stick shift because it still has a stick you can shift.

So that means if you're the kind of person who likes to shift for himself, you can.

The Volkswagen automatic stick shift gives you a choice: you can drive it the lazy way (see left) or, whenever the old sports car bug hits you, you can start out in low and take it through the gears 1, 2, 3, just like a regular stick shift. (And get some pretty lively acceleration doing it.)

The Volkswagen automatic stick shift is available as optional equipment on the Bug and Karmann Ghia.

Why not take it for a test drive?
You've got nothing to lose,
except a clutch.

'Paper Ambassadors' Tell All

Stamp Corner

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Most collectors like to know the stories behind their stamps. It's quite simple to trace a country's history through their "paper ambassadors." A state I have found of particular historical and philatelic interest is the monarchy and republic of Hawaii.

In January, 1778, Capt. James Cook (1728-79) discovered the Hawaiian archipelago. (In 1928, the U.S. issued two overprints to mark the 150th anniversary of this discovery.) At the time of Cook's discovery, Hawaii was divided into three or four separate kingdoms. One of these kings gradually conquered his rivals, and by 1795 he was king of all of Hawaii.

He was Kamehameha I (1736-1819), the progenitor of the ruling Hawaiian dynasty. He was a wise, strong-willed man of quick perception. Three similar stamps featuring the famous bronze statue of this monarch were issued. (Scott's U.S. No. 779 also features this statue.) In 1819, Kamehameha II ascended to his father's throne. (A year later, the first missionaries arrived.) He died in 1824. In 1825, the young Kamehameha II became sovereign.

The first Hawaiian stamps were issued in 1851-52. They were typeset printed by missionaries in simple designs. In 1853, three similar stamps appeared with a portrait of Kamehameha II. He died in 1854 after a long progressive reign.

From 1855 to 1863, King Kamehameha IV and his wife Queen Emma ruled Hawaii. Stamps of two different designs bear likenesses of this king. A portrait of Queen Emma appears on the $1 rose-red value of 1883. In 1863, Kamehameha IV's brother Kamehameha V obtained the crown. He governed until his death in 1872. Portraits of him are on four Hawaiian stamps of two different designs.

In 1873, a grandson of Kamehameha I, William Lunalilo, came to the throne. He had a short rule; he died in 1874. A 50c red stamp came out in 1883 to honor him. His death marked the end of the great Kamehameha ruling dynasty.

Next year, the United States will release a stamp to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the founding of Memphis, Tenn. This stamp will also honor W. C. Handy (1873-1958), the Negro composer, bandmaster and cornetist. Among others, he composed St. Louis Blues, and Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen. One of his earliest engagements was the Chicago World's Fair in 1893.

On Nov. 6, Malawi issued four Christmas pictorials. The 4d value features the Nativity by Piero de' Franceschi (c. 1416-92), the Italian painter. The 9d stamp depicts The Adoration of the Shepherds by the Spaniard Bartolome Esteban Murillo (1617-82). The 1s 6d denomination features The Adoration of the Shepherds by the Italian painter Guido Reni (1575-1642). The final pictorial (3s) bears The Nativity with God the Father and Holy Ghost" by the Italian artist Giovanni Battista Pittoni (1687-1767).

This year's Candian T.B. Christmas seals were designed by the Montreal-born graphic designer Maurice Picard, who is an avid hockey fan. No doubt his enthusiasm for this sport motivated him to feature skaters in his seal designs. These colorful seals were printed by Rolph, Clarke and Stone Ltd. of Toronto. Although the seals were mailed out late last month, the official date of issue is Nov. 12.

On Nov. 1, Dominica issued four overprints of definitive stamps to mark National Day. Values: 1c, 2c, 3c, 14c and $1.20. These stamps are overprinted: National Day, 3 November 1968. National Day is the anniversary of Dominica's discovery in 1493 by Christopher Columbus (c. 1446-1506).

The Republic of San Marino will release three stamps Dec. 5 featuring Nativita Mistica by Sandra Botticelli (1444-1510). This artistic work is in the National Gallery in London. The values of these stamps are: 50-lira, 90-lira and 180-lira. This will probably be a popular set.

San Marino is situated in northern Italy; 12 miles south west of Rimini, and about 20 miles inland from the Adriatic Sea. This nation which encompasses 38 square miles is the smallest and oldest republic in the world.

Tradition holds that San Marino was founded late in the fourth century A.D. by St. Marinus. Most of San Marino's 16,000 inhabitants raise cattle and produce wine; building stone is exported to some extent. Since 1877, this tiny state has issued many colorful and interesting stamps, but far in excess of their actual postal needs. One of the persons honored on a number of San Marino's commemoratives is the Italian patriot Guiseppe Garibaldi (1807-82), who passed through San Marino in 1849.

●

The Cayman Island Christmas stamps described in last week's column will be issued on Nov. 18, rather than Nov. 1 as originally announced.

MD Says Transplant Trend Won't Dent Rate of Deaths

By AL EATON

VANCOUVER (CP) — All the heart transplants in the world will never make a serious dent in national death statistics, the new president of the Canadian Cardiovascular Society said Friday.

Dr. R. E. Beamish of Winnipeg said he didn't want to detract from the important work of transplants, but a program of preventive heart medicine could achieve much more.

"Insertion of valves, pacemakers and new hearts deal only with the end result of the disease," he said.

"If you had 1,000 transplant teams working 24 hours the work achieved would not be significant to national statistics.

EMPHASIS ON DIET

The program must embrace both doctors and public with emphasis placed on diet, he told the society's convention.

"For years there was some doubt, but the time has come when we must accept the advantages of low-fat diets."

Dr. Beamish said a chart he kept on heart disease deaths in 21 nations showed a close parallel with fat intake.

The United States had the highest death rate, with Canada second. He said Finland leads the world in coronary deaths but was not listed on the charts he kept. The island of Crete had virtually no such deaths.

Smoking has a definite effect on the heart, but the heart of anyone who quits the habit returns quickly to the state of that of a non-smoker, he aded.

The new Bonds have fourteen regular annual interest coupons which can be cashed each year as they come due. The first pays 5.75%; the second, 6.50%; the next three, 6.75% each, and the last nine a big 7.00% each. Total regular annual interest amounts to $95.50 on each $100 Bond.

If you choose you may hold all these regular annual interest coupons uncashed until your Bond matures. If you do, you will then get interest on your interest totalling an additional $54.50 on each $100 Bond.

At maturity, therefore, you can get back total interest of $150 plus your original $100 investment. This way each $100 Canada Savings Bond becomes worth $250. Other denominations can grow at the same exciting rate.

Adults, children, businesses and institutions—all may buy Canada Savings Bonds. They are available in convenient amounts of $50 up to $50,000 for cash or on instalments, wherever you work, bank or invest. And, as always, Canada Savings Bonds are cashable any time at full face value plus earned interest.

Few investments are so profitable. None builds more surely for the future. Buy Canada Savings Bonds and make your savings really grow.

Forget Nudity, Beware Guns

By AL FORREST

This week bare breasts on TV predictably upset the nation while the film's message condoning violence slipped by almost unotticed.

On The Way It Is on CBC-TV Patrick Watson introduced a study of the Chicago convention riot between police and students.

The film's message to young people: "If you really believed in peace you'd shoot a cop."

Those boys and girls painting each other were actors. It was a phony orgy.

WATSON
. . . way it may be

Meanwhile the film's main messages go unprotested.

For example:

"If you really want to love you have to hate."

And:

The sequences of police clobbering teen-agers flash by again and again and the commercial continues:

"Sometimes violence is necessary. They're doing it to you, the time has come to do it to them."

The film makes out a strong case for the inevitability of student violence. Not the desirability, the inevitability.

The student activist movement thrives on publicity and confrontation. Without both, it withers and dies.

Sit-ins are becoming commonplace. Often they are ignored by police and press. Even bombings of houses is for the press.

When homes of aircraft firms were rattled by bombs becoming too commonplace in Toronto a few weeks back, it was a headline story and all TV networks rushed cameramen to the scene.

But this week a similar outbreak brought scant attention. It had become part of the peacenik's routine method of protest.

If violence against buildings is to be ignored by The Establishment, the young activists have nowhere to go but to escalate or fade away.

Escalation means violence against people.

When it happens, when teenagers take up guns against The Establishment, the activist movement will destroy itself. It will collapse in an orgy of destruction and the young people will have nobody to blame but themselves.

They may accept the CBC film as a call to arms. Or they may interpret it as a call to common sense.

Perhaps they may be spared their self-induced Armaggedon.

The southern Island is blessed with some of the best movies in some months with the best film of 1967 The Family Way showing at the Oak Bay Theatre. The best musical ever, West Side Story is showing downtown and the sleeper of 1967, What Did You Do In The War, Daddy? is playing in Sidney. War might not sound amusing but this film is surprisingly funny.

●

The U.S. election was well-covered on TV and the computers were deadly accurate in their projections.

They were so precise that one almost began to hope they would goof it up with something like:

"Yes, here's the first returns from the computer now and it shows that the first vote in Maine was cast for George Wallace. And the computer projects that if this trend continues he will win the election."

"A LOVELY NIGHT and a lovely ball . . . and you and I are alone in the hall . . . Wheee!" With a whoop the Wicked Stepmother (Jerry Gosley) leaps into the astonished arms of the Duke (Stewart Paul) in a scene from Cinderella, Bastion Theatre's musical for children at McPherson Playhouse. The matinee performances which have delighted audiences will conclude next Saturday at 2 p.m.

GENERATION OPENS THURSDAY

'Warm, Wonderfully Witty'

William Goodhart's play has been described as "warm and wonderfully witty," and is entitled simply, Generation. It will open a 10-day run at the McPherson, Thursday.

Timothy Bond, recipient of two Canada Council grants and a Ford Foundation performing arts scholarship, is the director.

The cast is a mixture of local and imported talent. Victorians taking part include Jamie Craig, Owen Foran, Robert Price and Tim Devlin.

Henry Fonda played in the original Broadway production as the father who returns to New York to find his daughter has made a just-in-time marriage with a hippie-appearing young man and is living in a Manhattan warehouse.

RPA Productions is bringing Barney O'Sullivan to Victoria for the role. He is the actor who scored a success in it when Generation was performed in Vancouver last year.

Co-starring with Mr. O'Sullivan is Holly Turner who played the daughter opposite Mr. Fonda for nine months on Broadway in 1966.

Decade of Tours Develops Mature, Confident Team

It is exactly 10 years since the Canadian Opera Company undertook its first tour of a chamber style opera with piano accompaniment at the request of Canada Council.

The venture in 1958 took in only the Maritime provinces. The opera chosen was Rossini's Barber of Seville. It toured for four weeks with a total of 19 sponsored performances in 17 communities.

In 1967 the company was on the road for 17 weeks, the longest tour to date.

The 10th anniversary tour of the western provinces has again as its vehicle, Barber of Seville. But there are differences.

CONFIDENT

A decade of touring, plus the addition of an eight-week repertory season in Toronto, has developed, under the general director, Herman Gieger-Torel, a mature, confident company.

Also, a full orchestra now accompanies the opera group on its tours as the result of an extra Canada Council grant.

On Dec. 1 and 2 the Canadian Opera Company, sponsored by Victoria Symphony Society, will present The Barber of Seville at the Royal Theatre.

TWO EXTRAS

This is the first of two extra events in Victoria Symphony season.

As a matter of policy, the opera will be sung in English and its stars include some of Canda's best regarded singers. These include Jan Rubes who alternates with Maurice Brown in the role of Don Basilio, the highly comic music teacher, Cornelis Opthof and Alexander Grey alternating as that most famous of barbers, Figaro; and Sheila Piercey and Dodi Protero who share the coloratura role of the lovely Rosina.

Full of Joy and Beer . . . Brahms Breaks Out

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Serenade No. 2 in A Major Op. 16; Academic Festival Overture; Johannes Brahms; Claudio Abbado. Berlin Phil. DGG 139371.

Brahms was seldom dissociated for long from a brooding gloom which shadowed his music and lent it a mellowing pathos but in his Academic Festival Overture, his fun-loving breaks free from the "bracing pessimism" which so often restrained it.

To end the overture, after a blood-pressure-raising buildup, "Gaudeamus," the most familiar of all the songs on which the work is based, erupts into the most joyous burst of sound.

It is not the volume, nor the brass-blazened melody, but the cascading sonic fireworks against which the broad melody is heard that touches some basic, primeval response in the listener.

BLAZING OUT

Claudio Abbado lets this passage blaze out in all the glory of its abandoned unrestraint and recompenses us for the tired, timed versions we have all been subjected to from time to time.

The brass is excellent and the conductor exploits the jarring thrill of brass ensemble playing to the full. The woodwinds are clear and beautifully played and the strings seldom sound shrill.

Some details of orchestration are not as clearly audible as on more careful, scholarly recordings—comparison with Bruno Walter's version with the Columbia Symphony on MS 6868 will show that some details are completely missed on the DGG disc but the overall effect is far more satisfactory than Walter's more discreet interpretation.

COMIC SOUNDS

Walter brings out the lyric quality of many of the songs and uses comic instrumental sounds to bring humor to his interpretation but he approaches the grand splash passages with untimely delicacy.

Abbado's performance is more dramatic, vivid and wild but this is balanced by the quality of both the recording technique and the instrumental playing which brings a softer, more mellow tone to the DGG recording.

Brahms was often criticized for composing "with his ear firmly glued to the past" and, though his Serenade No. 2 Op. 16 is unmistakably Brahmsian in its use of woodwinds, the opening bars have considerable affinity with the sort of suite Handel or Telemann might have written.

After the serene progression of the first movement and the bright rhythmic wit of the Scherzo, the Adagio non Troppo shows Brahms at his most complex but satisfying best.

Diamond in the Groove

This movement set on a shifting, modulating but ever-recurrent ground bass is contrapuntal rather than harmonic. Woodwinds and his favorite horn engage in characteristic tonal discussions advantageously heard against a background darkened by the purposeful absence of violins.

BRAHMS
. . . as a young man

After a Quasi Menuetto which features a plaintive oboe, beautifully played throughout, Brahms abandons himself to the unbuttoned gaiety of the final Rondo.

Rather like a carnival parade, the jaunty theme marches along led by the shrill tone of a piccolo.

Though this serenade sounds appealing simple, it contains instrumental and rhythmic subtleties to delight the sophisticated.

As usual Brahms takes particular delight in manipulating and syncopating rhythms and shifting emphases to add complexities. Listeners are often fooled by these witticisms into counting a triple-time movement in duple time. In this respect, the Scherzo is a particularly well-laid trap for the unwary.

Charge Dismissed

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — A judge has dismissed marijuana possession charges against British actor Terence Stamp, 29, because of insufficient evidence.

But Judge John J. Merrich refused Friday to stop charges against Stamp's younger brother, Christopher, 22. Christopher's arraignment was set for Nov. 22.

Dead Writer's Horror Lives On

COME ALONG WITH ME, by Shirley Jackson, Macmillan of Canada, $7.50.

Reviewed by Margaret Doody

Come Along With Me is a posthumous collection of works by the late Shirley Jackson, edited by her husband, Stanley Edgar Hyman. It includes 16 short stories, three essays, and part of a novel left unfinished at the author's untimely death in 1965.

Readers familiar with Shirley Jackson will be glad to find The Lottery included, along with an essay by the author on the genesis of the story and the reaction it aroused when first published. The remaining short stories are equally disturbing.

Shirley Jackson specializes in capturing the moments of fear when the perceptions are feverishly intensified. Her own experience of such moments seems, as related in the essay Experience and Fiction, to have been uncomfortably vivid. A recurrent motif in the stories is the loss of identity. Almost all her characters are alienated; they are also, even the evil ones, uncomfortably like ourselves as we could be if pushed beyond some invisible breaking-point.

Admirers of The Haunting of Hill House and We Have Always Lived in the Castle recognize Shirley Jackson as a master of the modern Gothic, the tale of horror; the horror she creates is less enjoyably scary than psychologically tense.

In The Rock, Paula's growing hostility to her brother and sister-in-law is reflected in the jagged black island of rock to which they have come, and in the stranger—ghost or demon?—who appears to her alone.

A Visit is also a ghost story. A young girl on a visit to the home of a school friend comes as a victim to be swallowed up in an enclosed and changeless world. She finds a ghostly lover, and is doomed to satisfy the family's narcissistic compulsion to repeat its own history.

As in the author's best work, a house is at the centre of the story. The family mansion here is an enchanted castle. In the description of this fantastic dwelling one finds the released imagination nowadays usually found only in childrens' literature. The story is a nightmarishly claustrophobic fairy-tale, rather as if one of George Macdonald's charming old tales were to be re-narrated by Alain Resnais.

In a lighter vein are the stories based on the author's family life. Her treatment of children and domesticity is genial and unsentimental. One can only regret that this collection is the last work that will ever appear by this brilliant and versatile author.

Once Upon a Time A 'Ferry' Princess . . .

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

Librarians are constantly searching for pleasant romantic novels with clearly-defined characters and safe themes, stereotyped settings and some suspense. There is, apparently, a tremendous unsatisfied demand for such works, particularly among older members of the reading public.

Margaret Widdemer must have been fully aware of this situation when she wrote her new novel The Red Castle Women, which is described on the dust jacket as "a novel of a haunting legend, a mysterious heritage, and a threatened marriage."

Miss Widdemer seems also to have attempted to make of her work a pale descendant of the gothic horror stories that had their origins in works such as Walpole's Castle of Otranto. The trouble with this modern descendant of the genre is that it is a bit effeminate, a bit too mild.

YOUNG SCION

The story is set in the mid-Nineteenth Century, in a great sinister-looking red sandstone castle on the Hudson River. The castle comes complete with a mysterious mad woman in a tower and two young women of beauty and fortune, equally mad, but still free to roam and do mischief since their madness has not yet manifest itself in homicidal tendencies.

In addition to a host of shadowy retainers, there is also Major Harradine, the handsome young scion of the house, untainted by the madness of his cousins.

Across the river from the castle is the ferryhouse. There lives the beautiful Perdita; she is obviously of gentle birth, though her origins are shrouded in mystery. She might be termed the "ferry" princess of the tale.

There is also a curse on the castle, the leaf curse, laid by an unhappy Indian maiden who had been in love and was betrayed by the son of the castle's builder. Her shabby treatment was as nothing when compared to the results her curse produced on the Red Castle's inhabitants.

CURSE LIFTED

In the end, of course, all turns out well. The ferry princess becomes the chatelaine of Red Castle; the curse is lifted; the insane are disposed of in various ways; everybody else lives happily ever after, or at least in a state of mid-Victorian ecstasy punctuated at appropriate intervals by swoons of joy.

Miss Widdemer has had a long and distinguished career as a writer of poetry, juvenile fiction and novels. In 1919, she shared the Pulitzer Prize with Carl Sandburg for her The Rose Garden Husband. It is unfortunate that the promise of 50 years ago should be fulfilled by nothing better than The Red Castle Women.

Who Turned Canada On?

JOURNEY TO POWER, by Don Peacock, Ryerson Press, Toronto, 1968, 383 pages, $6.50 ($2.95 in paperback).

Reviewed by Alan Forrest

This extremely interesting book asks the question:

At what point does the modern era of Canadian politics begin?

Mr. Peacock's conclusion is that it starts with Dalton Camp who in November, 1966, forced John Diefenbaker to submit to a leadership convention.

Journey to Power, written by a Liberal-leaning freelance Ottawa journalist, tells how Camp's rebellion enabled the Tories to select their first leader born in the Twentieth Century, Robert Stanfield. The emergence of Stanfield in turn forced the Liberals into the jet age with Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Journey to Power is entrancing because it offers a rather complete account of these two convulsions within Canada's major political parties.

The election campaign, itself, is properly relegated to the final two chapters of the book. Given the data of the two conventions and profiles of the two leaders, the election result bears the imprint of inevitability.

FREQUENTLY REBUFFED

Journey to Power, however, is far from a totally satisfactory work. The document is complete only in a quantitative sense. All the events are there, but Mr. Peacock has been unable to inject motivations or backroom dealings of the major figures into his account. Indeed he admits he was frequently rebuffed by politicians who told him such material must wait until they write their own memoirs.

Choice gossip is what makes the admission price worthwhile in any good political history. There is very little spice in this account.

Also, Mr. Peacock mars his prose with frequent mis-spellings of common words and of well-known Canadian names like Bruce Hutchison and H. Carl Goldenberg.

In addition, there is the occasional uncorrected typographical error such as where Tories began to fear that John Diefenbaker "was going to spit the party."

Finally, his conclusion that Dalton Camp brought Canada into the modern political era is obviously a mile off base — interesting though the thesis is.

UNSUSPECTING NATION

Canada turned that important corner ten years earlier when the Tories thrust John Diefenbaker upon an unsuspecting nation.

The Diefenbaker saga gave Canadians a sense of genuine participation in politics (first the crusade to get him in, followed by the crusade to get him out) and made possible a growing number of profitable books.

This book should turn a tidy profit for its writer — and deservedly so.

For despite its shortcomings, Journey to Power neatly laces together the twin convulsions that have made the Liberal and Conservative parties what they are today.

HIMALAYAN HEARTWARMER

Western mountaineers who have challenged the peaks of the Himalayas owe much to the courage, tenacity and devotion of their Sherpa friends and assistants. Sir Edmund Hillary in School-house in the Clouds (Penguin paperback) discusses an expedition in 1963 which had two purposes — to climb Taweche and Kangtega and to bring medical and educational aid (the latter in the form of school buildings) to certain Napalese villages.

The book is exciting and heartwarming by virtue both of its subjects and the humanity and generous spirit of its authors.

Slick, Wicked Mr. Newman Bags Crocodiles to Foxes

THE DISTEMPER OF OUR TIMES. Canadian Politics in Transition: 1963-68, by Peter C. Newman, McClelland and Stewart. 558 pp. $8.95.

Reviewed by Peter Murray

One of gamesman-author George Plimpton's books is titled Out of My League. That's the way many newspapermen feel about Peter Newman. They don't belong in the same ballpark.

Newman has a gift for imagery and metaphor that is seldom found in political writing. He uses words like drops of acid on the page to etch a character.

His earlier book on the rise and fall of John Diefenbaker, Renegade in Power, established him in the front rank of his trade. In this new book on the Pearson years the writing is even more brilliant and sustained than before.

He has a wicked talent for phrase-making that captures the essence of his protagonists. Jack Pickersgill has "the deceptive amiability of a crocodile in the sun." Mitchell Sharp's face beams like "a very intelligent orange monkey." Joe Greene is "folksy as a fox" and Walter Gordon was "Garibaldi without a horse."

At times the effect is dazzling and you are left with the feeling you get reading Time magazine. It's too slick. The events and anecdotes seem tailored to fit the narrative flow.

'Keystone Cops'

The picture of Lester Pearson and Paul Martin chasing around the prime minister's office hunting for a buzzing hotline phone like "a pair of Keystone cops," appears over-embellished.

In Newman's case these doubts are probably unfair because the care he has taken with an enormous amount of research is apparent, but skepticism is the price he must pay occasionally for flashy writing.

At other times his talent overwhelms his material and the trivial is given a gloss it doesn't rate.

But these are quibbles about a technique that over-all is masterful. What about the book itself?

If you want to understand why the country was so ready to be swept off its feet by Pierre Trudeau in the springtime, the answers are here.

As the title would indicate, Newman's assessment of Lester Pearson's tenure as prime minister is severe, perhaps too critical for those who are attracted by Pearson the man. They would like to believe he was "a good man in a wicked time," as one of the chapters is headed.

Dislike for Politics

But Newman shows that Pearson was in fact the author of much of his own misfortune. He attributes this to Pearson's natural instincts as a conciliator, his diplomatic background, and his distaste for politics.

In Newman's view, Pearson's sense of personal detachment made him peculiarly unsuited for the office of prime minister.

He failed to provide the inspirational leadership the country needed and longed for. Newman contends that style has become as important as substance to the office.

And then there was John Diefenbaker. It would be hard to imagine two men more unlike in personality and outlook. It was Pearson's tragedy that he allowed himself to be dragged under by Diefenbaker's last desperate political grasping.

When Diefenbaker refused to exit quietly, the best course for the Liberals, and the country, probably would have been to ignore him. But Dief remained too magnetic a target and even Newman himself couldn't resist chronicling the Old Warrior's last battle at excessive length despite the autopsy he performed in Renegade.

Spectre of Dief

Diefenbaker's spectre hangs over the entire book. Newman suggests it was only the awareness Diefenbaker was the alternative that held back the Commons from voting Pearson out of office on a number of occasions.

The one area where Pearson's talents were especially suited was the French-English confrontation brought about by Quebec's awakening from its long sleep. Newman gives full marks to Pearson here and suggests he provided the "essential moderating influence" that held the country together.

Pearson's role was similar to the one he played in the 1956 Suez crisis, keeping both sides talking and finding a way out of each impasse.

There were other accomplishments too—the new flag, the Canada Pension Plan, and a start toward medicare—but the fumbling way in which they were achieved detracted from their worth in the public mind.

Comic Interludes

Perhaps future histories will be more charitable to Pearson, but apart from some comic interludes provided by the Lucien Rivard and Gerda Munsinger scandals, they are unlikely to record little from the 1963-68 period other than the beginnings of the national unity crisis.

The five years were an interregnum in Canada's march to destiny, between the fiery comet crash of John Diefenbaker and the new era that began last June 25.

Because it was an ill-defined period Newman's new book is unlikely to have the impact of Renegade in Power, which had a sharp focus and element of Greek drama.

The details of the Pearson era, now that we are launched into a new kind of politics, already have an air of staleness about them. It is the mark of Newman's genius that he has succeeded in making the book such a rich and readable chronicle.

He has given us an "instant history" that will stand for many years as the authoritative document of the times.

Arrows to 'A' Bomb Monty's in Command

A HISTORY OF WARFARE, by Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein; Collins; 584 pp.; maps; illustrations; index; $15.95.

Field Marshal Montgomery's most recent book, A History of Warfare, will be a valuable acquisition for those who want a clear, rather general account of the changes which have taken place in warfare and weapons from the earliest times to the present.

He starts with the Egyptians, goes through the Greeks and Romans, deals with the Vikings and Huns, covers the medieval period, and, in a word describes the era from the arrow to the atom bomb.

NOT CONFINING

It is a tremendous sweep of history to attempt even in some 600 pages, especially as he does not confine himself to Europe but brings in such conflicts as the American Civil War and pays due respect to the naval side of warfare as well.

Nevertheless, aided by a very competent research staff as well as the lavish use of maps, diagrams and photographs, "Monty" has produced what is probably his best literary effort to date.

One gets the impression that the author has thoroughly enjoyed his task. His own long and remarkable military experience has given him an insight which most military historians do not have. He is opinionated — and expresses his opinions in his usual, forthright manner — and frankly I think this adds to rather than detracts from the book.—R. H. Roy.

DEER SNIFFING . . .

. . . THE HUNTER'S SPOOR

And Tigers Suspiciously Like Jugged Hare

Reviewed by Donna Smyth

The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, The Incomparable Atuk, and, last but not least, Cocksure, have established his reputation as a writer who slays his game on the swinging scene of the mod, mod world. In this latest collection of essays and reports, however, Richler seems to be using a shotgun loaded with blanks.

The result is more noise and smoke than actual hits and the catch is definitely a mixed bag of small game with the promised tigers still prowling around outside the writer's private stockade.

The essays range from an amusing report, With the Trial Smoke Eaters in Stockholm to Richler's literary opinion on Norman Mailer and Malamud.

AIR OF FINALITY

All vary in length and quality according to the publication in which they were originally printed and the reader is left with the distinct impression that Richler and-or his agent are capitalizing upon his current popularity by simply reprinting anything and everything that the writer happens to have put his name to in print.

Opinions are often expressed with a self-congratulatory air of finality which assumes that, because Mordecai Richler is Mordecai Richler, they will necessarily be interesting to his audience.

RICHLER

. . . not so cocksure

Familiar themes from his novels such as his Canadian Jewish background and the problems thereof are repeated but without the creative gusto which keeps dullness to a minimum in his novels.

Occasionally, the reader senses the presence or Richler the writer and there is a moment of startled interest like that of a deer sniffing the hunter's spoor.

SUPER RAVAGER

One such moment occurs in The Great Comic Book Heroes, where we are told that Superman was actually conceived by a Canadian and that his assumed identity of Clark Kent reveals him to be "the archetypal middle-class Canadian WASP, superficially nice, self-affacing, but within whom there burns a hate-ball, a would-be avenger with superhuman powers, a smasher of bridges, a breaker of skyscrapers, a potential ravager of wonder women."

One wonders whether or not the insight gained at such times is quite worth the bother of reading through the barren stretches between.

To be fair, Richler himself seems to have had an uneasy conscience because he ends his introduction with a protest about actually being a fiction writer and a plead about writing these essays for his own pleasure. Whatever his motivation, his tigers under glass look suspiciously like jugged hare.

New Paperback

The first of Elizabeth Taylor's novels to appear in paperbacks is A Wreath of Roses (Penguin, 95c.) This love and suspense story takes place in an English village in summertime, a setting particularly well realized.

STUDENT CONCERT ON SUNDAY

First in this winter's series of Sunday concerts by secondary school music groups, Esquimalt Senior Secondary School Band will present a concert this Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in McPherson Playhouse.

DAZZLING in talent and appealing in manner and appearance, the young Soviet cellist Karine Georgian is the next guest artist to perform with Victoria Symphony Orchestra. The concerts in which this most outstanding protege of the great Rostropovich will appear are Nov. 17 and 18. Miss Georgian, hailed by major music critics from Moscow to New York as one of the "finds" of the century, will also be presented in recital Nov. 20 at McPherson Playhouse with Robin Wood at the piano.

ENTERTAINMENT CALENDAR

Tuesday, Nov. 26 through Saturday, Nov. 30, 8 p.m., McPherson Playhouse: Victoria Operatic Society presents The Desert Song by Sigmund Romberg.

Are Children Safe Around Parents?

Sounding Board

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Johnson

That there is nothing new under the sun has ceased to be a truism these many years. But that there is nothing new in human behavior since the dawn of civilization—that is yet to be proved false.

There is nothing new in antagonism toward parents, for example. Feelings of antagonism, rebellion—either open or covert—have been the experience of very generation of young people—must be, for they are an inevitable part of emotional and intellectual growth.

The only difference today is that the tables are completely turned, Parents in general fear their children from the time they are able to walk and talk, while children in general do not fear God, their parents nor anything else that constitutes authority, law and order.

How many people have had the experience of doing something quite well, instinctively and without effort until someone comes along who tells them that they must do thus and so or they are in danger of bringing about this or that undesirable effect.

The result, most often, is that they become self-conscious and inept where they had been natural and astute. That, as I see it, is what has gone wrong with parenthood. But I'm no expert, so enough of that.

It is sad that what of parental influence is soonest abandoned by the young is never that part that is most foolish or harmful. For by far the majority of people the worst thing they could inherit from their parents is the one thing they carry with them through life.

★

Superstitions and fear of the dark are silly. Varicose veins, weak eyes, bad teeth, tendencies toward tuberculosis, heart disease and rheumatism are unpleasant and dangerous.

But prejudice is more witless and often far more dangerous.

Prejudice: probably the ugliest deformity in the human condition because it is a mental deformity. It can warp our lives, impoverish us, dwarf our intellect, cut us off from our fellow man.

At its very worst it can make us into monsters more hideous than any disfiguring physical disease.

And where does it start in the majority of cases? In the home.

But once that child's mind begins to be infiltrated by parental views via domestic conversation, the process is under way that could turn him into an incipient active racist or at least an ordinary bigot.

If anyone doubts the strength and persistence of the prejudices that sink into the receptive infant mind, let him run down the list of his own aversions.

He may find nothing more dangerous than a repulsion toward tripe, but if it is not based on experience then it is a prejudice inherited from his parents who inherited from their parents, and nothing short of acute starvation would persuade him to break it down.

If you think about it, behind almost every misconception in the adult mind there is a seed of prejudice, and so many are parental in origin that one begins to wonder if parents are safe people to have around children.

What of the father who, consistently, in the presence of his young children, expresses the conviction that all police are vicious, dishonest tyrants.

Should he be surprised and upset when his children grow up to find lawless ways of their own for getting even with the "dirty cops"?

I suppose education helps to eradicate, or at least combat many of the fallacious ideas that are handed down in a family. But not all. Loopholes exist through which youngsters can opt away from confrontation with what they have grown up to accept automatically as aversions.

Let's consider music as an example.

A great many people are convinced, based on early attitudes in the home, that they will be bored by what is called "classical" music. The very intimation that they are about to be exposed to some sets them reaching for the "off" switch or walking fast in an opposite direction.

★

And then again, there are people who would tear up a free ticket to a jazz concert because, without ever giving themselves a chance to listen to even five minutes' worth of jazz, they believe they would hate it.

This is not to suggest that if everybody were exposed to either kind of music over a period of time all dislikes would be turned into likes.

But at least the dislikes would be preference born of experience, a condition worthy of the human intelligence, which the other is not.

"I don't understand that stuff," is the sort of phrase most frequently used by persons rejecting an experience.

We go to an art exhibition and what do we do? Do we clear our minds of precon- because "Trees by a Lake" does not look anything like trees by any lake ever factually seen?

ceived ideas of what art is, stand back and let impressions reach us by an uncluttered route?

Or do we fret about not "understanding" the literal meaning of the painting, seek clues in titles and get angry

Probably the artist was only concerned with expressing his personal feelings about the atmosphere or the qualities and patterns of light created by trees beside a body of water.

All he desires from his viewers is that they share in some degree his response to what he has seen.

Intellectual understanding of a work of art, a Beethoven symphony, a jazz quintet, a play by Shakespeare or Miller, a poem by Dylan Thomas or a Henry Moore sculpture, is for the experts.

★

It is not necessary for enjoyment. All fine art, from the simplest of folk to the most complex of sophisticated forms, must be based on sincerity of thought and intention.

Born out of emotional stimulation, a work of art is intended as an emotional experience, not as an intellectual exercise.

Think of the story of Handel, so wrought up when he was composing the Messiah that he scarcely ate and finished the Hallelujah Chorus with tears streaming down his cheeks.

And how many cheeks has that work dampened, how many spirits sent soaring among all kinds and degrees of people in two hundred years.?

It is far too common for ingrained prejudice, unchallenged convictions, to accompany people through life with the idea that concert halls, theatres and art galleries are foreign ground for them, the preserve of the longhair and the egg-head.

★

They don't know what response they might have to these things for they have never given them a trial.

There seems to be a great need developed in our time to break the pattern of daily routine by finding a way to be "sent"—"turned on"—"go into orbit."

Prejudice, accepted secondhand and imbedded in the mind as a manacle worn since childhood would bury itself in our flesh, often secures us away from what we might find most stimulating.

PLAY CONTEST OPENS FRIDAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ottawa Little Theatre has announced the rules for its 30th annual Canadian Playwriting Competition.

Founded in 1939 by Gladys Watt who is still chairman, the competition is for original one-act plays in English.

It is open to professional and non-professional Canadian writers, with manuscripts to be submitted between Nov. 15, 1968, and March 15, 1969.

At the end of the competition, each author receives a printed adjudication covering all the plays entered along with the judge's appraisal of his own work. The identity of the adjudicator is not disclosed until after the winners are announced in June, 1969.

$3,000 Grant to Restore 19th-Century Chamber Organ

A 19th-century chamber organ discovered in the Maltwood Museum of the University of Victoria will be rebuilt with a $3,000 grant from Vancouver's Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation.

Museum curator John Freeman found the dismantled organ in a storage area. Its components, including three ranks of pipes, had been separated for several years.

The instrument belonged to the late Mr. and Mrs. John Maltwood. Their house, with its collection of art objects, was bequeathed to the University in 1964.

Hugo Spilker, a Dutch organ builder now living in Victoria, has been given the job of restoration. When the work is completed next year, the organ will be used in the music division of the School of Fine Arts.

NOW . . . Country Music Still Charging

In the late '50s and early '60s, country-western music had all but died in this area. But, since 1965, with the country banner being held high by new talent like Roger Miller, Glen Campbell, Tommy Collins, Jody Miller, Henson Cargill and Merle Haggard, it has come back to life and is rapidly gaining in popularity.

Freethy

One of the first successful country radio stations on the coast was KAYO, Seattle. KAYO has a solid listening audience of 168,000, and this figure doesn't include those on Vancouver Island who listen to it.

KRAK in Sacramento and KBBQ in Los Angeles are two other highly successful stations.

Not surprisingly, country music stations usually have the respect of the communities which they serve, for they are continually in the forefront of community projects.

Promotions with various artists are very popular all along the coast. Probably the most successful single night for country music came in March of this year.

BIGGEST GATE

Three Los Angeles radio stations promoted three separate country concerts; all were sold out and collectively they probably had the largest gate in the history of country music.

Many people, well known to the younger generation, have been giving "grass roots" music some nutriment. Lee Hazelwood, whose own roots are sunk deep into country soil, has been producing many country-western records for various artists.

DYLAN HELPED

Jimmy Bowen is also producing for country artists. Dylan gave a healthy shot in the arm to country music with his John Wesley Harding album. The Byrds followed Dylan and Moby Grape have been cutting country sides.

Even Paul Revere and the Raiders (whoever they are) jumped on the covered wagon.

National television has added its powerful hand to help promote country music. Dean Martin, Joey Bishop and the Smothers Brothers have all been featuring country artists in the last year or so. And CBC's Don Messer's Jubilee helps, too.

BREEDING GROUND

Believe it or not, Canada is a breeding ground for country-western talent. Artists such as Tommy Hunter, Debbie Lori Kaye, Lorne Green, Slim Whitman and Hank Snow are only a part of Canada's considerable contribution to the country cause.

Country music provided the backbone of what we called rock and roll. Lately it has been showing that it can still play a major role in contemporary rock.

The most programmed country single of the past 12 months was I Don't Wanna Play House by Tammy Wynette, followed closely by Henson Cargill's Skip a Rope.

Glen Campbell, Henson Cargill and Dolly Parton have been the fastest rising stars in country music during the last two years. Buck Owens and The Buckaroos are still the most popular act on the country-western show circuit.

And of course, Johnny Cash's performance at Folsom Prison was a big hit. The album recorded during the performance is very good, including the contribution of the audience.

The best instrumental country-western album I have ever heard is called Strictly Instrumental (Columbia CS 94[illegible]).

'WHO'S WHO'

It features the fantastic picking and plucking team of Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs and the ever great Doc Watson, and a list of sidemen that reads like the "Who's Who" of Nashville studio musicians—Grady Martin, guitar; Charlie McCoy, harmonica; Buddy Harmon, snare drum; Jake Tullock, bass; Buck Greaves, steel guitar; Paul Warren, fiddle, and of course, The Foggy Mountain Boys.

If you like good guitar music, in fact, if you enjoy good music at all, this album is an excellent choice as an addition to any collection. It was recorded in December, 1966, and is a high-quality pressing with excellent response and stereo reproduction.

Switching back to a bag full of rock goodies; The Steve Miller Blues Band has a potential heavy on the market. Sailor, the group's latest album, is very interesting. On some of the tracks the group soars, on others they barely get off the ground.

Fencing Course Planned

A special 10-week fencing course is being offered by Bastion Theatre School. The course will be limited to 12 students. Instruction is by John Benson, a fencing instructor with over 20 years' experience.

Mr. Benson began fencing as a hobby after joining the Royal Air Force. He trained with professional fencing master John Sanders, trainer of world champion fencer Bill Hoskins, and fencing coach for the British Empire Games and for the Olympic Games.

IN COURTROOM

Mr. Benson himself was fencing coach for the Dorset County Council in England, and coach for the Diavolo and Espada clubs, among others.

He coached the sword play in the Studio Theatre School in England, and since coming to Victoria, staged the spectacular sword play in the recent University of Victoria production of Romeo and Juliet.

Classes will be in the courtroom of the Maritime Museum in Bastion Square. Equipment — foil, mask, etc., will be supplied. Dates will be announced later.

Applicants for the course will be selected by Theatre School director Jack Trueman and by Mr. Benson, but there is no age limit.

Port Alice Pupils Visit City Sights

The students — 41 of them from R. H. Richmond school — will spend two days in the city, touring the Legislative Buildings, the Provincial Museum, Royal Roads Military College and the Patricia Bay airport.

All from grades eight to 10, they are bieng supervised by teachers G. R. Hemble and Gary Klease.

Stop Bombing Appeal

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia says he will release 11 American prisoners if President Johnson promises the U.S. armed forces will "do their best" to stop bombing incidents along the frontier with South Vietnam.

ROBERT MARTIN STRACHAN

Within His Power But Not His Grasp

For the carpenter who rode the rails to British Columbia during the depression years, Robert Martin Strachan's plans to leave the leadership of the provincial New Democratic Party is another mark in a politically frustrating career.

A hardline democratic socialist with a strong labor orientation, Mr. Strachan is surrendering the leadership to the party's intellectual wing.

After leading the party for 12 years, the 54-year-old former union president announced at a Victoria news conference Friday that he's stepping down in April.

Mr. Strachan was at the throttle through four provincial elections that saw a steady increase in NDP voting strength and House representation, but it was never quite enough to form a government.

His resignation is also a victory of sorts for his bitterest political rival, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, who swept into power in 1952 at the head of a Social Credit administration that has endured ever since.

Mr. Strachan was elected to the B.C. legislature for the first time in the same year and the two men have been engaged in a bitter and often vindictive personal feud for the past 16 years.

Rode the Rails

The NDP leader has characterized the premier "a traitor, a pussyfooting political carpetbagger," without "a single ounce of economic sense in his head."

Mr. Bennett has in turn referred to Mr. Strachan as a "wildman," a "socialist bandit" and an irresponsible "destroyer of the democratic process."

"When I saw all those fields after all that snow I decided that B.C. was the place for me."

Born in a Glasgow family that operated a shoe-making firm, Mr. Strachan said he always thought of himself as "a natural Tory" until a flood of imports and the crash of 1929 forced the family business into liqudiation.

'Socialist Bandit'

He decided to leave Scotland two years later and set out for Canada. For three years Mr. Strachan worked in the Maritimes and Ontario on farms for $10 a month plus board.

Then came the boxcar ride to B.C. After arriving here, Mr. Strachan first worked at a smelting operation near northern coastal Prince Rupert, than at various jobs in the timber industry.

He eventually channelled his interests into carpentry—and the trade union movement. Mr. Strachan rose quickly through the ranke of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and was at one time the union's provincial president.

He said he investigated all four political parties and finally joined the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, fore[illegible] NDP, after the Second World War.

"I felt the CCF had a rational approach to our problems," he said' "We had just been through a depression and a war and I felt we needed a firm objective as well as a plan to get there."

Green of B.C.

Mr. Strachan ran as a CCF candidate in Nanaimo, where he now resides with his wife and three children, in the 1949 federal election and was "soundly defeated" by Conservative George Pearkes, former lieutenant-governor of the province.

Three years later he took a shot at provincial politics and won the Cowichan-Newcastle riding, a seat he has held with ease through five subsequent elections and a change in the constituency name to Cowichan-Malahat.

Appointed Opposition leader in 1956, Mr. Strachan five years later steered the party into a tight alliance with the trade union movement, especially the 136,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor.

Mr. Strachan assembled a crew of moderates that took over party administration, as the party membership voted more radical elements out of office.

His leadership was unassailed until June, 1967, when the NDP's intellectual wing, led by Vancouver-Burrard MLA Tom Berger, revolted.

'Mafia From UBC'

Mr. Berger's bid to succeed Mr. Strachan fell short at the party's annual convention when delegates re-elected the Nanaimo MLA by a vote of 278 to 177.

It was too close for comfort.

Many of Mr. Berger's backers, once characterized by a Social Credit spokesman as "the mafia from the University of British Columbia," dropped out of active party affairs.

Several weeks ago, the Young New Democrats, meeting in convention, urged several MLAs to announce their candidacy and campaign actively for the leadership. That was enough for Mr. Strachan.

"The NDP is very close to electoral victory," Mr. Strachan said at his news conference. "I feel that a younger man should be in a position to chart the course and carry the load of leadershio. . . ."

Social Credit Undecided On Entetring a Candidate

NANAIMO — The Social Credit party will decide at a constituency meeting later this month whether or not to enter a candidate in the Feb. 10 byelection in which New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas will run.

Mr. Douglas, defeated in the June 25 federal election was nominated by his party to contest the seat for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

Cyril Dawkin, president of the Social Credit Constituency Association, said the membership would have to decide if the party would enter a candidate.

So far, only the Liberal candidate, Eric Winch, has been nominated to oppose Mr. Douglas. The Progressive Conservatives have not yet selected a candidate.

'Basic Welfare Issue Ignored'

More money isn't the only solution to the problems of day-care service in the province, Norman Levi, NDP member for Vancouver South, said Friday.

He was referring to an announcement Thursday by Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell that the government will quadruple grants to help needy families send children to day-care centres.

Mr. Campbell said the present basic rate of $1 a day per child will be supplemented with a special grant of up to $3 per child if a low income family establishes a need for further assistance.

"Day-care services must go beyond a needs test and assessment of regional income," said Mr. Levi.

He said day-care centres are required by "thousands of children regardless of economic circumstance."

Mr. Levi said the government's plan dealt only with administration and finance and ignored the "basic problems."

The social welfare department must make a decision to pick up the $8,000 deficit of the Marpole Day Care Centre in Vancouver and pay the $24,000 deficit in the city's day-care program, he said.

Mr. Levi, one-time provincial president of the NDP won his seat in a by-election in May.

'Quebec Must Decide Own Future'

By BOB MITCHELL
Uvic Correspondent

There is no cut-and-dried answer to the question of French-Canadian nationalism, an eminent Canadian political observer said at the University of Victoria Friday.

Stern Ryerson, editor of Horizon magazine and author of a book on the Canadian constitution, Unequal Union, was speaking at the student political forum.

He said Quebec nationalism is too often treated as a separatist problem by "WASPS," or English-speaking Canadians.

"People often forget Quebec now constitutes a people with a developing self-awareness," he said.

DECIDE THEMSELVES

"I'm not in favor of separatism, but neither do I favor denial of the right of French-Canadians to decide for themselves whether they want to separate or stay in Confederation."

The history of Quebec is the history of the exploitation of a people, said Mr. Ryerson, and the first act of exploitation was the British conquest in 1759 on the Plains of Abraham.

"The question 'What does Quebec want?' cannot be understood apart from the conquest and the resulting soci-economic domination," he said.

'VICTORIAN RELIC'

Confederation in 1867, usually celebrated outside Quebec as the birth of Canada, is looked upon by the French-Canadians as the act of a colonial power.

They view the British North America Act as a Victorian relic of the 19th century. As far as Quebecers are concerned, Confederation was designed by the English and for the English.

"Let's not forget it was enacted when Canada was still a colony," he added.

The French-Canadian nowadays feels a sense of frustration toward the state. Ottawa to him is a foreign capital: the capital of English Canada.

The people of Quebec have always viewed themselves as the original Canadians and all other races or nationalities are lumped under the term "les Anglais."

"A Canadian or 'Canadien' is someone who speaks French—it's built in—and all the rest are 'les Anglais'—the bloody English."

FOREIGN CAPITAL

He quoted figures to show Quebec is currently dominated by foreign capital, especially from English-Canada.

In all provinces outside Quebec, the average income of a person of Anglo-Saxon origin is 10 per cent higher than the average of persons of other racial origin.

But in Quebec, the average income of a person of Anglo-Saxon origin is $4,940, as compared to the average French-Canadian income of $3,469: a 40 per cent disparity.

The difference, he said, lies in the wealthy Montreal suburb of Westmount, a predominantly English business community that was a target for separatist terrorist bombings during the early 1960s.

EFFECTIVE REACTION

Mr. Ryerson said the first effective reaction to economic domination from outside came eight years ago, following the end of the 30-year reign of Premier Duplessis, and the birth of the "revolution tranquille," when the Quebec Liberal government under Jean Lesage nationalized 15 private hydro-electric companies.

Since that time, nationalism has become the norm in Quebec, he said.

"Neither the Liberal party nor the Union Nationale is now able to obtain a majority in Quebec without projecting a nationalist program," he said.

Quebec now faces the choice of working with the other provinces to form a binational Canada, said Mr. Ryerson, or cutting itself adrift in the sea of English-speaking North America, where it will face death through gradual cultural assimilation.

"The important thing is that the French-Canadian decides which way Quebec will go," he concluded.

Cost of Living To Be Checked

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Friday the federal government will set up an independent public agency to investigate rising costs and prices.

He said the agency would carry on research and issue public reports based on its findings.

Parliamentary review of the agency's reports, he suggested, could be made the responsibility of the Commons committee on finance, trade and economic affairs.

"I want to make it perfectly clear," the minister said in his speech during the Commons budget debate, "that this program will not involve any attempt to introduce price controls or controls on incomes."

WANTS FLEXIBILITY

Price and wage flexibility within the market economy must be maintained for the sake of a dynamic and efficient economic system, he insisted.

Mr. Basford warned of the dangerous consequences of rising prices and said that it was sterile to argue whether wage increases or higher prices were to blame.

A long period of expansion, he said, had created expectations of future increases and continuing economic growth that "are leading our businessmen and our trade unions to regard as normal rates of increase in prices, wages and other costs that are not consistent with reasonable price stability and are probably not sustainable."

Mr. Basford said that monetary and fiscal policies remain the major instruments capable of influencing costs and prices.

But supplementary programs could be successful if judged by modest and realistic standards, he said.

INCOME POLICY

He agreed with the Economic Council of Canada that a formal incomes policy would not be suitable to Canada but he said the government had concluded that a less formal system could usefully serve to "provide better information about current trends in prices, costs and productivity and to encourage greater restraint on the part of those responsible for price and income decisions."

Weddings

Gibson-Levy

St. John's Church was the setting for a candlelight wedding on October 19, 1968, when Reverend Jenner officiated at a double-ring ceremony uniting in marriage Karen Dorothy, daughter of Mrs. William Coates and the late Mr. W. Levy to Mr. Robert Walker Gibson of Vancouver.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. William Coates, the bride wore a floor-length princess-line gown of white silk mate elipee. The jewel neckline and angel sleeve accented the full flowing train. A coronet of crystals and seed pearls held a tiered veil of silk illusion and she carried white mums cascaded with rapture roses. The matron of honor, Mrs. Frank White and junior bridesmaid Miss Gwen Lock wore floor-length gowns of tangerine print chiffon. The bridesmaids, Miss Carol Simons and Miss Lynn Ricketts, wore identical gowns of tangerine chiffon over satin. All attendants wore circlet headpieces of matching material and carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Jim Gibson attended as best man to his brother and ushers were Messrs. Carl Gimnes and Dennis Levy.

Zilkie-Bealle

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on October 26, 1968, at Metropolitan United Church when Carole Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bealle, Townsend Drive, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Ronald Alan Zilkie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Zilkie, Pandora Avenue, Reverend King officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a three-tiered gown of Italian lace, an orchid trimmed with seed pearls accentuated the chapel-length veil. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and freesia. The maid of honor Mrs. Pat Heeley and the bridesmaids Miss Kellie Bealle, sister of the bride, and Miss Darlene Spicer, were lovely in gowns of emerald green peau d'elegance with bouquets of yellow carnations and roses.

Mr. Gary Zilkie, brother of the groom, was best man. Messrs. Ken Alexander and George Grover ushered guests. A reception followed at Holyrood House where Mr. Jim Chow, former teacher and friend, gave the toast to the bride. After the reception the happy couple left on their honeymoon to Portland. On their return they will make their home at 3212 Orillia Street, Victoria, B.C.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. E. Bealle, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bealle, Ricky and Penny, all of Edson, Alberta; Mrs. J. Coons of Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. Jansen, the Dyck family and Mr. and Mrs. W. Goertz of Vancouver.

Bermback-Quiring

On October 12, 1968, St. Ann's Church, Penticton, B.C., was the scene of a lovely fall wedding when Father Kingly united in marriage, Linda Frances, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Quiring, 3096 Volmer Rd., Victoria, and Mr. Bernie Bermback, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bermback, Penticton, B.C. For the candlelight double-ring ceremony, the small dark-haired bride chose a full-length gown of heavy white crepe with a self-embroidered panel. A full-length train fell gently from her shoulders. Her veil was a fluffy mist of illusion nylon held in place by a pearl embroidered flower. She carried a cascade of burnt sienna and white shredded mums. The bride's only attendant, her sister Sandra Donnelly, wore a full-length gown of burnt sienna satin and she carried a smaller copy of the bride's bouquet. Madam Yanish sang "The Story of Ruth" while the radiant bride was escorted down the aisle by her father. She later sang "When You Walk Through a Storm" during the signing of the register. The groom was attended by Mr. Charles Preen and ushers were Messrs. Mike Derry and David Lee.

A reception for 80 guests was held in the Penticton Golf and Country Club. Mr. J. A. Gibson of Victoria proposed a toast to the bride. The couple will make their home in Penticton where they are employed in the teaching profession. Mrs. Bermbach received her teaching certificate at Uvic and Mr. Bermbach his B.Ed. at U.B.C.

Felton-Walton

Reverend Canon G. Biddle officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. George's Church, Cadboro Bay, Friday, October 18, 1968, at 7:30 p.m. when Margaret Jane Patricia Walton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Walton, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Michael William George Felton, son of Mrs. J. Felton, Victoria, and Mr. J. Felton, Nanaimo.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white brocade afternoon dress, A-line style with wrist-length sleeves featuring silver trim of sequin and pearls, and also at the neckline. A headpiece of ribbon roses studded with silver pearls held her shoulder-length veil. She carried a white prayer book and a white Catelina orchid predominate among shower pink sweetheart roses. The two bridesmaids, Miss Patricia Bainbridge and Miss Margaret Dunn wore identical princess-line dresses of pale pink brocade with matching accessories. Their petal headpieces held net illusion veiling in place. They carried colonial bouquets of pink roses and carnations.

Best man was Mr. John Felton, brother of the groom. Mr. Rick Fleet was usher. A reception was held at Surfside 62. A toast to the bride was most graciously given by Reverend Canon G. Biddle.

After a honeymoon spent in Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Felton will reside in Victoria.

Criminal Negligence Verdict

A coroner's jury ruled Friday night that Brian Worswick, 453 Head Street, was criminally negligent in an Oct. 26 traffic accident that resulted in the deaths of two children.

After 90 minutes of deliberation, five of the six-member jury decided that Richard Scheeren, 9, and Wayne Isacson, 8, were struck by Mr. Worswick's sports car as they walked along the shoulder of the Old Island Highway near the Thetis Lake underpass.

Testifying under the B.C. and Canada Evidence Acts, Mr. Worswick said he had suffered a severe bowel cramp and that he closed his eyes in pain. As he opened his eyes he saw a figure "and hit him all at once."

Mr. Worswick said he wasn't aware the speed limit was 30 m.p.h. and that he estimated his speed at 40 m.p.h. as he approached the point where he struck the children.

He testified that he was partially blind in his left eye due to scar tissue on the cornea which tends to obscure direct vision.

Asked if he had consumed any alcohol on the day of the accident, Mr. Worswick said he had consumed three glasses of wine between 1 p.m. and the time of the accident, shortly after 4 p.m.

Earlier testimony by Colwood RCMP Constable Richard Lee indicated that the tire marks from the Worswick car extended 187 feet along the south shoulder of the road, then skidded 46 feet diagonally across the pavement, and travelled a further 88 feet into the bush.

In giving their ruling, the jury said "we feel that the point of impact was on the gravel portion of the south side of the road."

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep gratitude to our relatives, many friends and business associates for the kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings in our recent bereavement. Our special thanks to Canon R. K. Sampson and members of Mt. Newton Lodge No. 89 A.F.A.M. and all the other Fraternal Brothers who took part in the service. — Mrs. Robert P. Hawkes and family.

Mrs. P. Walter Mason and her family wish to acknowledge with very sincere thanks all the letters, cards and tokens of condolence sent to them in memory of her husband, the late P. Walter Mason.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DUNDERDALE—In loving memory of our beloved husband Frank, Dad, Grandfather (Poppie) who left us so suddenly November 10, 1965.

Somewhere back of the Sunset,
Where the loveliness never dies,
You live in a land of glory,
Amidst the blue and the gold of the sky,
Your life a beautiful memory,
Your absence a silent grief.
You rest in God's beautiful garden
In the sunset of perfect peace.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed. Wife Lillian, Son Ken, daughter-in-law Pat, grandchildren Terri and Steven.

FLEETWOOD — In loving memory of my dear husband, Tom, who passed away Nov. 10, 1966.

We think of you as living still,
Not dead, just called away
To God's reward of joy and peace,
Where we'll join you His last day.

GRIFFITH—In loving memory of a dear friend, Billy, killed October 20, 1961, in his 16th year.

To hear his voice to see his smile,
To sit with him to talk awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be my dearest wish today.
Silent memories and tender,
Just to show I still remember.

—Good night Billy, ever remembered, Len.

STEPHENS — In memory of Steve Stephens who passed away Nov. 9, 1965.

—Sadly missed by his wife, Vinola and Family.

WHITE—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, William Percival White, who passed away November 10, 1967.

Love and remembrance last forever.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

East's two-heart call was one of those weak two bids that are almost standard equipment for our modern experts. The bid shows a good six-card suit but not enough high card strength to open with a bid of one.

Opening lead—♣ A

South's two-spade bid was a normal and very sound overcall. West's two no-trump call was a forcing bid. He was trying to discourage further spade bids by North and South but he did not succeed. North raised to three spades anyway and South continued to four.

West continued to four no-trump as a further effort to confuse matters. He succeeded admirably in his purpose, but unfortunately it turned out that his partner was confused, not North and South. East decided that his partner was bidding an unusual type of no-trump to ask for any sort of minor suit holding so East tried five clubs. South went on to five spades and West passed this around to his partner who doubled.

If West had just opened a heart against the spade contract, he would have been very happy with the result. South would surely have gone down and probably at least two tricks, but West had fallen for his own deception. He led the ace of clubs and continued. Dummy's 10 knocked out East's king. South ruffed, drew trumps, discarded his three hearts on dummy's good clubs, lost the diamond finesse and claimed the rest of the tricks and his contract.

"Well," said East to West, "you certainly played brilliantly but with conspicuous lack of success."

NEW SPANISH COLONIAL UNIQUE SPANISH DESIGN

Unsurpassed in quality and planning to give the utmost comfort and convenience in this modern yet traditional Spanish home of 2,400 sq. ft. A personification of prestige results by natural waterfalls on property of 100x170, plus overlooking miles of the blue Pacific, enhances the architectural beauty of the sparkling exterior design while the equally attractive interior provides an unusual functionality.
A renowned Toronto firm of interior decorators has given a unique ensemble of walls, light fixtures, plus luxurious carpeting, has kept this Spanish welcome, yet modern in every way. Main floor consists of an impressive foyer entrance, with closet for wraps, mammoth entertaining room of 14x23, with red brick floor-to-ceiling fireplace with raised hearth. Two king-sized bedrooms with louvred closet doors. More than ample space bathroom, utility room. Up the wrought-iron stairway to the upper level, with an extra-large living room, again with elegant fireplace, and a view that makes you want to rest forever, another bedroom at its best, bathroom of exquisite design with colored glass, infra lights and vanity. Formal dining room one step from impressive kitchen with eating area for a family.
Let's step out on the wrap-around promenade to the large sundeck, over the double garage. Viewpoint, yes — the Spanish courtyard with curved stairway, the waterfalls blending themselves with the distant waters of the ocean. There is just too much in this home for us to adequately describe. All we can say is . . . if you seek the superlative in location, the quiet dignity of yesterday, livability and quality, we urge your inspection of this home.

10 MILE POINT UNUSUAL — ATTRACTIVE

This attractive home, built with a high regard for Japanese architecture also uses the best functionalism of Western architecture to produce better living because — it is located in the 2nd best area (Uplands is first) — the lot is large, 74x220 — it's treed, offering you a natural park of your own. The privacy extends also to the home. The living room is peninsular with a separate entrance (how many times have you crossed through a living room or dining room to get to another room — A living area should not serve as a passageway). Between the living room and the large dining room is a free standing stone fireplace — serving both rooms and it soars to the full height of the open beamed roof. The wall between the dining room and kitchen is translucent and has a Japanese design. The lighting from either room through the panelling adds a most interesting feature to these rooms. The kitchen has black walnut cabinets that only Tech Designed Homes would produce. This is a room that most ladies will not be able to resist. The bedrooms are large, 2 have feature walls and special lighting and there are two full bathrooms. In addition there is a large rumpus room finished in yellow cedar with a floor to ceiling fireplace. There are many more features. The price is $39,500 and there is a 8½ per cent mortgage available. B. Price, 385-2458.

Outpour of World Rejoicing Heard 50 Years Ago Monday

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

On a cold, misty morning 50 years ago the skirl of Canadian bagpipes echoed through the ancient Belgian city of Mons, an advance signal for the greatest outpouring of rejoicing the world had ever seen.

At 11 a.m. Nov. 11, 1918, a few hours after two divisions of Canadian infantry chased the last Germans out of Mons, a hush fell over Europe. The Great War, as it was then known, was over.

There was a strange symmetry about its end. The guns fell silent at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, and Mons, site of the last action of the war, was wheere the British Expeditionary Force—dubbed by Kaiser Wilhelm the "contemptible little army"—had first clashed with Germany and been forced to retreat in August, 1914. Now the Canadian Corps had brought the war full circle.

London and Paris went wild. Work ceased everywhere in the British capital as crowds poured through the streets, commandeering open-topped omnibuses, dancing, cheering and getting drunk. The whoopee roared on for three days, until police moved in. A bonfire heaped against the foot of Nelson's Column left scorch marks which can still be seen.

The war had lasted four years, three months and one week. It had cost the lives of some 10,000,000 men—not counting civilians—and wounded another 21,000,000. Much of northern France and Belgium was a blackened wasteland, upon which armies of white crosses would within a generation witness another, even more destructive war between the same powers.

Proved Nothing

"It had meant nothing, solved nothing and proved nothing," wrote American historian Leon Wolff. All it achieved, when the combatants finished wrangling over peace terms at Versailles, was to lay the powder trail to the Second World War.

Germany's Chancellor Bismarck had long before predicted that "some damn foolish thing in the Balkans" would eventually set Europe ablaze. Because of a shot fired by a Serbian student at an Austrian archduke, the generation that should have led Europe and the Commonwealth in the mid-20th centurp was destroyed in the mud of Flanders and on the burning beaches of Gallipoli.

The map of Europe changed dramatically—some say to Germany's advantage. Russia, engulfed by revolution, virtually ceased to exist as a European power. Her brooding presence on Germany's eastern border was replaced by a muddle of small states; beyond them, in A. J. P. Taylor's phrase, stretched "an obscurity of ignorance."

Empires Vanished

Two empires vanished—Habsburg Austria - Hungary and Ottoman Turkey—but the German Reich remained in existence, gnawing on the humiliations of Versailles. Austria, described by a pre-war Viennese satirist as "a research laboratory for world destruction"—she had nearly started the world war in 1908 with a reckless Balkan adventure—was truncated and forbidden to unite with Germany.

The buildup of military power before 1914 made war inevitable, and few wars have begun with more popular hysteria on all sides, mingled with a strain of genuine idealism.

"Now God be thanked who has matched us with His hour," exclaimed poet Rupert Brooke, and on Aug. 4, 1914, hundreds of thousands rushed to enlist for a conflict everyone except Lord Kitchener, the British war minister, expected would be over by Christmas.

Major Example

It took two years to destroy that high-flown assurance, before the front lines discovered that to many chateau-based generals on the Western Front, men seemed to be just expendable human ammunition. The Somme was a major example—four agonizing months in 1916 which accomplished nothing and cost each side 500,000 men—60,000 British soldiers in the first day alone.

Reflecting the new bitterness, war poet Siegfried Sassoon threw his Military Cross into the river and wrote a verse about a general which expressed the mood in the trenches:

"He's a cheery old card," grunted Harry to Jack,
As they slogged up to Arras with rifle and pack.
But he did for them both by his plan of attack.

Although the total dead of the First World War was to be exceeded more than five times by the later conflict with its huge civilian tolls, Britain and her empire lost far more lives in the trenches of 1914-18—one reliable estimate shows 947,000 compared with 512,000 in 1939-45.

At one stage on the Western Front, the life expectancy of a machine-gunner was put at 30 minutes.

'Led by Dinkeys'

The German general von Falkenhayn called the British troops "lions led by donkeys," and no First War commander has been so pilloried by posterity as Field Marshal Douglas Haig. His strategy on the Western Front was to hurl wave after wave of men at machine - gun emplacements, always hoping for a breakthrough that would enable him to throw his beloved cavalry into the gap.

By later standards, the First World War was hardly a world war at all, though 30 countries mustered 50,000,000 men to fight it.

While the naval conflict ranged as far south as the Falkland Islands, and Winston Churchill with a group of eastern-minded strategists tried to roll up enemy Europe from the southeast with the ill-fated 1915 Dardanelles campaign, the heart of the drama was played out in Flanders' fields.

The necklace of low hills around medieval Ypres became a roll-call of battle honors for half the world. Canada's citizen army was blooded here, winning glory at St. Julien under history's first poison gas attack, holding the ill-named Sanctuary Wood until only a handful survived, and plunging uphill through slimy mud to the German machine-guns at Passchendaele.

Shell-Holes Remain

So fiercely was this land fought over that the shell-holes in the farmland have not levelled out to this day.

The Canadian troops, whose biggest victory was Vimy Ridge in 1917, won a reputation for tenacity that struck awe into German historians. One in 10 of the 619,636 who served with the Canadian army was killed in Europe—those who did return home, says the official Canadian war history, came back with "a pride of nationhood they had not known before."

It was not the war Britain had expected to fight, this slugging match in the muddy Ypres Salient. Her Grand Fleet lay idle much of the war while the German battleships refused to emerge for the long-awaited naval set-piece. When it finally came, at Jutland in 1916, it was a five-minute fiasco that settled nothing.

Germany's naval war was mostly under water, and it was her U-boat attacks on unarmed merchant shipping—dramatically highlighted by the 1915 sinking of the Cunard passenger liner Lusitania—that eventually drew the United States into battle in April, 1917.

Popular Slogans

The armistice, when it came, was signed in an atmosphere compounded of fears that Bolshevism would sweep Europe, President Wilson's idealistic hopes for a world that would outlaw war and a simple desire to see Germany pay.

"Hang the Kaiser" and "Squeeze the German lemon until the pips squeak," were popular slogans in the British election of November, 1918. The French, especially, wanted assurance that never again would a German army march across their borders.

The result was the Allied occupation of the Rhineland, the disarming of Germany and a huge reparations bill. All were futile.

The festering sore of the Rhineland burst in 1936 with Hitler's occupation. Under the guise of flying and sporting clubs, Germany surreptitiously rebuilt her air force and drilled a new generation in arms. Money for reparations came in loans from the U.S. in a crazy inflationary circle.

Prime Minister Lloyd George told the Commons on that first armistice day: "I hope we may say that thus, this fateful morning, came to an end all wars."

Marshal Ferdinand Foch, Allied supreme commander, was more prescient. He looked at the Versailles Treaty in 1919 and remarked: "This is not peace, It is an armistice for 20 years."

Health Club Owner Seeks City Seat

Ove Witt has jumped the gun on civic election nominations by announcing his candidacy for Victoria alderman.

The 41-year-old health club owner plans to bill himself as the "accessible alderman."

He hasn't got a hard platform but wants to be a representative forming a "bridge between the public and the city."

"One of the things that made me run is that I have heard for years the saying 'Why don't young people run?' "

Mr. Witt was born in Denmark and has worked as truck driver, steelworker, hotel manager, salesman and logger.

Nominations open Nov 15 and close Nov. 25 for the civic election, involving four seats. Election day is Dec. 7.

Two aldermen now on council Lloyd Clarkson and Hugh Ramsay, have indicated they will not run again. Cecil Parrott and Percy Frampton will stand for re-election.

Back in the good old days (when winters were much, much colder), you could hear hot brooms slapping on every slough and mill pond from here to the Maritimes. Today, the rinks have moved indoors. They cool their Old Style in a fridge, not in a snowbank. But that Old Style flavour's still the same . . . brewed slow and easy, to hit that spot dead centre every time.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN MARK ANNIVERSARY

Crowd Marvels at Hair Spray

By GAY PAULEY

PRAGUE (UPI) — Beauty shop methods differ as much as the language of countries one visits.

But the coiffing technique of "teasing" proves universal. Westerners also call it back combing, the method of combing or brushing the hair in reverse to give it bulk. The method, it turns out, is used in shops I've visited from Omaha to Osaka, from Louisville to Leningrad. And in some parts of the world, it can be a hair-raising experience, literally.

We 60 U.S. women on an unofficial "woman to woman" tour of Eastern Europe have had hair "done" in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Budapest and Prague.

Budapest and Prague shops prove nearest U.S. standard in equipment, with the latest in rollers and hair sprays, in shampoo basins and reclining chairs for the washing. In many Russian shops, you lean forward over a basin, a towel folded over your eyes to keep out suds.

NO APPOINTMENTS

The usual method is to show at a shop, hang your coat, and wait your turn as the natives do.

I elected to try the shop at the Hotel Sovietskaya in Leningrad, took my own shampoo as another of our party had suggested (a good idea in any part of the world if you've had color done on your locks), and wished later I'd also taken my own rollers, comb and brush.

I don't know how many other heads had been rolled in the same rollers with their elastic bands wearing out, how many other heads brushed with the brush that brushed me, how many other heads teased with the same comb.

Some of our party were a bit startled at a Kiev hotel shop when they found the manicurist using the same water to soak nails on customer after customer instead of changing each time.

As for my hairdresser, she was a pert little blonde who couldn't have been more than 21, and couldn't have been more co-operative as she washed (one rinse only, however), set, combed and teased, interpreting my sign language on how the hair should be arranged.

PAY FIRST

But once the combing was finished, came the moment of truth. The rubber bulb used to spray the lacquer had stuck. The areosol spray hasn't reached Leningrad yet. As the shop's male manager tried to unstick the gooey mess, I indicated I would go get the spray in my room.

Much ado then, whether I should pay before I left. Could I be trusted to return? We resolved that. I paid before I left. But back in a few minutes with my own spray for the finishing touches, I was greeted with half the shop around to watch an aerosol at work.

The surprise was in the cost of the works—one ruble (a little over $1 U.S.) for the shampoo, 25 Kopeks (about 25 cents) for manicure. No tipping is standard practice, but I slipped 20 kopeks to my hairdresser anyway.

Chic Italian Claims Bare Look Not Sexy

By KARIN MOSER

ROME (CP) — "If a woman really wants to be sexy, and not just look sexy, she had better not bare too much of herself," says Zoe Fontana, one of the world's leading fashion designers.

As a seasoned couturier whose fame spread after the Second World War, Fontana, as she prefers to be called, has some strong views about baring the female form.

Operated by Fontana and her sister, Sorelle, the House of Fontana has dressed such international beauty stars as Elizabeth Taylor, Audrey Hepburn, Ava Gardner and Kim Novak, "and except for their roles in films, these actresses do not bare themselves to extremes."

"I simply can't understand why a woman thinks she has to expose almost everything to look appealing," says the designer.

"She should understand that to bare the body in an effort to achieve sex appeal is an exaggeration which backfires. Sex appeal is femininity, and femininity is not an exaggeration. It is elegance achieved through a total image of fashion equilibrium from head to toe.

FASHION ENHANCES

Dressed in a simple navy sleeveless skimmer, greyish-blonde hair roped into a puffy chignon high on the crown of her head, the outwardly placid Fontana began to snap and crackle as she tried to relate the sex image to fashion.

"Fashions may change from year to year," she began in English and then slipped into French, "but men don't, and as long as they are men they will always respond to that which challenges their imagination.

"A woman knows herself quite well by the time she reaches 25. She should therefore dress to suit her personality and not to change it. Her best years are between 25 and 45 and she should develop and enhance these years in a most fashionable way."

AVOID COLOR TRAP

Fontana warns women not to fall into the fashion color trap which saturates the market one season with vivid red or another with brilliant orange.

"A woman often feels she must wear these colors if she is to be in style. This is wrong, terribly wrong. If a color does not suit her complexion, she should never, never wear it, no matter how fashionable it may be."

Movies Planned For School Bazaar

A Christmas tree with inexpensive gifts, and a fish pond will be special attractions at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church School bazaar, planned for Saturday, November 23, at the church hall. And, while their parents shop, the children will be able to watch movies, too.

Auxiliary members are planning stalls of home baking, handicrafts, Christmas decorations, attic treasurers and toys, all suitable for Christmas gifts.

CLUB CALENDAR

Card party and Christmas Aisle, Victorian Order of Nurses' Auxiliary, Wednesday at 1 p.m., Holyrood House. Dessert and coffee to be served. Tickets available by phoning 382-2495.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Special Church Service

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John R. Nicholson will attend the annual Remembrance Day church service, to be held in St. John's Anglican Church on Sunday. Capt. R. Dale Kilshaw will be the aide-de-camp in attendance.

On completion of the Remembrance Day service and march past on Monday, His Honor will attend a luncheon in the Officers' Mess of Bay Street Armory, at which the hosts will be the commanding officer and officers of the Fifth British Columbia) Field Battery.

Country Club Ball

Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club members are combining their annual presentation dinner and fall ball this year. Tonight, the event begins with cocktails at 7 p.m., and dinner at 7:30, followed by presentation of prizes for the year. The Country Club Trio will play for dancing at the ball later in the evening.

Double Celebration

A recent dance at McMorran's Seaview Room saw Mr. Rex Hughes being the guest of honor at a party arranged by his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Rogers. The party was held in honor of Mr. Hughes' 65th birthday and his retirement from the Bamberton cement plant, where he has worked for 48 years. Others at the party were Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McCleave, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tomlinson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Art DeLisles, Mr. and Mrs. Rod Muirhead, Mr. and Mrs. Art Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Zellinsky, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Zellinsky, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Starkey, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Art Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Erdman, Miss Glyde Trowsse, Mrs. Mabel Walker, Miss Edith Jeune, Mrs. Peg Eastwood and Mrs. Joan Eastwood.

Doing The Town

By DOROTHY FRASER

New expanded Gallery a real showplace! . . .

Seen the attractive new exterior of The Gallery at Home Furniture? . . . It's old English half timber, with a wide border of leaded glass around the big show window . . . and is so inviting that you'll want to go inside for a closer look at all the beautiful furniture which . . . take our word for it . . . is out of this world! . . . Home's Gallery now consists of four floors . . . Colonial Maple Room downstairs . . . main floor Gallery, full, as usual, of choice pieces of traditional furniture . . . Sheraton Room on the second floor has more of the same . . . Here we saw a magnificent big breakfront cabinet . . . perfect for a large dining room, living room or library . . . It's a mahogany antique reproduction, 80" long . . . has glass doors with inlaid panels . . . three large cupboards below . . . priced at $1,075 . . . A lovely dining room suite . . . some early Victorian chairs . . . Round glass china cabinets and corner cabinets . . . Inlaid marquetry commodes, tables, etc. . . . They'll all make you positively drool! . . . But continue up the red-carpeted stairway to the new "English Village" where the white walls and dark oak beamed ceiling makes a fitting setting for the old English Tudor oak furniture for which Home is rapidly becoming famous . . . If you've a taste for the solid medieval type of furniture you'll find this oak irresistible! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Fraction proportions from 3/3 to 9/10 launch the tunic looks for coats, suits, dresses, pants, etc.

Craftsmen of Glastonbury, England . . . the ancient Avalon of song and story . . . have been working sheepskins for over 1,000 years . . . and from Glastonbury come the genuine sheepskins coats just lately arrived at Wilson's . . . They're about ⅝ length, with welt seam detailing and small back vent . . . nutmeg brown sueded finish on the outside . . . woolly side in . . . and are color-fast, water repellent and dirt resistant . . . A coat like this would last a lifetime, we should think . . . and keep its good looks right up to the end! . . . Well worth the $160 price tag . . . Some very smart suede jackets come from Glastonbury too . . . They're a good length, with smooth leather collars and half-belts at the back . . . Sleek, carefully matched skins, in dark brown or moss green . . . $85 . . . Other suede jackets in cinnamon, royal blue and titian red . . . If you've been looking for a really good car coat you'll like some new arrivals from England . . . camelhair lined with a wool fur fabric, very warm and not bulky . . . Colors are brown, beige and vicuna, and they're priced at $100 . . . A few of those delightful alpaca wool ponchos from Peru . . . trimmed with natural alpaca fur . . . have just come in and will likely be snapped up soon . . . Great over slacks and for after-ski wear . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Women want to involve themselves with their clothes, thinks Rudi Gernreich. He feels they should have the basics . . . do their own thing with scarves and chains.

Venetian lanternos are beautiful . . .

The Continental Room at Sydney Reynolds is more than ever a joy to walk into these days . . . literally sparkling with color and light reflected in the glass and crystal . . . and lanternos in various sizes and fascinating shapes . . . A new shipment of these lanternos has just arrived from Venice . . . and if you'd like a distinctive new note of decor in your home for Christmas . . . do go see them: Pinks, blues, greens and ambers, in gilded wrought iron frames, they're just beautiful! Especially nice, we think, for hallways and stairwells . . . but equally appropriate in living rooms, bedrooms, etc. . . . One thing we do know is that everyone who owns a lanterno is thrilled with the effect . . . Very reasonably priced, from $18 up . . . There's a lot of beautiful new European cut crystal in the Continental Room too . . . We noticed a number of handsome decanters . . . which for some reason seem to be in short supply elsewhere in town . . . so if you'd like a decanter, Reynolds is the place to get it! There are cut crystal fruit and flower bowls in all shapes and sizes . . . Noticed a very lovely cut glass claret jug with handle . . . and here in time for the "entertaining" season is a great variety of Bohemian glass plain stemware . . . including hollow-stem champagne glasses . . . whose good looks belie the inexpensive price tags! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

In Paris it's pants for every hour of the day or night. Sometimes cuffed . . . always worn with high-vamped shoes with thick heels.

Boots spell style and comfort . . .

Boots are not only high fashion . . . but they're the most sensible and practical footwear you can own now that the cold, damp, drizzly days are upon us . . . and they'll pay you dividends both style-wise and comfort-wise . . . We viewed Munday's collection of boots this week, and can report that they're smarter, softer, more supple than ever before! Mostly by Brevitt, one knee-high model, in black or antique brown, has low block heel and is zipped up the side . . . has a skin fit (foam lining) which seems to us just right for this climate of ours . . . Another very handsome boot, with same type of heel and lining, is about 12" high . . . A smart, high-style boot in mink color or black, has gored front and cuban heel . . . and if you're addicted to cold feet, you'll like the slightly lower boot with cozy pile lining, narrow cuban heel . . . black or brown . . . These Brevitt boots are priced from $29.95 to $35 . . . Then there's a couple of low boots from Italy which we think will be especially liked by college students because they can be worn comfortably all day . . . One is a deep reddish brown with high gore front . . . the other a medium tan with strap and buckle trim . . . $18.95 . . . Two styles of very smart cocktail boots in suede and grosgrain . . . $31.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

New makeup is sheerer than ever this season. It is truly transparent and translucent.

Good things come in threes . . .

. . . three colors, that is . . . like the cute tri-color Jonathan Logan dresses at the Madam and Eve Shop . . . Definitely for the teen-age crowd . . . they're young and gay and slightly mad . . . Flip little numbers in soft double knit fabric . . . One sleeveless style has a long gold torso, short black skirt with two pleats on either side of the front . . . white collar ending in a big black bow . . . Another has black top, deep pointed white collar and gathered gold skirt . . . A third style has navy top, white collar and long white sleeves, bright red skirt . . . Another red-white-blue combination is styled with V-neck outlined with a white band, which is also used for the cuffs of the wrist-length sleeves . . . Black and brown . . . so very striking when used together . . . are teamed with white collar and sleeves in yet another distinctive dress . . . and there's a darling dress with white top, red skirt and camel colored belt . . . trimmed with round gold buttons and big gold buckle . . . If you're more conservative-minded, you can still have the tri-color effect with plain knits sparked with wide belts in three different colors . . . A beige topped, navy skirted frock has a red fake snakeskin belt . . . Go see all these charmers at . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Does your man need a "corset?" . . .

We girls have no monopoly on back complaints . . . In fact we're amazed at the number of our menfolk who periodically have to don what we facetiously refer to as "corsets" . . . to give comfort and support when a bad back starts acting up . . . These supports designed for men have been pretty complicated contraptions of cotton, heavy bones and crisscross of laces up till now . . . but glory be! Camp have now come out with two new masculine back supports which are lighter, cooler, more convenient and more comfortable . . . Made of sturdy leno-elastic, with extra-supporting cotton bands which hook into eyelets instead of trussing a man up with laces . . . they're scientifically designed to do a terrific job of support without anyone being the wiser . . . (No ridges to be outlined under trousers) . . . These new Camp supports are called "Cadenza" and are obtainable only at McGill & Orme's Surgical Supplies Ltd., . . . Two styles and lengths . . . depending on whether a man needs lumbarsacral or sacroiliac support . . . both kinds have zippers so you can get in and out of them easily . . . and enjoy the maximum of agility right along with needed support . . . There's a complete range of sizes, and an expert fitter on hand at . . . Surgical Supplies Ltd., 1012 Broad St., 384-8433.

New store a mecca for hobbyists . . .

We discovered the most fascinating hobbies shop last week . . . It's called Jean's Hobbies Hutch . . . on Johnson St. between Government and Wharf . . . and it has simply everything you could possibly think of for making all manner of things . . . plus a lot of items you've probably never even dreamed of! . . . Mrs. Jean Creech, the owner, . . . when pressed . . . admitted modestly that she has the largest selection of crafts supplies in town . . . so that the hobbyist can obtain everything she needs right on the spot instead of having to pick up one item here and another there . . . For instance, there's a complete line of styrofoam . . . planks, balls, eggs, fancy shapes, etc. . . . Feathers of every color for those gorgeous feather flowers . . . Dippity-Glass, a new plastic glass for making flowers and ornaments . . . Pearl parchment . . . which is just on the market in different colors . . . Instant papier mache which moulds like clay, dries hard . . . A very large sequin and bead display . . . Glass stains and decopage for decorating bottles . . . A terrific selection of Christmas supplies for craft work . . . (and the most beautiful Christmas decorations already made up, and which you can buy if you're not artistically inclined yourself) . . . There's everything needed for model railroading, as well as chemistry supplies and microscopes and slides . . . Complete line of things for making candles and candelabra . . . plus much, much more! . . . Jean's Hobbies Hutch, 554 Johnson St., 388-7741.

Deadlines Close For Parcel Post

By PENNY SAVER

If you still have a Christmas parcel to mail to a European country you are running late. If your parcel is for England you should get it to the post office by Monday. Bundles for any of the Caribbean countries will hold until Friday while any time up to the end of the month will do for points on the North American continent. If these deadlines come as an unpleasant shock don't despair. You aren't alone, for one thing. Mailing and receiving Christamas parcels late is one of the traditional joys of the season. Also, the kind post office worker who detailed the deadline matter to me pointed out that your parcel just might arrive on time anyway. It might even arrive before one that was mailed before the suggested deadline. Still, mailing time is getting short — too short for comfort.

I only gave thought of my Christmas parcels this last week and the sudden realization that some of the mailing deadlines were past sent me scurrying to the nearest stationer for sturdy wrapping paper. By sheer accident I discovered just the thing I've been missing for years — self-sticking tape. In outward appearance this is plain ordinary brown-paper tape for sealing seams and end flaps. The beauty of it is that it doesn't need licking or a complicated system of sponges. (How many of us housewives have one of those handy wetter-dispensers?) A roll that is 1½ inches wide and 250 inches in length costs 59 cents. Now my only problem will be getting it onto the package without winding myself into a cocoon of sticky tape.

Cardboard Softens Ride

Corrugated cardboard is wonderful for softening the bumps and bounces of a mail-truck. But cutting up a corrugated cardboard box for packing material is another thing altogether. The hands begin to ache and mine have been known to give out at the mere mention of the task. Scissors (which hate cutting heavy paper anyway) get duller and duller (in a subjective sense) and always manage to go astray. (I make a point of never blaming myself for sloppy cutting — it is always the fault of the scissors.) This year I have decided not to suffer. I bought myself a supply of single face corrugated cardboard. It comes in sheets 24 inches wide by 54 inches long. A roll this size is 49 cents. Because it isn't made into a box shape it is much easier to handle if it does need cutting. Why didn't I try it years ago?

The final step in a well-wrapped package is the string, but the brown paper is quite important too. I found brown wrapping paper in two weights. First, the lighter of the two: A roll 24 inches wide by 23 feet long is 49 cents. One that is the same width but 45 feet long is 89 cents. If more width is needed there are sheets for 29 cents that are 36 inches by 96 inches. For packages that must travel a long way, I recommend extra heavy paper. This is available in nine foot lengths that are 48 inches wide at 49 cents a sheet. A sheet that is 18 feet by 48 inches is 89 cents.

If you would like to know where I shopped for these wrapping supplies, please call 382-3131.

CRANBERRY APPLE CREAM MOLD

Two envelopes unflavored gelatine; ½ cup cold water; 1 pound fresh cranberries; 1 cup fresh orange juice; 2 cups sugar; ½ pint sour cream; 1 cup diced, peeled apple; salad greens.

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve over boiling water. Combine cranberries, orange juice and sugar in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until cranberry skins pop; stir in dissolved gelatine. Cool slightly.

Gradually stir cranberry mixture into sour cream. Chill until mixture mounds when dropped from spoon. Fold in diced apple. Pour into 6-cup ring mold. Chill at least 3 hours or until firm. At serving time, unmold and garnish with salad greens. Makes 8 servings.

PREMIER'S WIFE TO OFFICIATE

Mrs. W. A. C. DEAR ABBY . . .

Deadbeat Debtor Burns Her Up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is an honest, hard-working man, lent a man $200. My husband was so sure of this man's character that he didn't ask him to sign a note or anything. He didn't even charge him the regular interest.

This man has made no effort to pay back a dime of it, and it's been nearly 3 years! Now listen to this. This deadbeat's sister is married to one of the richest men in this town. Everyone knows him. He has given away millions!

I told my husband to get in touch with this millionaire brother-in-law and ask him for the money, or I'd do it. Two hundred dollars doesn't mean any more to a millionaire than 25 cents. My husband refused to do it. Should I?

BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED: No. No man (regardless of how "rich" he is), is responsible for his brother-in-law's debts. It is a good bet that this "rich" brother-in-law has already given his deadbeat relative all the financial help he intends to, and has washed his hands of him, which is his privilege. Stay out of it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl, 14, who sits for a lady who has twin boys, 2, and a girl, 6. She also has a son, 15. When I sit there, I have more trouble with the 15-year-old boy than I do with the other kids if you know what I mean. He is all the time talking dirty and like that.

I don't want to get this boy into trouble, but I really don't care to sit there again if I know that boy will be home. The lady is very nice and the baby-sitting money sure comes in handy, so how do I solve my problem without getting the boy in trouble?

"CRESTVIEW 3"

DEAR "CRESTVIEW": Maybe the boy needs to get into "a little trouble" now in order to stay out of a lot of trouble later. The next time you are asked to sit there, tell the lady of the house to tell her son to behave himself, and I doubt if you'll have to stand for any more of his nonsense.

DEAR ABBY: I am a man of 40 and I recently met a very nice woman of 34 at a dance. Dancing is my favorite hobby and I would rather dance than eat. This lady is very nice in every way, but she is quite a bit on the heavy side; dancing with her is like dancing with a Sherman tank.

I like my partner to be light on her feet. Do you think it would help if she took some dancing lessons? Or should I hint that maybe she should lose some weight? I have an interest in her.

LOVES TO DANCE

DEAR LOVES: Size has very little to do with how "light" a dancer is on her feet. Some of the best dancers (men as well as women) are as wide as they are tall. Lessons might help, but if you have an "interest" in her, you're old enough to know that life is not one long waltz.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my late 40s and am considered quite attractive, if ~~I do so~~ say so myself. I own my home, drive a late model car, and run a small business.

About a year ago I met a retired officer about my age who had lost his wife. We share many of the same interests and enjoy just being together. I know he cares for me, but I'm not any nearer to matrimony now than when we met. In fact, he said from the start he didn't plan to marry.

Abby, I just live for the hours we spend together, but I can't go on indefinitely like this. It's expensive to hire help so I can leave my business to be with him. I know a man doesn't like to be pressured, but I have to know if he will ever marry me. How can I find out?

WANTS TO WED

DEAR WANTS: Ask him. Your alternative is to be an available playmate. And time marches on.

For Abby's new booklet "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

CLUBWOMEN'S NEWS

New Officers: Mrs. Joan Scott was elected captain when the Ladies' Division of the Gorge Vale Golf Club met for its annual general meeting in the clubhouse. Others elected are: Vice-captain, Mrs. Kay Butt; secretary, Mrs. Irene Plaxton; treasurer, Mrs. Agnes Castle, and committee members, Mrs. May Cross, Mrs. Trudy Panteluk, Mrs. Mary Cleland, Mrs. Nita Moody and Mrs. Mary Wakelin. It was decided to hold the division's annual banquet in the clubhouse on Friday, November 29. Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m., and banquet will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Reports on Sales: Mrs. F. Passmore reported that 345 copies of the "Theatre in the Kitchen" cook-book have been sold when the Actors' Committee to Bastion Theatre met recently in the Blanshard Street studio. It is intended to add two students' or children's gift vouchers for the theatre's production "Peter Pan" as an added incentive to book sales during the coming season. Mrs. P. Hind was welcomed as a new member. Thanks were expressed to Impacts 'n' Imports for the store's fashion show presented to raise profits for the theatre. It was noted that Friday's performance of "School for Wives" in the auditorium of the provincial museum was the first theatrical production to be performed there. It was also noted that the touring company is now halfway through its 50 performances. "Cinderella" is now being performed at the McPherson Playhouse. Saturday matinees are planned for November 9 and 16. The annual general meeting of the committee will be held December 2 at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Harvey Waldner, 5005 Wesley Road.

GUIDELINES FOR THE TEEN-AGE GIRL

By Dr. TOM McGINNIS

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT CONSIDERED JUST A CINDERELLA MYTH

(Editor's Note—This report on teenage boy-girl relationships is adapted from the book, "A Girl's Guide to Dating and Going Steady." The author is a well-known New Jersey psychotherapist and professor at New York University).

Of course, nobody believes the story of Cinderella. It is a fairy tale. We know that a sudden, miraculous change from a drab existence in which we may feel unloved to one which is all glamor and beauty, and in which the one of our fondest dreams suddenly falls in love with us, does not happen in real life.

We say we do not believe it, but many of us do not quite disbelieve it either.

That some teen-age girls think that maybe the Cinderella story could happen to them is suggested by the way they often develop crushes on boys or men they have not known very well, or think they are in love with someone after one or two meetings.

Does this mean I doubt that one can fall in love at first sight? Yes, it does. Perhaps in one case in a million love is there from the instant boy meets girl. But I doubt that it happens more than that.

It is possible to "like at first sight," and even to "like very much." You can feel strongly attracted to another person just by looking at him. And it is likely that most women liked the looks of their husbands when they first saw them, although I know of happy marriages among people who admitted that they "couldn't stand the sight of each other" the first time they met. But even if you like someone the instant you see him, you still have a great distance to travel before you love him and he loves you.

RESPONSE PATTERN

Why is it that you can look at a boy you have never seen and like him right away, while you look at the next boy and don't care if you never see him again? Why do many people claim that they are "good judges of character" and can tell at a glance whether they like someone or not?

This question is worth exploring, because the answer not only will help you understand better why you react to different boys differently, but will also help you in your relations with girls and, in fact, with everyone you meet.

We all start life with a blank slate. We have no built-in ideas about character or personality. But as babies, then small children, and then as older children, we have experiences with different kinds of people.

We remember some of these experiences with pleasure and some with pain, and deep in our minds we associate the pleasure or pain with the persons responsible for it. We begin to build what is known as a response pattern.

Bit by bit, perhaps after many experiences which start out with appearance of love, but fail to grow into anything meaningful, there may gradually develop an awareness that love consists of much more than the mere striking of sparks at the first meeting. If there is nothing more than sparks, the fire soon goes out. What is needed is careful, patient tending of the blaze until it grows into a warming fire with the possibility of lasting a long time.

HOW TO TELL

Another word for "false love" is infatuation. My dictionary defines it as being "completely carried away by unreasoning passion or attraction." Infatulation has seven main characteristics:

1. It happens suddenly.
2. It involves physical responses.
3. It centres on what it does for you.
4. It disregards realities.
5. It involves superlatives.
6. It thrives on daydreams.
7. It fails to withstand the test of time.

WHAT MAKES TRUE LOVE?

Love differs from infatuation in almost all particulars. As I use the term, love means that there is a greater appreciation and interplay of personal qualities — kindness, tenderness, understanding, dependability — and somewhat less emphasis on physical attraction, even though the latter is always present and important.

Here are some of the qualities of love:

It develops slowly: You cannot tell really what a person is like on first sight, or even after a few meetings. Therefore, you cannot fully understand him until you know him better. Many people "wear a mask" with a stranger and try to be on their best behavior to impress him. They do their best to be pleasant and agreeable and they keep such reactions as anger under control.

Only after they feel they can relax and be themselves do they reveal their true natures. That is why it sometimes takes months, even years, for true feelings of love to develop.

It revolves around "us" or "you" instead of "me": Lovers come to think of themselves as a pair, united in a bond of hearts and minds. Each person becomes more aware of wanting to please and serve the other — to give sympathy in time of disappointment, encouragement, support.

Its response is more emotional than physical: Lovers' attraction for each other is based more on a desire to be emotionally close, rather than a desire for physical sensations. Kissing or other acts of affection are mutual — both girl and boy want to do them. Neither has to use persuasion or force, and neither has the feeling that he or she is "used" or "exploited" by the other.

It involves realities: The lovers usually see no obstacles to prevent their love from reaching a permanent state of marriage. If any problems exist, they feel capable of solving them — and usually by their own efforts. Neither do they usually minimize the seriousness of their problems.

Two high school students in love will strive to finish their education before they marry, because they are realistic enough to know that their marriage will be stronger if it is based upon a solid educational foundation. Because they feel secure with each other, they do not think that they must act quickly before the spirit of love leaves them.

It involves fewer superlatives: Of course, you believe that your loved one is the ideal companion for you and you recognize his good qualities. Yet you also are aware of shortcomings or weaknesses he may have. You try to understand why he acts as he does and you make allowances for ways of acting which do not conform to your own.

Because your view is more reasonable, you are not shocked to discover his human nature and failings, as you might be had you placed him upon a pedestal. Just as you expect him to accept you when you are not acting in the most admirable way and to understand that you are not perfect, he realizes that he will not lose your esteem if he shows his real self to you.

It increases with contact: It may be true that "absence makes the heart grow fonder." It also is true that after they have been together for a while, lovers usually find that they love each other more than before. They do things that enable them to explore each other's personalities, to get to know and understand each other better. The more they see each other, the more they understand what makes the other tick. At the same time, they have the growing feeling that they themselves are understood, and this gives them a greater desire to be more understanding.

It intensifites with time: True love can continue to grow all your lifetime. It is based on the principle that the better you understand a boy and the better he understands you the more you will identify yourself with him, and he with you. Consequently, the greater will be your love.

Love, then, is not something that suddenly springs up like a beautiful flower out of the earth, has its moment of glory, and then withers away. It is more like a plant which grows slowly, inch by inch, over the years. It may have moments when its growth stops temporarily. But when it is cared for properly it continues to branch out in new directions, adding new beauty year after year.

NEXT: Going steady — is it for you?

'VISIONS OF SUGAR PLUMS . . .'

Chad Bell helps to reconstruct the time-honored Christmas poem, assisted by good fairy Carol Thomas, as their contribution toward the success of the Sugar Plum Bazaar, to be held at St. Dunstan's Church Hall, corner of San Juan and Tyndall Roads, on Saturday. The event will be opened by Mrs. N. F. Tanner at 11 a.m. A hot turkeyburger lunch and afternoon tea will be served. Mincemeat, made from a century-old recipe will be featured at the home baking stall. Christmas gifts, priced low enough to be bought by children; flowers, plants, hats, attic treasures, Christmas decorations and sewn gifts will be for sale.

New Service

The Victoria Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association has arranged a new service to assist parents and relatives of patients under treatment for mental illnesses. The service will take the form of a meeting, to be held Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 8 p.m. in the board room of Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook Street.

At the meeting the group will discuss mutual problems and discuss the possibility of providing mutual assistance. Pamphlets and literature will be available, as well a resource material.

Complexion Beauty

The secret of beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of tropical moist oil. The skin takes on an immediate healthy bloom as the tiny lines and blemishes are gently smoothed away. This saturation treatment with the moist oil of Olay is recommended by skin care consultants, who advise its daily use as a powder base to give the complexion day-long beauty. Your druggist will help you obtain a supply for your personal needs.

DREENA

IN MEMORIAM

Mamie Houlihan, who passed to her rest recently, is sadly missed by a host of friends who were touched by her warm, generous personality, her frequent visits and her genuine interest in their welfare.

Mamie Houlihan spent her life on the bountiful acres at Gordon Head, where her pioneering parents, James and Hannah Houlihan, had settled many years ago. She lived among flowers, which she shared with the sick and underprivileged. She formed lasting friendships with persons she had befriended through daily visitations. It was her nature to be always doing something for somebody. Even her closest friends were unaware of all her charitable acts.

Mamie's passing has left a void in the hearts of many persons in this community, but, they are happy with their memories of her gracious simplicity and thoughtfulness. The sunshine of her smile will always be remembered by them.

How come the Cunningham delivery boy is a girl?

If you've ever called Cunninghams during an emergency, you wouldn't ask.

We've realized for a long time, that when somebody gets sick, mother is usually the first one there. It's a built-in sense of urgency that women seem to have.

And our delivery boys have that kind of understanding in difficult moments because every one of them is a [illegible]. Some of them are even mothers.

Remember last year, during the flu epidemic, when the snow was up to your knees? Every single one of our prescriptions got through. And most of our girls had to work 15 to 18 hours a day to do it.

That's loyalty even we didn't expect.

And that's why you'll find a pretty face behind the wheel of every Cunningham car.

At Cunninghams we care.

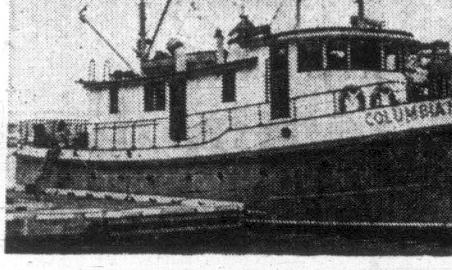
Anglican Mission Ship Becomes Floating Home

By NORMAN CRIBBENS



Columbian Ties Up In Inner Harbor

The Anglican mission ship Columbia III, which once took relief and supplies to lonely settlements of Vancouver Island is now a home.

It is home to Victoria-born Jack Cash and his wife, Elva, who bought it from the Anglican Church last year and have converted it into a permanent residence.

But their residence is also their business. They have renamed the Columbia the Columbian — and the Columbian is available for charter trips to any coastal resort between here and Alaska.

The trim 70-foot motor vessel now lies at anchor in the Inner Harbor while Mr. Cash visits his mother, Mrs. Gwen Cash, and many old friends in Victoria.

Later they will return to Coal Harbor, Vancouver, where the Columbian is berthed.

MORTGAGED EVERYTHING

"When I heard the Columbian was for sale, I mortgaged everything I had to buy it," Mr. Cash said. "For one thing, I was attracted by its fine traditions; for another I'm a boat lover and I'd rather make my living on a boat than anywhere else."

Mr. and Mrs. Cash have done a fine job of converting the mission boat into a home and pleasure craft as well.

With the help of friends, they installed four passenger staterooms and two lounges, one up and one down. The entire craft was re-painted and wired for TV and stereo. It was also fitted with an automatic oil furnace, a deep freeze and a propane gas cooker.

The Columbian also has radar equipment installed by the Anglican Church in 1966. The craft has a 155-horsepower deisel engine and was built at New Westminster. It has a speed of from nine to 10 knots.

HANDLES MANY JOBS

Mr. Cash describes himself as captain, engineer, and dish washer. His attractive wife (a Blue Nose from Nova Scotia) is first mate, deckhand and cook.

"But we both take turns at the wheel," she said.

There is a third member of the crew — a Russian blue cat named Smudge, who has been with Mr. and Mrs. Cash for five years.

"Smudge is a good cat to have on a boat," Mrs. Cash said, "because she's so highly strung she's terrified of going ashore.

There was a reception aboard the Columbian Wednesday night in honor of Mrs. Gwen Cash, mother of the skipper and author of many inspiring articles on Vancouver Island.

Cancer Fund Drive Exceeds Objective

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Cancer Society collected $5,543,638 in its 1968 funds campaign, $105,000 more than its objective, the society's annual campaign meeting was told Friday.

The meeting set an objective of $5,793,200 for 1969, a 6½-percent increase over this year's objective.

Before the Magistrate

An 18-year-old girl who earlier pleaded guilty to shoplifting a lacrosse ball worth 65 cents was given a suspended sentence in central magistrates' court

Before sentence he asked her if she had the slightest intention of co-operating with the probation officer or whether she wanted to go to jail. He noted she had not co-operated previously by sleeping-in past a time set for an interview with the officer and by failing to appear in court Thursday for sentence.

The girl said she would cooperate.

"We have some queer thefts but this seems to be the end," said the magistrate at that time.

P. Fillian, no fixed address, was fined $25 after pleading guilty to causing wilful damage. Court was told he kicked in a door at 890 Jasmine Street Aug. 19. Damage was estimated at $41.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said it was a domestic dispute and Magistrate Ostler advised the accused to knock on the door of the Family and Children's Service and have a sensible talk with a counsellor.

Jo-Anne Sherdahl, no fixed address, was sentenced to six months in jail on two counts of uttering. At an earlier hearing court was told she had forged two cheques worth $308.83 in the name of her estranged husband.

Leonard Gauthier, 759 Yates, was remanded to the custody of the medical administrator at Royal Jubilee Hospital. He will appear in court again Nov. 22.

At an earlier hearing he pleaded guilty to charges of possession of a sawed-off shotgun and a spring knife. A routine check of a locker at the Uvic library led to the charges.

Also remanded to the custody of the Royal Jubilee Hospital administrator was Ann Adams, no address available. She was charged with driving while under a licence suspension and will appear again in court Dec. 6.

Magistrate Ostler also ordered him to report to the social worker at Goodwill Industries for an interview and to surrender his driver's licence to the probation officer for six months.

At an earlier hearing court was told he and a 13-year-old juvenile took the car from an up-Island city.

Robert Bader, 402 Belmont, was sentenced to 10 days in jail for intoxicated driving.

William Aylesworth, 1148 Hadfield, was fined $100 for dangerous driving. Police said he was involved in an accident on Esquimalt Road Oct. 14.

Joe Coghill, 422 Quebec, was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. Court was told the accident happened on Johnson Street Sept. 29.

George McCann, 1936 Quamichan, was fined $300 for impaired driving. Police said he drove on Uplands Road Oct. 19.

NEW ROUTE TO ORIENT TOURIST BOON

Japan Airlines' new air route to Vancouver will boost tourist traffic to Canada from the Orient, Alan Field, western general manager for the Canadian government travel bureau, said Friday.

Mr. Field chaired a banquet to mark the inauguration of JAL's new Tokyo-Vancouver air route. Some 50 airline officials and travel agents from Japan, Hong Kong and Bangkok, Thailand, were guests.

Also present were Mayor Hugh Stephen, who welcomed the visitors to the city, Ron Worley, deputy minister of the tourist industry W. A. Irwin, publisher of the Victoria Daily Times, Yukichi Abe, general sales manager for JAL, and Clare Copeland, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Japan Airlines, the seventh largest carrier passenger airline in the world, began operating weekly flights — Thursdays and Sundays — from Vancouver to Tokyo in September.

Mr. Field noted that JAL had extensive operations in the Orient and the extension of its service to Vancouver would make British Columbia Canada's gateway to the Far East.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said the new air route would also stimulate travel from Canada to Japan.

"Canadians have always been fascinated by the Orient," he said.

School for Wives Version Brighter

By BERYL PROUDMAN

A questing perambulation around the new Provincial Museum will discover the Newcombe Auditorium in which Bastion Theatre's Touring Company presented its revised version of "School for Wives" Friday night.

The gold-dominated warmth of the tastefully decorated auditorium at the back of the museum, comfortably spaced seats, fine acoustics, discreetly carpeted, spacious foyer and the coldest drinking fountains in the city, put the audience into a mood of happy anticipation before the overture began.

It was the first production in the auditorium.

This tightened, shortened version of the musical show based on Moliere's comedy achieved a better pace and more forceful impact than last season's version.

Marge Adelberg's music, though not memorable, is lively, witty and full of rhythmic variety, and reflects the comic encounters well.

Gina Bigelow's voice sounded thin and breathless at times but Bill Hosie's rich tones were clearly audible and Barry Flatman sang the hero's role remarkably well despite a few notes which proved too low for his pleasant developing voice.

CONVINCING VILLAIN

As M. Arnolphe, Bill Hosie was convincingly villainous, pathetic or funny by turns; and, as the wide-eyed, unbelievably innocent deceiver Agnes, Gina Bigelow acted with great naturalness. Only in dramatic moments did a touch of stiffness enter her characterization.

Young, handsome, enthusiastic and romantic, Barry Flatman, as Horace, was all that a heroine like Agnes could desire.

Both in their actions and their appearance did Margaret Martin and Tom Cox personify the slyly stupid servants, Alfred and Georgette. When these two actors froze into transfixed idiocy, the technique proved as effective as it had in the film "Tom Jones," another period piece.

DESIGNING GOOD

Costumes were well-designed though Horace looked remarkably modern at his first entrance and several of the cloaks lacked the weight to drape. Agnes' costumes were particularly attractive and Madame Christolphe's flowing good-fairy robes added much to the final tableau.

Lighting was adequate though shadow silhouettes are more effective if used seldomer.

REAL ESTATE
From the Woman's Point of View

Shirley Philips

Ask any woman and she will tell you that "putting her home up for sale" is an invasion of her privacy! It offends that infinite core of femininity—that secret, wonderful aura of mystery that surrounds a woman.

Realtors everywhere are wont to wail: "What happens to a woman when her home is for sale" From a gracious, amiable, logical person she becomes "touchy, emotional and unco-operative!"

Because Homefinders' Realtors are all women they understand this transformation fully. Homefinders understand the complex emotions a woman experiences when complete strangers are opening her closet doors, discussing her decor — criticizing her castle—no matter how humble or grand it might be.

Homefinders are trained to protect the homeowner from curiosity seekers, from unnecessary showings—from those who could not buy through lack of capital. Purchasers are qualified "before" not "after!" That's why women everywhere are asking their husbands to list with Homefinders—the firm that understands women because they are women. A complete Real Estate Service.

Every Woman May Now Quickly

Lift Her Face Out Of Winter Lines, Wrinkles and Aging Dryness

. . . thanks to the "European Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection . . . both frigid arctic air and overheated dry rooms dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "European Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weather beaten your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of winter's drying action!

For Extra Dry Skin— Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry— 2ND DEBUT With Double Strength CEF 1200

New DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by winter's icy grip . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply seated lines and wrinkles.

Important To Regular Users of 2ND DEBUT

Particularly in these winter months, in time will your skin revert to the lined and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In winter weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all winter long.

COX

Well-Known Sportsman Dies at 74

Sportsmen of Greater Victoria today mourned the late W. H. (Bill) Cox, who died Friday in St. Joseph's Hospital at the age of 74 after a brief illness.

A native of the city, "Big Bill" was widely known in hunting and fishing circles.

He had been a life-long member of F.O.E. Aerie No. 12 and three years ago was given a testimonial dinner in recognition of his services to the organization.

Throughout his active life Mr. Cox was engaged in the trucking business, and as a youth drove a hard-tired, chain-drive model that was a familiar sight parked in front of the old family home on Joseph St.

Bill Cox was a prominent member of the comedy baseball team organized by the late Rebel Mowat in the 1930s, and the team's name, Cox's Army, was in honor of its tallest player.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Fred Bourne and Mrs. Jack Cumming, of Victoria, and Mrs. Harry Sandwith, of Clearbrook, B.C.; three brothers, A. J. Cox, R. F. Cox and C. H. Cox, all of Victoria; and two sisters, Mrs. A. J. Worth, Victoria, and Mrs. L. R. Huber, Guerneville, California; also four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 3 p.m. in Hayward's Funeral Chapel under the auspices of F.O.E. Aerie No. 12. Interment will be in Ross Bay Cemetery.

Nancy Helps Local Skiers Get Enthused

Olympic skier Nancy Greene injected a charge of enthusiasm Friday to the University of Victoria ski club.

During an afternoon visit to the university the ski first, talk later girl told the team how to drum up interest in their sport and build a strong club.

"She really filled us with encouragement," Wolfgang Richter, a fourth-year student and member of the team, said today.

"We haven't been getting much backing. We're facing the problem of convincing people we should get support," he said.

Miss Greene sat down and talked with team members about building up a competitive organization and developing a skiing area where they can practice.

The team will be going to Banff this year for its first competitive trip off the Island. They are hoping for development of Green Mountain for this year's skiing season.

One suggestion Miss Greene made was that members of the team compile a list of names of all skiers in the Victoria area to gather support for development of slopes on the island.

A local club has recently acquired a 21-year lease for a slope on Green Mountain and the Uvic group hopes to help its growth with their own support, Mr. Richter said.

They will hold a ski swap at the university Nov. 22 with a carnival to build up interest in the Uvic club.

Plans are also being made for a week-long ski trip, probably to an American slope, during the Christmas holiday.

Dinner to Raise Centre Funds

The ladies' auxiliary to the Italian Assistance Centre will hold an Italian dinner Nov. 17 at 6 p.m. in the Victoria Union Centre.

Proceeds from the event will go towards a new Italian community centre to replace the Cecilia Road centre.

Rail Workers Serve Notice For 15 Per Cent Pay Hike

MONTREAL (CP) — Eight unions representing 22,000 railway shop-craft workers across Canada have served Canadian railways with demands for a basic 15-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract plus an unspecified but substantial raise for mechanics with special skills.

The demands, contained in a notice to Canadian National Railways, CP Rail, and five smaller companies, were handed Friday to company officials by John H. Clark, head of the shop-craft.

Included in the notice were demands for premiums on shift and week-end work and higher rates for apprentices. However, no mention was made of specific details such as the present basic wage of shop-craft workers, the amount of the increase for mechanics with special skills and the amount of the shift premiums.

The shop-craft also presented a list of demands for fringe benefits somewhat similar to those made recently by two other railway union groups, the 75,000-strong Associated Non-Operating Railway Unions and the 20,000-member Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Company officials receiving the shop-craft notice said they will not be able to arrive at an estimation of the cost of the new demands until Monday. Since no specific figures had been mentioned for the increases over and above the 15-per-cent demand, it was likely that the company evaluation will not be precise.

VAGUE ON PURPOSE

Mr. Clark said the unions' demands were left purposely vague so as to give both parties in forthcoming contract negotiations room for real bargaining.

He said the shop-craft workers' demands differ from those of the other railway unions most particularly in their presentation and not in their content.

The changed approach could mark the beginning of a new concept of meaningful bargaining with the railway companies. Last time—after a nationwide two-week strike in 1966—the issue had been brought to an end by an act of Parliament Sept. 1, 1966.

The shop-craft unions include: International Association of Machinists; International Brotherhood of Boilermakers; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Sheet Metal Workers International Union; United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Industry; International Molders and Foundry Workers; and Division No. 4.

Liquor Law Revision Urged

VANCOUVER (CP)—Describing closure of licensed premises on election days as "useless, foolish and a relic of the distant past," the British Columbia Federation of Labor Friday called for the law's abolition.

Delegates to the federation's annual convention here also asked the provincial government to permit serving of liquor with meals in dining lounges between noon and 10 p.m. on Sundays.

Other liquor resolutions asked improved methods of identifying people in beer parlors as protection for workers who unknowingly serve patrons under 21, and easing of laws to permit room service of liquor in hotels.

Mrs. Jean Mohart said women are not getting the proper wage scales in the classifications in which they work.

Speaking on the report of the federation's human rights committee, the Office Employees Union official said "women are never allowed to make policy in the labor movement."

"We deserve the same rights at the bargaining table and don't talk dignity to me while we still see females not getting the same rates for the same jobs as men." of apartments and multiple dwel-

The report called for inclusion of apartments and multiple dwellings under the Public Accommodations Practices Act, to ensure there is no discrimination.

It also asked that a human rights commission be established.

E. T. (Al) Staley of Victoria was re-elected as president by acclamation. Replacing Jack Moore as vice-president is Jack MacKenzie, first vice-president of the western region council of the IWA. Re-elected as secretary is George Johnston, manager of the B.C. local of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union.

In this age of gimcracks and chrome, is there a place for a car so "over-engineered" that 90 percent of its value is invisible?

Mercedes-Benz thinks so.

Yesterday's dreamboats had enormous tail fins.

Obviously, there are millions every year who are willing to buy a car that's "in vogue"—even though they know newer gimcracks and styling quirks will soon erode their investment.

At Mercedes-Benz, iron-willed engineers, not stylists, rule the roost. And they insist on putting value where they think it belongs: at the heart of their machines.

That's why Mercedes-Benz motor cars can cost anywhere from about $4,800 to $29,000 without, to some tastes, "looking" it.

Form follows function

Make no mistake. The perfectionists at Mercedes-Benz do not apologize for those classic lines—free of faddish touches—that will still be handsome years from now. They simply think form should follow function instead of fashion.

The contours of that 250 sedan at right were dictated by the need to provide proper headroom, hiproom, legroom and protective packaging for five adults. Dictated by the proportions required for nimble maneuverability.

The car is both shorter and leaner than its overweight rivals. Yet it bristles with sophisticated, ultra-performance features available only as extra-cost options, if at all, on domestic sedans.

A superb machine

"Over-engineered," some critics say. Nonsense, retort Mercedes-Benz engineers. If a man can afford to invest thousands in a superb driving machine, he is entitled to get something superb.

An expert from Car and Driver tested the "new" 250 when it was released early in 1968 after an incubation period of five years. His verdict: "Offhand, I can't think of any other 4-door sedan in the world—with the possible exception of the Maserati Quattroporte—that handles, steers and stops like the Mercedes."

Scrapping the solid rear axle system of most domestic cars, the 250 uses an all-independent suspension — plus anti-sway bars front and rear. This endows it with the agility of a scrambling quarterback.

You can blast it over rutted and potholed gravel lanes. It behaves with almost eerie calm. You can thread it through the corkscrew turns of a mountain road, and enjoy yourself.

There's no sloppy play in the steering. No mushiness. When you hold the wheel, you "feel" the road. When you turn the wheel, the car darts instantly where you aim. Suddenly, you are a more confident driver.

Heroic stopping power

Stopping? Unless you have driven a 180-mph Grand Prix racing car or a Mercedes-Benz, chances are you have never experienced the security that comes from having really good brakes.

Disc brakes.

A few domestic sedans have front-wheel disc brakes, and others offer front-wheel discs as an option. But every Mercedes-Benz comes with massive disc brakes on all four wheels. Standard.

Result: You get more stopping power than you may ever need. But you sleep better at night.

The pinnacle of safety

As for safety, Mercedes-Benz engineers applaud the intent of the new U.S. Government regulations, and carry their protective measures beyond the letter of these laws.

The 250's best defense against blundering drivers is, of course, its uncanny evasive ability. But, if the worst happens, your Mercedes-Benz is designed to shield you.

The entire passenger compartment is built as a sturdy "safety zone." Doors are designed to stay closed on impact. The front and rear sections of the car are engineered to crumple in a violent crash at a controlled rate, absorbing shock and reducing the threat of serious injury.

And there's more. Construction of every Mercedes-Benz begins in a shower of sparks. Where conventional cars use bolts to tie body and chassis together, Mercedes-Benz uses thousands of welds to create a single unit of immense strength. After 50,000 miles or so, you may begin to wonder if your 250 will ever rattle.

More hidden value

Every car gets 20 more pounds of primer and paint. Even the insides of the hub caps are coated. As a final flourish in its armament against corrosion, each car gets a 24-pound factory slathering of undercoating.

The six-cylinder, overhead cam engine of every 250 is bench tested before installation, for more than 60 minutes. A hint of trouble in this gruelling test and the engine is torn down and rebuilt. Mercedes-Benz finds the lemons—not you.

Revealing showroom tests

Run a finger along the body of the 250. No "orange peel" texture. Slide in and open the glove compartment. Fully trimmed. Close the car door. Ka-chunk.

Now flex your back. This is no marshmallow seat. It supports you, mile after mile. It should: it was designed with the guidance of orthopedic physicians.

Crank the window and fiddle with some knobs. "Everything worked with delightful precision, eliciting the same sort of satisfaction that comes when the shutter mechanism crackles shut on a good reflex camera," reported Car and Driver's expert.

Over-engineered? By conventional standards, emphatically so. But Mercedes-Benz does not make conventional cars—and never will.

12-page brochure

Of course, the quickest way to verify the 250's virtues, both visible and invisible, is simply to test-drive it. Just ask for the keys.

Other Mercedes-Benz models to ponder:

Here's How to Beat Potato Scab Disease

By JACK BEASTALL

There is no disputing the value of fresh home-grown vegetables in the daily diet, but to produce such vegetables in the confines of a city lot vegetable patch is not as simple as first appears.

For success, and control of harmful soil insects and diseases, rotation of crops plays an important part.

Jack

It has been simplified for the home gardener by grouping commonly grown vegetables according to type of soil they prefer, then dividing the vegetable plot into three or four sections, and using a different section each year for a given group.

Theroetically, this is a sound practice, but we soon realize that a gap exists between theory and practice.

As an example we can use the cabbage family and the potato.

These two crops require diametrically opposite soil conditions if the cabbage group (known as brassicas) is to avoid club-root and the potatoes be free of scab.

Both these diseases are soil-borne fungi. Club-root fungus thrives and increases in an acid soil, while potato scab fungus thrives in an alkaline soil.

In a home garden vegetable plot with a total area of some 200 or so square feet it is impossible to change a portion equal to one-third the total from acid to alkaline in order to succeed with potatoes one year and cabbage the next.

While it may be possible to make an appreciable change in soil reaction over a period of three years, such a change is not feasible in the three weeks between using the last spring cabbage and planting main crop potato sets.

Given a large enough area in which to grow vegetables it is possible to work out a rotation schedule that would prove satisfactory, but when the plot is small it is better to forego one or the other of these particular vegetables.

Although some form of brassica is essential to a balanced diet and over-all health of the family, only one plant a week is needed, and any excess over immediate needs cannot be put in storage for more than a few weeks.

Tips For Home Gardeners

Potatoes are also essential to health and the crop stores well for use over an extended period.

Where flavor of home-grown potatoes is appreciated it would be wise to concentrate on producing at least part of the family's needs and purchase the brassica supplies from the market.

The main problem in the home garden is this potato scab disease, which can be kept under control if the home gardener maintains correct soil conditions.

When asked what is the cause of scab in the home garden, I instinctively blame wood ash, and this has resulted in letters from gardeners who use wood ash and never have scabby potatoes.

Let me make it quite clear that particles of wood ash coming in contact with a potato tuber will not cause scab if over-all reaction of the soil does not favor scab fungus.

We noted at the beginning of this column that scab fungus thrives in an alkaline soil. Wood ash incorporated into the soil in large quantities has an alkaline reaction, therefore increases possibility of scab infection.

While the home gardener may not procure wood ash in quantity to add to his soil, he may unintentionally overload his vegetable plot with an alkaline substance.

The bonfire affects soil in two ways that favor scab fungus. First, heat consumes the humus content which in turn decreases natural acidity. Decaying vegetation in soil, or composted materials added to soil, have an acidifying effect.

Secondly, the bonfire leaves a quantity of ash which is alkaline in reaction. The two combined can reduce natural acidity by an appreciable amount. Several fires in a small area change soil from acid to alkaline and make the growing of scab-free potatoes an impossibility.

Wood ash is beneficial and humus is essential, but we must be careful what we use to supply humus when growing potatoes.

Animal manures, also soot, lime, wood ash and non-acid fertilizers have an alkaline reaction and increase incidence of scab.

•

Decomposed vegetation has an acid reaction and is the only form of humus to use, together with a potato fertilizer.

Fortunately, grass clippings in quantity, dug into the potato patch, or put into trenches now for planting next spring, will lessen the chance of scab.

Powdered sulphur at one ounce to four square yards of trench at planting time also has an acidifying effect.

These two ingredients added to soil will give the reward of a scab-free crop.

WORK FOR WEEK

By JACK BEASTALL

In gardens not suited for fall sowing of sweet peas, the seed may be sown now in peat pots and kept over winter in coldframe for early April planting out. The same applies to early green peas.

Late blooming chrysanthemums may be lifted and potted to give flowers if kept in a light, cool porch, sunroom or greenhouse.

Search for slugs in and around coldframes, under stones on rock banks and similar hideaways. Our friends the garden snakes are now affected by cool weather and not actively controlling slugs.

THIS IS HOW YOUR PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM IS FINANCED

YOUR PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT REPORTS TO YOU

on the Annual Financing of your Public School System

PRESENT FISCAL YEAR

Where the money comes from

Provincial personal and corporate income taxes	$116,600,000
Provincial sales tax	11,700,000
Provincial natural resource revenues to payment of annual Home-owner Grants to reduce the taxes on individual home-owners of the property tax levies by school districts	41,000,000
Federal contribution to construction of public school vocational training units from Federal personal income tax collected from British Columbia taxpayers	4,500,000
Total estimated Provincial revenues to financing of our public schools	$173,800,000
Property-owner contributions by local school taxes to support our public schools
– paid by business and industry	98,200,000
– paid by residential property-owners	25,700,000

Where the money goes

School district share of teachers superannuation paid by the Provincial Government	5,400,000
Free textbooks provided by Provincial Government	1,400,000
Provincial Government Home-owner Grant payments to resident home-owners to reduce the amount of local school property taxes	41,000,000
Total Provincial Government payments for the operation of our public schools	$173,800,000
Portion of public school costs raised by local property taxes paid by business, industrial and residential property owners	123,900,000
Total Cost of operating our public schools	$297,700,000

Thus, home-owners only pay this year, $25,700,000 out of a total public school cost of $297,700,000 which is less than 9%

The Government of British Columbia raises and advances all the money for approved capital school building costs throughout the Province and repays 50% to 90% of capital costs in accordance with assessment values.

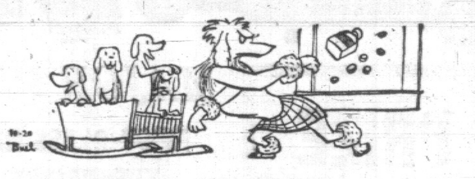
The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

Please tell your readers to beware of the pill. It doesn't work! At least not on poodles. Last year I gave some of these pills to keep my poodle safe during her first heat. Well, in about 2½ months she had a litter of four puppies! I thought there was some mistake so this time when she came in heat I doubled the dose just to be sure we were safe. I can tell quite plainly now she is pregnant again. — F.F.

DEAR F.F.: Obviously it's a mistake to count on chlorophyl pills (I assume that's what you were using) for anything but help in controlling the odor which attracts the male. As observed, this pill does not reduce desire, capabilities, nor consequences.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: How much castor oil should we use to prevent rickets in a two-month-old Siamese kitten?—B.C.

DEAR B.D.: I hope you're not using any. The result produced by the administration of castor oil have nothing to do with preventing rickets. Perhaps you really meant cod-liver oil? And even cod-liver oil is not the best method of preventing rickets in the Siamese kitten. Better is the addition of a calcium supplement. If raw meat is a substantial part of the diet, a calcium supplement such as calcium carbonate — or, preferably, a calcium product recommended by your veterinarian — should be fed at the rate of one half of one per cent of the total meat consumed.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can you help us decide if our cat, Blackie is sick or just nuts? Most of the time he acts normal, or seems to. Then all at once, and for no apparent reason, his tail fluffs up, his ears go back, he lets out this peculiar cry and he's off at supersonic speeds. He tears madly about at such a rate that his controls frequently don't work and he crashes into things. A few minutes later, he calms down and starts washing himself like mad. But his eyes still stay big. These attacks or whatever they are happen once every few days. What could be causing him to act this way? — M.Q.

DEAR M.Q.: Blackie's battle cry and related behavior may be related to activity of the sex hormones, though you didn't mention whether or not he was loaded or lacking in this department. He might even have a "shook" psyche as a result of past experience or conditions. Physical disease problems related to nervous irritability range from B-complex deficiency to fleas or tapeworm infestation. Blackie better be checked over by the doctor to determine if his tantrum-type tours are treatable.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I want some different kind of pet and I've always loved birds. It may seem strange to some, but I'm thinking of getting a vulure. Can you tell me if they can be bought as a pet? They are related to the eagle, you know. — F.A.

DEAR F.A.: A vulture seems a strange pet to me, too. But they are available from one pet farm in the U.S. (Better get an opinion from your fish and game official regarding the legality of keeping such a pet.) Just because the vulture is related to the eagle, he isn't necessarily an ideal pet. The main advantage to keeping skin head is that he would be easier to feed.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because our children all love animals and are very good to them, I can't feel the family is responsible, but we've had an awful time with runaways at our house. Three years ago, it was our dog. He ran away and we never saw him again. Then, just last year, it was our cat who ran out in the street and was killed by a car. And this spring our parakeet flew out the window never to return. The final straw was our box turtle, Tank. He burrowed under the fence and got away just last month. Can you suggest a pet my children can keep track of? — A.D.

DEAR A.D.: Have you considered finny friends? Fish have their problems, of course. But fish tanked up at home seldom wander far afield.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Napoleon Tried to Capture Canada

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

Last Wednesday's story mentioned Prime Minister Trudeau's objections to the activities of Philippe Rossillon in Canada, and some efforts France made to regain Canada after 1763. It was on November 9, 1799, that Napoleon seized power in France, and one of his plans was to recapture Canada. He began working on it right away by getting Spain to return the territory known as "Louisiana" which was a vast area west of the Mississippi. France had given it to Spain in 1763 rather than have it go to Britain.

Napoleon then sent a large army and naval force to the island of Haiti in the West Indies. This was to be the base for an attack on Canada by travelling up the Mississippi River. The plan was not unlike Winston Churchill's for driving the Germans from France in the Second World War. Churchill wanted the Allies to strike through "the soft underbelly of Europe" from the Mediterranean. Current history indicates that this plan might have been better than going through Normandy.

Napoleon's plan to recapture Canada failed because the Haitian people and the mosquitoes killed 60,000 soldiers in two years. Britain also realized what was going on and moved a strong naval force into the West Indies to prevent the French army from landing at the mouth of the Mississippi.

When Britain and France signed the brief armistice of Amiens in 1803 Napoleon decided to give up the plan to recapture Canada and sold "Louisiana" to the U.S.A. for $27,000,000. The territory extended from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains.

Other events on Nov. 9:

1613—Captain Argall from Virginia destroyed French settlements at Port Royal and along the St. Croix River.

1789 — Britain established grants to United Empire Loyalists who had emigrated to Canada.

1943—Canada signed

1943—Canada signed UNRRA agreement.

Rethink Church Aims Anglican Head Urges

WINNIPEG (CP) — Archbishop H. H. Clarke, the Anglican primate of Canada, said Thursday clergymen should "rethink the goals of the Christian church as revealed in the teachings of the Bible.

He told the opening session of the 71st synod of the diocese of Rupertsland:

"There are evidences that the world is tired and frightened of technological advances and wants to hold back a bit, but if we have a pause in the Christian church from fear, that is not good."

Creeds were made for man and should be liberating, not confining.

He told the 250 delegates that the clergy and laity should consult with each other to determine what jobs have not been done.

Later, a resolution expressing dissatisfaction with the planned 2-per-cent surcharge on income tax, for social services, was introduced. It asks Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Benson to "reconsider their method of increasing tax on personal income."

The resolution stated that "the burden of any general levy at a constant percentage of taxable income is relatively greater for the poor than the rich."

MEMORIAL CONCERT SET

A memorial concert to the late Dr. Healey Willan—Canada's first major composer—will be given in Christ Church Cathedral Thursday at 8 p.m.

The choirs of the cathedral and St. Barnabas' Anglican Church will combine to present a recital of his works.

Preceding the recital, there will be a film on the life and work of Dr. Healey Willan.

Orthodox Leader Chides Rome For Condemning Jacqueline

GENEVA (AP) — A leading Orthodox Church spokesman said Friday that in view of Vatican-Orthodox efforts for Christian unity the Roman Catholic Church is expected to respect the marriage of the former Jacqueline Kennedy and Aristotle Onassis.

"The validity of such a mixed marriage cannot in our understanding be based only upon the canon law of the Roman Catholic Church," said Metropolitan Meliton of Chalcedon. "Account must also be taken of its sacramental validity according to Orthodox canon law, especially when the marital demands of canon law concerning the Orthodox partner are fully in order."

The new Mrs. Onassis is a Roman Catholic. Onassis is a Greek Orthodox and has been previously married and divorced. The Roman Catholic Church does not recognize divorce.

"In the light of present Roman Catholic-Orthodox relations," the metropolitan said, "it is expected this marriage will be respected on the Roman Catholic side."

This was a reference to Orthodox-Roman Catholic moves toward Christian unity as a result of the Vatican ecumenical council which ended in 1967. Orthodox Patriarch Athenagoras and Pope Paul conferred on this in Vatican City in October, 1967, with both vowing to overcome differences between their two churches.

FIRST full-time liaison officer for the churches of Greater Victoria is Rev. Dr. Samuel Parsons, former minister of Centennial United Church and president of Victoria Council of Churches. Dr. Parsons has set up an office in the old rectory of St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, and can be reached by phone at 384-3516.

Revolt Good Says Rome

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano says the ferment inside the Roman Catholic Church—even including the revolt of priests and nuns—is good for religion.

A comment in the daily paper notes that hundreds of priests have broken away to marry, that nuns have turned against the church, that so-called "underground theology" is spreading and that churches have been occupied by protesting Catholics.

Boat Carried Gospel Around Island

Back in its home port of Victoria today is the Messenger III—a mission boat built to carry the Gospel to the remotest corners of Vancouver Island's rocky coast.

For 22 years the Messenger III has served the Shantymen's Christian Association, not only in spreading the Gospel but in performing errands of mercy.

Today the sturdy 50-foot-long craft is moored in the Inner Harbor and carries a for sale sign.

"We hate to let her go," says Percy Wills, Vancouver Island superintendent of the Shantymen's Christian Association, "but times have changed. Today many of our supplies can be delivered by air and road. Like most church missions, we need smaller, faster boats."

The Messenger III was built in Victoria in 1946 by McKay Cormack. It has a six-cylinder diesel engine, two-way radio telephone and a spacious galley, where services have often been held. There are sleeping quarters for seven.

Mission boat Messenger III will be sold.

. . . And Then He Danced All Night . . .

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, who spent a busy day answering Opposition questions in the House of Commons and speaking to university students in Kingston, Ont., still had enough energy left Friday night to make an appearance at a ball in Montreal in white tie and tails.

Mr. Trudeau arrived at the downtown Chateau Champlain Hotel twirling a white carnation in his right hand and chatted briefly in the hotel foyer with a group of admiring young girls who had been awaiting his arrival while debutantes were being presented upstairs to Governor-General and Mrs. Michener.

The prime minister then joined those attending the Bal des Petits Souliers and was seen in the company of a young woman whose identity is not yet known.

Earlier in the evening, he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Queen's University in Kingston and later engaged in an hour-long question-and-answer period with some 1,500 students in a "bear pit" confrontation at Grant Hall.

Mr. Trudeau is to address a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel Sunday night. The dinner is being planned by the Quebec chapter of the Canadian Liberal Federation.

Paris Talk Opening Predicted

PARIS (AP) — Hanoi's rejection of a new peace talks formula proposed by South Vietnam posed more problems for the United States, but one neutral Western diplomat today predicted a breakthrough in "a matter of days."

The tangle centres around how President Nguyen Van Thieu's Saigon government and its guerrilla enemy, the Viet Cong, will be represented.

Thieu insists he will not join talks where the National Liberation Front, the Viet Cong's political arm, has an independent staus.

He proposed Friday that there be just two sides to the talks, anti-Communist allied side, led by Saigon, and a Communist delegation headed by Hanoi with the Viet Cong playing a subsidiary role.

In Saigon, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met with Thieu today for the first time since Oct. 31 when President Johnson announced the bombing halt, the U.S. embassy announced.

Informed sources said the meeting was a continuation of Washington's efforts to get Thieu to join the talks with the NLF.

Earlier, in Paris, as members of the U.S. delegation consulted with Washington and the American embassy in South Vietnam, Xuan Thuy, Hanoi's chief negotiator, rejected Thieu's plan.

U.K.-RHODESIAN GAP NARROWED BY TALKS

SALISBURY (Reuters) — British envoy George Thomson said today Britain and Rhodesia have narrowed the gap dividing them over the breakaway colony's seizure of independence.

But the gap was still a deep one, he told a news conference before leaving the Rhodesian capital to confer with African Commonwealth leaders on his talks here with Premier Ian Smith.

Earlier, a surprise joint announcement said the Thomson-Smith talks would be resumed in Salisbury next week after Thomson visited the African leaders.

Document Check Tightly Guarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tight security is in effect today at an army hut where a team of investigators next week will start sifting through the records of the troubled Commonwealth group of companies.

Five companies for which Commonwealth Trust Co. acts as fiscal agent had assets frozen by court order Wednesday and records of another 30 related firms have been seized by police.

The documents are piled in the hut awaiting the start of checks by a 10-man team of RCMP commercial fraud investigators and a specially-recruited team of chartered accountants.

Team members will not be allowed to enter the Jericho military compound until they have been checked by RCMP. The investigation was ordered by the British Columbia attorney-general's department.

It's not known how long the document check will take and A. D. Peter Stanley, court-appointed receiver for the companies, said he does not know what the investigation will uncover. See story Page 7.

Slight Damage Reported

By The Associated Press

An earthquake struck a broad area of the United States today, rolling across the Midwest and South, rocking millions of persons and countless buildings. There were no immediate reports of casualties or major damage.

A mild tremor was felt in several parts of Toronto and Hamilton at the same time the shocks were noted in the U.S. No damage was reported.

The National Earthquake Centre in Washington placed the centre of the quake near New Madrid, Mo.—the heart of a disastrous tremor in 1811. The fault follows the path of the Mississippi River valley.

First reports put the earthquake at 5.5 on the Richter scale, just under the usual damage point of 6. The 1811 quake was measured at about 8 on the scale.

The tremor was felt in Arkansas, Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, Georgia, Kentucky, West Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, Alabama, and Wisconsin, early reports said.

Time-Bomb Problems Tick in Canada: PM

(Special to the Times)

KINGSTON, Ont. — The chance of a new American civil war overflowing into Canada is a bigger menace than happenings over the Berlin Wall.

He said Canada has the same time-bomb problems ticking in its society — the underprivileged and the discriminated against — as in the U.S.

"I personally happen to believe these sources of disturbance are areas which we should fear and seek to correct with as great urgency as perhaps anything that is happening in Europe," he stated.

And the prime minister told a jam-packed audience in a question-and-answer session — "in my scale of values, I am perhaps less worried now about what might happen over the Berlin Wall and what might happen in Chicago, New York and perhaps in our own big cities in Canada."

Trudeau passed up making a speech in favor of the question confrontation with the students while here to receive an honorary degree.

It was his first such session at a university since the election-part of his campaign for direct communication and feedback from the people.

Standing Ovation

He and his party were ready for anything, but he encountered no demonstrators and got a standing ovation from the young audience.

Surprisingly, there were no questions about Biafra or Vietnam — all in the hour-long exchange were directly Canadian oriented.

They ranged from bilingualism to taxation — and the prime minister gave a hint that there could be a form of capital gains tax in next spring's tax-reform measures.

Yarrows Response 'Pleasant Surprise'

A Community Chest official said Friday Yarrows Ltd. employees have donated more than $3,900 to the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal drive, and more donations are expected from the company.

"This has to be one of the most pleasant surprises of the campaign," said Bill Patton of the Chest office. "Considering the shortage of work at Yarrows this year, the employee response to the appeal is great."

He added that heavy returns from the residential division canvass gave the campaign a big boost this week.

The residential division, which is expected to account for $128,000 of the United Appeal's $655,000 objective, has collected $88,082 of its goal.

A total of $453,166, or 69.2 per cent of the goal, has now been raised and appeal officials hope the target will be reached "within two or three weeks."

Czechs Defy Reprisals By Soviet

PRAGUE (AP) — Despite the threats of reprisals, Prague students said today they plan another anti-Soviet demonstration Nov. 17 which could lead to "a general student strike."

Student leaders at Prague University issued an appeal for mass participation, and called a meeting of student strike committees next Tuesday to map strategy.

The announcement came as Czechoslovakia's Communist party leadership said it would use "all legal means to ensure that peace and order are preserved" and discussed possible new press curbs to satisfy the Kremlin.

Nixon Plots Bigger Role For Running Mate Agnew

Times News Service

KEY BISCAYN, Fla. — President-elect Richard M. Nixon, with a fresh promise of help from Hubert H. Humphrey, started meetings with his running mate today to plot the course of the United States for the next four years.

Following a morning meeting with vice-president-elect Spiro T. Agnew, Nixon announced a materially expanded role in government for his running mate.

Nixon announced the beefing up of the vice-presidential role at a news conference here after he and Agnew had spent about 90 minutes in a breakfast meeting.

The Maryland governor will represent the president-elect at the Dec. 3 Republican governor's conference in Palm Springs, Calif. Nixon said he then planned to appear before the governors on the last day of the meeting, expected to be Dec. 5.

Nixon did not go into detail about how he intends to expand the vice-presidency, but he said it would involve "new duties beyond what any vice-president has ever assumed."

Nixon greeted Humphrey in what, to many of those present, represented an emotional reunion between two compaign opponents now determined to hide their respective hurts and joys in the interests of proclaiming national unity.

Referring to Nixon, Humphrey said: "He's going to be our president, and I'm going to be one of his fellow citizens. And I'm going to want his presidency to be an effective presidency beacuse as he succeeds, we all succeed."

The president-elect said that in the next four years he will want to call upon Humphrey "for his counsel and his assistance, particularly in matters of foreign policy."

Arthur Mayse

A sheep-rancher can dip his flock against mites and foot-rot, and the anxieties of lambing time are seasonal. But he has one enemy that may strike at any time, and when it does, the damage is not easily mended.

This is the sheep-running dog.

It may be a vicious and experienced killer, or it may be scarcely more than a pup in frolicsome mood. In either case, what a dog can do to a bunch of woolies is sheer murder.

This even if it doesn't grab and maul. Sheep are easily frightened. They bunch and run. By late fall, the ewes are heavy with young. In the natural course of things their lambs will be born in the winter months. Let dogs harry them into panic flight and they may miscarry. Or, even worse, their lambs may become twisted, a mischance that means loss of valuable stock in labor.

The loss to the rancher is more than financial. I never yet met a sheepman who didn't have a shepherd's feeling for his flock.

Once in a summer-dry creekbed I happened on the aftermath of a dog-raid. Close to 20 sheep had died there, close-packed under a cutbank. Some were mauled and torn; others hadn't a mark on them. They had succumbed to terror, shock and suffocation.

The rancher, a calm and friendly man, stood looking at the mess. His eyes were wet, he held a rifle in a white-knuckled grip, and it would have gone hard with any dog that poked its nose from cover.

★

The renegades, however, were hours gone, and we heard later that the unlicensed pair were shot while chasing a deer in the upriver woods.

Sheep and deer-running strays give Fish and Wild Life officers more tribulation than any other creature — man included — on this Island.

"They're our worse problem," he told me. "Name an area, and we've got dog trouble in it. Dogs cause far more grief than any cougar."

Game wardens get used to the early-morning sight of a weary dog, or a couple of dogs, mooching along the highway with tongues hanging out.

No wonder they're tired. They've made a night of it — put a deer into a lake or got in among somebody's sheep. For lack of direct evidence, they escape the fate that would be theirs had they been caught in the act.

This is to be shot out of hand.

I asked Bob Sinclair, a veteran of his service and of the old B.C. Provincial Police, if he knew any less-lethal cure for such dogs.

"Just one," he said. "For the owners to get off their buts, licence their dogs, and keep 'em under control."

★

In theory at least, the game-runner is doomed under the Game Protection Act, and the sheep-runner (who may be the same dog at another sport) by the Sheep Protection Act.

The latter also provides compensation for sheep mauled by dogs, from a fund financed by the dog tax in unorganized areas. Payment is only made in the case of attack by a dog or dogs that can't be identified. If the owner is known, the rancher's only course is to seek recompense from him in or out of court.

A department of agriculture spokesman says dog-trouble has multiplied in recent years, and that the Metchosin-Sooke area is the hot-spot of the province.

I asked him about dog-packs. As many as four sheep-runners have taken part in some raids reported, but the chasing of sheep-bands is much more often the work of two dogs or a single foot-loose canine.

The worst traitor of all is the rare sheep dog who is a model of virtue while working for his master, but who whips over the hill at night to beat up a neighbor's ewes.

The cougar is no friend to the sheepman, either. But the big cats will snatch one wool-bearer for food, whereas man's best friend, when once he acquires a taste for wool, can be a most unholy terror.

KNOTTED MASS of kelp is held dripping wet and worth money to members of Mount View senior secondary school band. From left, Marilyn Shaw, 17; band president Susan Stancombe, 16; Rick Carswell, 17, and Jim Harvey, 17, will collect seaweed Sunday for sale as fertilizer. Profits from sale will help finance band tour of northern British Columbia in spring and anyone wanting fertilizer should call 479-4537 or 479-3119. Trudeau Casts Eye On 'Republic' Idea

By JOHN SLINGER

Ottawa-watcher, columnist and author Peter C. Newman said today Prime Minister Trudeau may become the first president of Canada.

Because of the prime minister's concern with government efficiency, Mr. Newman says he thinks Mr. Trudeau "Sees the only hope of reform in a fundamental shift to a completely new system."

In an interview at the Empress Hotel, Mr. Newman, whose new book about the Pearson government, The Distemper of Our Times, is causing palpitations in Ottawa, was concerned that his ideas about Canada's move towards a republic be put in context.

He said he is aware that such an idea might find a prickly bed in Victoria.

However, "I feel that most Canadians regard the monarchy as irrelevant. I don't think anybody is wildly against it.

"But it is something that has very little to do with our way of life."

In town for an autograph session at Eaton's this afternoon, Mr. Newman stresses that the government change is not yet consciously thought out on Mr. Trudeau's part, "nor would it be an intended slight to the monarchy."

He said it is his "strong impression" that Mr. Trudeau will only be able to maintain his high reputation in Ottawa "by drastically changing the system."

BEST FEATURES OF BOTH

Indications of the move are the prime minister's staff of 28.

"In many ways it resembles a kind of miniature, northern version of Washington's White House staff."

And he adds that "by rationing his ministers during parliamentary question periods," Mr. Trudeau is working towards the congressional system which does not require the executive to always sit with the assembly.

"It may be that we will end up with the best features of both the parliamentary and the congressional systems, a step that would be firmly within the Canadian political tradition."

To leave the future fog a moment, how about the perils of Mr. Pearson as set out in the new book?

Without naming names, Mr. Pearson two days ago referred publicly to "those lucrative key-hole, strip-tease contributions, if not to the history, at least to the gossip of our times."

He said they relied on "second-hand pulsations from the psychiatrists couch."

Mr. Newman counters that Distemper is not a history, it is journalism.

There now is a need to record, soon after an event occurs, a close-hand account detailing the event giving some impression of its first effects.

When this account is later added to official documents, "it will be history."

The reason for this is that Distemper, in an appendix, includes what purport to be copies of official documents pertaining to the various crises of the Pearson years.

'BEYOND DISPUTE'

"The thing that pleases me," he said, is that no one is questioning the authenticity of the documents — "which is beyond dispute."

Mr. Newman said he has three primary sources: his own observations of what goes on, tape-recorded off-the-record interviews with the principals in any crisis and a "whole group of politicians."

These politicians, "who believe that the whole story should be told," keep diaries for the columnist, he said. The diaries were needed, because with so much going on, "politicians have very short memories."

FORMER resident of Victoria who visited friends here last week, Thomas George Clinton, 45, was killed this week in a traffic accident in Toronto. He was branch manager of a life insurance company here and previous to that with the provincial police. He was transferred to Toronto six years ago.

Ask The Times

Q. I have heard John Lennon (of the Beatles) wrote some books. Is this true? Could you tell me where to write to the Beatles?—M.R.

A. John Lennon wrote two books—John Lennon in His Own Write, 1964, and A Spaniard In The Works, 1965. All members of the Beatles singing group may be located care of Nems Enterprises Ltd., Argyll St., London, W 1, England.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Sniper's Bullet Beat the Clock And Spurred a Search

By ED GOULD

It was one of life's ironies that Private J. L. Price was the last Canadian soldier to be killed in battle in the First World War.

It seems ironic too that the little white cross that marked his grave should be the subject of a search on Salt Spring Island, thousands of miles from Havre, France, 50 years later.

The cross was replaced with a permanent monument and sent to the soldier's parents who once lived on St. Mary Lake near Ganges.

They left it behind in a barn when they moved away years ago. Ken Byron, a Canadian soldier who now owns the property, recalled seeing the cross there but did not realize its significance until reading about it in the Royal Canadian Legion magazine.

Colonel Strome Galloway, now serving in Germany, explained in a letter to the magazine that a military cemetery near Mons, France, contains a permanent monument to the first and last soldiers to die in First World War conflict.

Lt. Martin Vease, VC, died Aug. 23, 1914, and Private Price was gunned down by a German sniper outside Havre, France at 10:58 a.m. Nov. 11, 1918.

Mr. Byron is away from his Salt Spring home most of the time and has reported repeated vandalism to his house and outbuildings. When he checked the barn the cross was missing. The RCMP think children are to blame.

★

The only real clue to the whereabouts of the cross came last week when Duncan Gurton of Sidney reported he found the cross last year on his summer property next door to Byrons'.

"Having no knowledge of its prupose, I placed it in a tree to keep it clear of the ground," he said.

However, the RCMP have since searched both properties without success.

The local Legion branch would like to recover the original cross of the young soldier who died two minutes before the armistice was signed and the First World War ended.

Five MLAs May Seek Leadership of NDP

Rookie Member First in Ring?

But, says Vancouver-Burrard MLA Tom Berger, after 12 years of Strachan leadership it would be "inappropriate" to announce a candidacy so soon after Mr. Strachan's Friday announcement that he will step down in April.

Besides Mr. Berger, the other likely candidates at the April 11 leadership convention in Vancouver are David Stupich, Nanaimo; Norman Levi, Vancouver South; David Barrett, Coquitlam, and Robert Williams, Vancouver East.

Only Mr. Levi, 41, has so far indicated he may seek the post. A social worker, he won his seat in a byelection last May.

ALL PROFESSIONAL MEN

Mr. Strachan said he was leaving to make way for a younger man and all five possible candidates are younger than the 54-year-old leader.

Also, by contrast, they are all professional men. Mr. Strachan, a carpenter, has had a strong labor-union orientation.

Mr. Berger, 35 and a lawyer, lost the leadership to Mr. Strachan by a two-to-one margin in 1967. He said he will announce his intentions next week.

Asked to comment on Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's statement that NDP expectations of victory in the next election are "pipedreams," Mr. Berger said Mr. Peterson is "whistling past the graveyard of the Social Credit regime."

He said the NDP now has 16 seats and "I'm firmly convinced we can win 16 more in this province—and that will give us the majority."

SPRING ELECTION

The party "has to go ahead on the assumption that there will be a spring election," he said. It was impossible to predict what Mr. Bennett might do.

So the April convention must not only produce a leader, it must generate enough excitement to increase and strengthen party ranks, Mr. Berger said.

Mr. Stupich, caucus chairman, said he will not make any announcement before next weekend's provincial council meeting in Vancouver.

He said he has not yet made a decision, it is too early. A 47-year-old chartered accountant, Mr. Stupich is oldest of the five.

Of Mr. Peterson's statement, Mr. Stupich said the attorney-general "knows his own party is in trouble" and is trying to build its flagging spirit.

'GOOD POSITION'

As indications of the discontent within Premier Bennett's cabinet, Mr. Stupich cited the disenchantment of former highways minister Phil Gagliardi—now minister without portfolio—and the departure of former attorney-general Robert Bonner.

"We're in a good position to form the government," he said.

Mr. Williams, a town planner, and Mr. Barrett, a social worker, could not be reached for comment, but Mr. Barrett has said he will consider his chances.

Mr. Berger said there had been no pressure from within the NDP caucus for the resignation of Mr. Strachan.

In making his announcement, Mr. Strachan said: "The New Democratic Party is very close to electoral victory and I feel that a younger man should be in the position to chart the course and carry the load of leadership through 20 years of government."

Alex Macdonald, a 50-year-old lawyer representing Vancouver East, has been mentioned as a candidate. The party's deputy leader, he said today he will have "no comment for another day or so."

'Madhouse' Start To Weekend

But if they were confused, a hapless dispatcher was even more so, and things went from bad to worse.

●

Due to heavy traffic, one bus didn't make it and wound up on the 7 p.m. sailing.

None of them made it.

An accident on the Oak Street Bridge tied up traffic so badly the police couldn't even get in to clear it.

The three buses which should have been on the 7 p.m. ferry — wound up on the 8 p.m. boat which subsequently made a stop at Otter Bay on Mayne Island. The buses arrived in Victoria at 10:55, along with two others that left at 7:05 from Vancouver for the 8 o'clock sailing.

Which all combined to send two buses into Victoria at 8:15, one at 9:45 and five at 10:55.

The dispatcher, who wishes to remain anonymous, said "people were getting more and more confused.

"I was trying to tell them what was going on, talk to Swartz Bay and Vancouver all at the same time.

City Psychiatrist Dies Suddenly at 62

DR. DOUGLAS ALCORN

Dr. Douglas Earl Alcorn, well-known city psychiatrist and surgeon, died in the Veterans' Hospital early today after being taken suddenly ill at his home at 2620 Lansdowne.

Dr. Alcorn, who was 62, gave generously of his services to many organizations, including Greater Victoria Alcoholic Association, and frequently presented medical and psychiatric reports in the law courts.

A deeply religious man, he was a leading member of the Unitarian Church of Victoria and spoke there recently on Cosmic Consciousness.

Born in Victoria, Dr. Alcorn was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Alcorn who came here from Fernie around 1900. He graduated in medicine at McGill University and subsequently trained at Guy's Hospital, London, England, and at hospitals in New York and Boston.

In 1942 at Christ Church Cathedral, Dr. Alcorn was married to Doreen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Lougheed of Victoria, who survives him.

"He was a good friend to many people in this city," said Rev. Harold T. Allen.

CENTRE IN SAANICH OPENS DEC. 8

Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre will be officially opened by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson on Friday, Dec. 8 at 2:30 p.m.

The $139,000 building on Hampton Road at Tillicum will be completed a few days before the opening, Mayor Hugh Stephen said Friday.

Planning and construction of the centre were guided by a joint committee of council and citizens under the chairmanship of Ald. Edith Gunning.

The centre will be available to Victoria Silver Threads and for various community events.

Police Again Seeking Mentally Ill Youth

A 14-year-old youth once described by a psychiatrist as mentally ill and capable of murder escaped from Brannan Lake school near Nanaimo Thursday night, police said Friday.

The youth, who was accompanied by a 15-year-old in the escape, had previously vanished from the institution in July but was recaptured.

Disturbance Draws Crowd

A crowd of 150 was attracted by the shouts and abusive language hurled at police officers by two men outside the Government Street liquor store Friday.

Donald W. Ofstie, 21, of 2537 Prior Street, and Bert Sinclair, 25, of 1579 Hillside, pleaded guilty before Magistrate Harold Alder in court today to causing a disturbance.

They were each fined $25.

"I don't see why the public has to put up with this—put up with drunken louts," he said. "If they want to use abusive language they can do so on their own premises."

$52 Million Tourist Season

Victoria's tourist season this year was as successful as it's ever been with a dollar turnover of $52 million.

"It could be a 10-per-cent increase," Michael Heppell, director of the Victoria Visitors Bureau, said today. "We don't know yet — it isn't the end of the year yet."

By PETE LOUDON

"A better 'ole" than the sandbagged trenches of Flanders was the make-believe fortification (above) at the corner of Fort and Government Streets on Nov. 11, 1918.

The German surrender found the city in the midst of a Victory Bond drive and the five soldiers who took turns as salesmen were all wounded vets.

They wore blue hospital arm bands and newly issued overseas service badges but no medals had yet been issued.

Curious Victorians were given a tour of the dug-out, shown a machine-gun, given a talk about how men died overseas. Then they were asked to sign on the dotted line.

Sales dropped off when word arrived of the armistice — there was no longer a need to "Keep the Hun on the run."

The war to end all wars was over, peace and prosperity stretched ahead forever and ever — or at least for 21 years, when the sad process was repeated.

Ex-servicemen of two wars and the Korean conflict will join in remembrance services here Monday at 11 a.m. at Victoria Centoaph and at the war memorials at Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Langford and Sidney.
